Why is sex so important? It's a crying shame that the woman who has given the best years of her life, her "Use Late For Me" didn't find my husband before I did. She would have been the perfect mate for by Round-The-Clock Romeo. Sex would have come first throbbing hours after her face lift, pneumonia, hives, earache, backache and bunions. Sex would have also solved all her emotional problems and taken her mind off her financial problems — if she didn't get pregnant again, that is.

I am glad you printed that woman's letter because it was comforting to know that there were men in this world are getting a little real because I am — EXHAUSTED AND FED UP IN MEXICO CITY.

DEAR EX AND FED; Feast or famine. My tristе, Senora. Que lastima!

Food Columnist Says Shoppers Need Code Breaking Skills

EDMONTON (CP) — Today's shoppers need the code-breaking skills of secret agent 007 if they want to find fresh food on the supermarket shelves.

But if you haven't the detective skills of a combined Charlie Chan and James Bond —to say nothing of the memory bank of a computer —you may want to join a campaign to get foodstuffs marked in ordinary language so you know what you buy has not gone stale on the shelf.

She found vacuum-packed bologna in a large meat department that was two weeks old—at least.

"At least," she wrote in a column, "because I don't know how long the store had had it before it was packaged and offered for sale."

But she was lucky, because she was able to de-code that item.

But that doesn't hold good for all packaged meats. Some are coded at the factory with a number code printed along the top seam, such as 182.

One adds the first and last figures to get the month, she found out. The middle number is the day of the month it was packaged. In that code, it means it was packed March 9.

"Codes get worse than that," she warned. On a brand of packaged sausages she found one that was meaningless to herself and three clerks.

The clerks don't necessarily know the codes, either, she found out. In many cases, shelves are stocked and serviced by brokers' agents who are supposed to "pull" outdated stock.

Another type of code she found was used on unfrozen pizzas. These are stamped in purple ink on the bottom of the package. Letters of the alphabet are used for the month and numbers for the day. O015 is March 25.

Fresh meats are also dated, sometimes in special store codes. One large grocery chain uses it plainly: May 8. But others use a small number to indicate the day: 1 for Monday, 2 for Tuesday, etc.

"O301 was March 1. The first two numbers were the month and the last two numbers were the date."

She found bacon was coded with perforated numbers along one edge. One brand used a similar code to the weiners? O305 is March 6.

But another brand was 1181. For that one, add the first and last numbers to get the month, which is February. The middle two numbers are the date.

Bacon has a three-to-four week life in a meat cooler. Mrs. Buck found one whose code meant it had only two more days to go.

These codes tell when the product was packed or when it reached the store shelf. But there are other codes.

For example, milk is marked with an expiry date. However, it's an embossed number along the top seam of the waxboard carton. You may need to get it under a strong light to read it.

If the embossed number is a 20, that means it expires on the 20th of the month. So don't buy it on the 19th unless you can use it right away.

Baked goods were mostly open-dated—May 10, for example—with the date they were baked.

Bread, however, came marked with little colored discs in the stores where she shopped, and the colors of the plastic tie or disc were rotated and never the same two weeks in a row.

Agents check their stocks regularly, she discovered, but suggested housewives should acquaint themselves with the codes.

Many City Folk Spend Vacation on A Farm

By DORIS CLARK

It seems that more and more city folk want to spend their vacation on a farm. Why? For some, it's nostalgia. Either they grew up on a farm or their childhood holidays were spent with country cousins. Many want a change of pace away from crowds and noise, where they can find relaxation. Even crowded camping grounds seem like going from the frying pan into the fire. They would rather light on the back 40 of some farm.

Then there are those who want something new and different, and the idea of being on a real honest-to-goodness farm with cows and chickens and a barn and hay and the whole bit appeals to them. Not to mention the lure of home baking and garden vegetables from a friendly host.

There are farms across Canada doing this now, and a special section of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture which has built up quite a list. Write to me for more details.

Dear Doris: My husband has been in a rut for 20 years. Now he works on freight and is stationed many miles north of here. He will not let me go there to live as we have a nice house where we are.

He used to stay at the hotel but now he has furnished an apartment for a divorcee there with a girl of 17 and moved in as a boarder. He tells me there is nothing in their friendship.

But he never comes home, except to give me money.

He won't let her go. He tells me he loves me. Should I wait and see? It has been going on for almost two years. — Second Best

Dear Second Best: Two years is long enough — too long! If you care about your marriage, give him an ultimatum.

Either he moves into a rooming house for men only, or you pack the house and move to where he is. He can't expect you to keep the home fires burning for a wanderer who never warms himself at your hearth.

There is a time for waiting and a time for action. Now is the time for action.

Dear Doris: What can a person do with a teen-ager who is taking drugs, admits that he is taking them, and has no interest in kicking the habit? — Stymied

Dear Stymied: Get at the cause. Drug abusers are young people who are frustrated or in rebellion, because of lacks in their home background or in their life-status: failure at school or work. Give the youngster the fulfillment he is desperate for, and drugs will no longer hold him.

One psychiatrist told me that a young patient eventually told him that if he would agree to take the place of the boy's father (who had died) he would be willing to go off drugs.

He explained that he would feel he was no longer afraid to grow up. Then the psychiatrist felt he was able to do, to the extent that the boy needed it.

Youngsters Develop At Own Pace

TORONTO (CP) — It sounds like every child's dream of school—no failures, no report cards and a day off classes for special effort.

But it's no dream. The school exists here in suburban Etobicoke and has done for the last two years.

Brseburn public school was built as the borough's first "flexible" school aimed at helping youngsters develop at their own pace with pride and self-confidence.

The results so far: a rapidly rising average intelligence quotient based on a borough-wide testing, barely a hint of vandalism and a file of good comments from the parents.

"I have only one complaint," one father wrote. "I've connived for 15 years to foil the school system so my children aren't ruined by a few knuckle-rapping old school teachers. Now you've succeeded. I can't understand my motives for burning down your school house."

In the first year principal David Wood, 40, wondered if the school would survive at all, but now he says "the system is working."

And that system, he says, starts with a level of trust basis. There are no secret progress reports hidden in teachers' drawers. Pupils carry their own reports and see the good and bad marks—for behavior as well as work—written down before their eyes.

Pupils who maintain a good record win a "free day" to read, draw or skate in the schoolyard.

Although none of the 525 students "fail," Mr. Wood may keep an immature or slow student back for an extra year. After the child moves to Grade 4 in a middle school in the Etobicoke system.

Braeburn itself has no grades. Six- and seven-year-olds mix in the same classroom and keep the same teachers for two years.

Then they move to one of six "houses," where eight- and 10-year-olds work together for three years under the same home-room teacher.

Such an investment in understanding should not be squandered just when it becomes useful.

Kitchen Tested Recipes
Date Squares Add to Cookie Display

By MARY MOORE

Today's recipe is about 70 years old and is a beauty. It is a square and calls for dates which provide the sugar content. It comes from Iris Gillespie's mother's recipe file.

My mind is on the showers and receptions that will be held for brides and this little number will be added to it to cook your cookie display.

BRIDE'S DATE SQUARES
(10 x 9" pan)

Base:

½ cup butter
1 cup sifted pastry flour
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt

Filling:

2 large eggs
1 cup pitted cooking dates, chopped small (packed)
½ cup coconut, flaked or desiccated
2 tbsps. flour
1 tsp. baking powder

Icing:

1 tbsp. butter
2 cups icing sugar (measured directly from box)
2 tbsps. milk

To make Base cream together butter, flour and salt until thoroughly blended. Press evenly into bottom of 9 x 9" pan.

To make Filling beat eggs very well and add all remaining filling ingredients and beat until thoroughly blended and foamy. Pour evenly over base, levelling it with a fork. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. at centre of oven for 25-30 min. or until evenly deep gold all over top. Cool in pan.

When cooled down to room temperature cover with Icing made by beating together all icing ingredients. Carefully spread all over top. This pan of squares should not be cut until base has had a chance to firm up then it cuts neatly into 1" x 2" fingers without leaving any crumbs behind in the pan. A highly recommended recipe for square hunters and hostesses.

UCW Presbyterial Holds Executive Meet

Trinity United Church, Madoc, was host to the spring executive meeting of the United Church Women of the Belleville Presbyterial. President Mrs. T. W. Spear set a good mood for the day by opening with the first five verses of John's Gospel.

Mrs. C. Derry, president of Madoc UCW gave the welcome followed by morning worship by Miss Helen Sexsmith. Her timely theme was flowers and their meaning in the Bible and in daily living.

As the main item on the agenda of this meeting was to plan fall rallies, the presidents and unit leaders of 16 local locals were present and were made corresponding members.

The following dates were announced: School for United Church Women at Alpine, Mo-Lac, Sept. 10-12. Belleville Presbyterial is to do the summary on Sunday's service.

The annual Presbyterial is at King St. United Church, Trenton, on Jan. 27, 1972. This date is subject to Dr. Long whom it is hoped will be guest speaker. The fall executive will be at King St. United Church, Trenton, on Nov. 8, 1971.

A petition to Minister of Health and Welfare, Hon. John Munro, was circulated and signed by the women of the Presbyterial, asking that marijuana and hashish not be legalized in Canada.

Articles needed at Quinte Mo-Lac Assembly include picnic tables, chairs, screen doors and a large food mixer, among other things. Mrs. Melvin Flake was named on the manse committee, the president will act also until another name is obtained.

Members divided into five groups according to districts. Various dates were set including Hastings Centre, Mrs. J. Bush, rally at Tweed, on October 12; Hastings South, Mrs. P. Barlow; at Westminster, on October 25; Prince Edward East, Mrs. M. Flake, at Cherry Valley, on October 19; Prince Edward West, Mrs. F. Wilson, at Consecon on October 26; Mrs. Lennox and Addington, Miss Ivy Bates at Grace, Napanee on October 27.

A bountiful lunch was provided by Madoc UCW. In the afternoon the theme of the day, "The Times they are a-changing," was developed. The women were divided into three groups and in three seminars had the chance to learn, question and discuss the following topics: Stewardship, led by Mrs. C. Thompson and Mrs. D. Keough. These conference women had attended a seminar on stewardship by Bonnie recently; community friendship, Mrs. E. Hodgins and Mrs. C. Porritt. Three areas explored were senior citizens, newcomers and drug and alcohol addiction. Program by Mrs. K. Weaver on responsible communication on a personal level was discussed.

When the members re-assembled in one group, Rev. D. Heard, pastor of the church spoke briefly. Appreciation and thanks to all who helped during the day was given by Mrs. H. Kerr.

Ontario 'on Brink' of Dental Care System for Some Children

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said Monday the Ontario government is "on the brink" of setting up a system to provide dental care for some children under the government's medical-care insurance plan.

Mr. Lawrence said in an interview he expects a report from his department within a few weeks to recommend that children in at least one grade of school receive free dental care.

The department was assessing how much it would cost to cover children in kindergarten, kindergarten and Grade 1 or the five lower grades.

It had not been decided whether the dental care would be provided through the school system, through hospitals or directly from dentists.

Asked whether the program might start in September, he said only: "Wouldn't it be nice . . ."

The plan has not yet gone before treasury board for approval.

Providing free dental care for the whole population at this time is out of the question, both financially and administratively, he said.

They [sic] a "directive approach to the question from my point of view is gradually starting with the youngest and adding more year by year."

By "subbing" at the coverage, the province will at least end up with one generation with proper teeth, Mr. Lawrence said.

Earlier he told the standing committee on human resources, studying his $200 million department estimates for 1971-72, that he would like to explore the Australian system where dental care is provided through hospitals and dentists serve as medical interns do in Canada.

Mr. Lawrence also told the committee that a report on bulk purchasing of pharmaceutical supplies for hospitals and provincial health institutions will be on his desk June 1. The committee preparing the report is headed by Julian Porter of Toronto. Policy on the report will be announced this session.

In other business Monday:

—Mr. Lawrence, when questioned by Opposition Leader Robert Nixon, said he would not make a full statement on what controls he plans to end abuses by doctors in billing the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan. Mr. Lawrence said Friday some doctors are performing unnecessary surgery and others are billing the government's insurance plans for procedures carried out by assistants;

—New Democratic Party leader Stephen Lewis called for the resignation of Rene Brunelle, minister of lands and forests, because he has failed to answer questions on controversial Niagara escarpment deals;

—Dante DeMonte (L—Dovercourt) said the Workmen's Compensation Act is a "gross distortion" because it favors employers and not the workers;

—Allan Grossman, minister of trade and development, refused to give the names of 13 corporations who applied for forgivable loans from the Ontario Development Corp. but later changed their minds;

—University Affairs Minister John White said the government may be forced to turn "to some extreme remedy" if universities don't give more qualified Canadians preference over instructors from the United States. He was answering questions by Tim Leid (L—Scarborough East);

—Attorney-General Allan Lawrence said the government is negotiating for another building in Hamilton for a juvenile detention centre;

—Mr. Lawrence also said there may be some announcements this week on the two deaths which resulted from a riot at Kingston Penitentiary last month;

—James Stokes (NDP—Thunder Bay) said government reclassification of conservation officers has meant lower pension benefits and a salary freeze for some and has also resulted in low morale among the workers;

—Energy and Resources Minister George Kerr said Ontario Hydro is aware of the potential of using lignite coal for fuel in generating electricity but said emission problems will have to be solved first;

—Arthur Wishart, minister of financial and commercial affairs, said the Ontario government may appoint an arbitrator in a dispute between gasoline retailers in the Richmond Hill area and Imperial Oil.

—Mr. Brunelle said some marsh land in Essex County in southwestern Ontario may be too expensive for Ontario to buy back from Americans. He was replying to a question by Bernard Newman (L—Windsor-Walkerville);

—Mr. Brunelle also said a new fish hatchery at Bath, near Kingston, will be in operation by 1973 and will replace four smaller ones in southeastern Ontario. He said the hatchery will produce 5 million fish annually.

Nursing Home Rate to Patient to Be $3.50 A Day

TORONTO (CP) — The province will provide additional nursing home beds in regions where present facilities fall short of the provincial average, Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said Monday.

Mr. Lawrence was elaborating in the legislature on an announcement in the April 26 budget speech that nursing-home care will be included in the provincial medical insurance plan by April 1, 1972.

The payment will be limited to persons covered by the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan to prevent an influx of persons from outside Ontario entering nursing homes.

In the months ahead, health department staff will visit nursing homes to check the level of care provided and the accounting procedures, he said.

Later, nursing homes will be subject to regulation as to general location, number of beds, size, proportion of standard, semi-private and private beds, nursing care, administrative standards and budget control.

Patients will have to pay $3.50 a day and the province will be responsible for the remaining expenses, at the cost of a standard ward. In a committee studying the department's $200 million estimates for 1971-72, Mr. Lawrence said the province will pay the $3.50 for welfare recipients.

The nursing-home and home-care facilities program is expected to cost over $50 million in its first year of operation, rising to $100 million by 1975.

Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, announced just afterwards that persons in homes for the aged who qualify as receiving extended health care will be covered under the new insurance program.

Dentist Wants Services Covered by OHSIP

TORONTO (CP) — Dental needs are as poorly met today as medical requirements were 15 years ago, a Kingston dentist told the Ontario Dental Association Monday.

Speaking from the floor at a meeting of the geriatric section of the association, Dr. Norman Sproul said it would "at least be a beginning" if the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan started a limited program of clinics for the poor.

What dentists can do individually is a "drop in the bucket," he said.

Poor People Will Help Plan Housing

OTTAWA (CP) — People living on low incomes will be invited to help select plans for new low-rent housing projects in 25 communities this year, the government announced Monday.

Robert Andras, minister responsible for federal housing policy, made the announcement in a Halifax speech, and Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., the federal housing agency, supplemented details here.

Builders and developers in the 25 communities are being invited by newspaper advertisements today to submit proposals for the new developments. Representatives of low-income family groups will act as judges along with experts from CMHC.

Mr. Andras said the government will loan $85 million to $90 million for construction of the selected projects, which will comprise about 5,000 houses or housing units. The government will loan up to 95 per cent of the cost and low rents will be set contractually.

Edmonton Coach Promises Win Over Remparts in Second Game

QUEBEC (CP) — Bill Hunter general manager of Edmonton Oil Kings, has promised fair followers of his junior hockey team: They're going to win the second game of the Memorial Cup playoff series Wednesday night.

Hunter made the vow shortly after his team was defeated 5-1 by Quebec Remparts in the first game of the best-of- three series to determine the No. 1 first-level junior A hockey team in Canada.

"We weren't sharp," said Hunter. "We needed that game though. We haven't played since May 5.

"We will see Wednesday night, though. We are going to win Wednesday."

The Oil Kings, Western Canada Hockey League champions, got off to a good start against the Remparts as they constantly forechecked the fast-skating Quebec team in the opening period, preventing them from mounting any concerted attack.

The forechecking paid off in a goal by Dan Spring at 6:08 of the opening period, with the Oil Kings' Dave Kryskow in the penalty box serving a high-sticking infraction.

But the Remparts, described by Hunter as "the best skating junior club in Canada," came on strong in the second period and grabbed a 2-1 lead on goals by Michel Briere and Andre Savard.

The Remparts, Quebec Junior A Hockey League titlists, then went ahead to stay at 6:22 of the second period when Savard blasted a shot that went in on Hendricks' stick side.

Quebec had several other good scoring chances in the second period, but Hendricks, a 6-foot-2 tonsight kept the Oil Kings from Edmonton Maple Leafs during the WCHL playoffs, held them at bay.

The Oil Kings had one good opportunity to tie the score before the Remparts fired three goals past Hendricks to sew up the win.

Spring broke away at his own blueline and walked in about 50 feet. Deguise lost the Remparts' goalie stld across and blocked his low drive.

About 30 seconds later, at 8:59, Rejean Giroux shot Quebec into a 3-1 lead.

Briere fired his second goal of the game at:10:18 and then Guy Lafleur brought the 10,812 fans to their feet as he slipped past the Edmonton defence and poked the puck past Hendricks at 11:15 to round out the scoring.

"I think Edmonton missed too many good opportunities in the first period," said Remparts' coach Maurice Filion after the game.

"Teams always get the jump on us in the first period. It has been that way all year.

Donato Lowers Boom

NEW YORK (CP) — Before the fight Paddy Noonan and his band blared out with When Irish Eyes Are Smiling. But afterwards the Italians did all the laughing because Donato Paduano punched his way to victory over Bobby O'Brien in Madison Square Garden.

Paduano, 23-year-old Italian-born Montreal fighter, came on strong in the last half of the fight to win a close, but unanimous, 10-round decision in his professional debut as a middleweight.

O'Brien, a 25-year-old stringbean from Long Island, was billed as Irish Bob O'Brien, and before the fight in Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum Paddy Noonan and his band performed with young tap dancers. It was part of the Garden's new punch-and-lunch program: A hot lunch could be obtained in the arena.

Paduano, usually a slow starter, seemed lost in the shuffle in the first four rounds as O'Brien connected at will with left-right combinations. Paduano seemingly had no defence against O'Brien's aggression as the Irish faction in the Garden lived it up.

But near the end of the fifth round, the tide of battle turned and Paduano started catching the carushing O'Brien with lightning combinations. Now it was O'Brien who was the bewildered one.

All three officials, referee Johnny Colan and judges Tony Castellano and Bill Recht, scored it 5-4-1 for the Canadian.

Tonight's Cup Finale 19th Hole for Hawks

CHICAGO (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks traded in their hockey sticks for golf clubs Monday, but they will return to their familiar tools tonight for the deciding game in the Stanley Cup final.

Coach Billy Reay and many of the Hawks had previously been committed to play golf in a sports celebrities tournament honoring Jack Quinlan, former Chicago baseball broadcaster killed in an auto accident during baseball's spring training five years ago.

But today the Hawks have a team meeting set for noon, a light skate by some of the players—especially those who have seen limited playoff action—then the grand finale.

The seventh game against Montreal Canadiens set for Chicago Stadium at 7:30 p.m. CDT —8:30 p.m. EDT— will bring the curtain down on the longest-ever National Hockey League season.

The Canadiens forced a deciding game with a 4-3 win Sunday at Montreal Forum to even the series at three games apiece.

No one is prepared to concede a home-ice advantage, but that's the way the series has gone to date. Chicago won the first two games here, Montreal took two at home, and in the two other games the clubs have each taken home-ice wins.

With the seventh and last game here, the oddsmakers have made the West-Division champion Hawks favorites by about 8 to 5.

NHL interest is booming in the United States during the current Montreal-Chicago final and CBS television network, which previously had confined its league coverage to Sunday afternoons, will be carrying tonight's game nationally in the U.S.

In addition, transmissions to independent stations in Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis and the Minneapolis-St. Paul areas have been confirmed with the possibility that one or two other stations will join the hookup.

STAN MIKITA

"It's fantastic the number of telephone calls we had after Sunday's game to carry the seventh game nationally in the U.S.," an NHL spokesman said Monday.

The Canadiens flew into Chicago late Monday afternoon after a light skate at the Forum earlier in the day. The team looked into the usual hotel for the playoffs, a motel near O'Hare International Airport.

Centre Stan Mikita summed up the players' feelings Monday with assurances there was no way the puck would bounce in favor of the Canadiens tonight as it did in Montreal Sunday.

"A couple of bad hops (in the third period) beat us. . . . But we can't be worrying about that in the seventh game. If we play the same game in the Stadium, we'll win."

Mikita was referring to bounces that set up the tying and winning goals by the Mahovlich brothers, Frank and Peter respectively.

Defenceman Bill White was victimized on Frank Mahovlich's goal that gave the Big M a record 14 in the playoffs. The Hawk blueliner was unable to control a bouncing puck in Chicago territory and Mahovlich swept it up for a shot at goalie Tony Esposito.

The Chicago netminder stopped the first shot, but Mahovlich scrambled the loose puck to the side of the net and nudged it in.

Minutes later, with Montreal's Rejean Houle in the penalty box, Frank Mahovlich snared a loose clearing puck in the Chicago zone, passed to brother Peter and the young centre flipped the puck over Esposito's stick shoulder.

Garr Just Stood There!

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ralph Garr of Atlanta Braves was standing on the corner watching the baseball go by.

"Yep, I just watched the ball from the batter's box after I hit it," said Garr, who is nicknamed Roadrunner for his blinding speed. "I knew it was out of the park—but I was afraid it might go foul."

The reason for the freeze, Garr said, was that he wanted to conserve his energy—in case the ball was foul "and I would need all my strength to run on the next ball."

But his fears were groundless. The ball sailed into the left-field fair territory and gave the Braves a 4-3 victory over New York Mets in the 12th inning Monday night.

Earlier Garr tied the game with a two-out home run in the 10th inning.

In other National League games, Pittsburgh Pirates beat Montreal Expos 6-5, Philadelphia Phillies turned back Cincinnati Reds 3-2 and Houston Astros beat San Diego Padres 3-0.

Garr's game-winning shot came off reliever Ron Taylor, the Toronto native, but he said it wasn't as memorable as the one hit earlier off New York ace Tom Seaver.

"It was a good pitch," said Garr, "I had no business hitting it out of the park. If he threw it 100 times, I'd never hit it out again. . . ."

ROBERTO CLEMENTE

In both instances, the Garr homers were on the first pitch.

Garr not only made timely hits, but timely catches as well. He made two robberies of drives in the outfield, including Bud Harrelson's long belt up the alley in left-centre, which the Roadrunner simply outran.

Orlando Cepeda was another brave hero, stroking a homer off Seaver to lead off the ninth that tied the game 2-2. New York's Don Clendenon then ripped his second homer of the game to give the Mets a 3-2 bulge before Garr come through.

Roberto Clemente, who unloaded a homer in the eighth, cracked a two-run triple in the ninth to give Pittsburgh a come-back victory over Montreal.

The Pirates trailed 5-4 when Gene Alley opened the last of the ninth with a single off Expos reliever Steve Marshall. Gene Clines sacrificed Alley to second and he held there as Dave Cash beat out an infield hit.

Hall Douses California Fire

Tom Hall came out of Minnesota Twins' bullpen in the ninth inning Monday night and struck out three successive pinch-hitters, stranding the tying run on third base and saving a 3-2 Minnesota victory over California Angels.

The 155 - pound fireballer, working in relief of Bert Blyleven after singles by Ken McMullen and John Stephenson put the Twins in a dire hole with nobody out, fanned Billy—Cowan, Ken Berry and Jim Fregosi to end the game.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston Red Sox nipped Detroit Tigers 3-2, New York Yankees downed Baltimore Orioles 6-3 and Cleveland Indians beat Washington Senators 8-3.

At Anaheim, the Twins overcame a 2-0 California lead on George Mitterwald's two-run homer and Jim Nettles' run-scoring single in the fifth inning.

Blyleven, nicked for two unearned runs in the second, went on to strike out 12 and stymie the Angels, on five hits until the ninth, when McMullen stroked a leadoff single and raced to third on Stephenson's single.

Hall then came on to snuff out the rally.

CARL YASTRZEMSKI

Alex Johnson, benched for two games by Angels' manager Lefty Phillips because of his lack-lustre play, returned to the lineup and poked one hit in four trips to the plate.

The Red Sox widened their East-Division lead over second place Baltimore to 2½ games, coming from behind on George Scott's two-run double in the fifth and then staving off the Tigers with the help of a sensational catch by left fielder Carl Yastrzemski.

With one on and two out in the seventh, Yastrzemski raced to the wall in left-centre and made a leaping stab of Willie Horton's long drive against the scoreboard, robbing the Detroit slugger of a potential game-tying extra base hit.

Horton slammed a two-run homer off Ray Culp in the fourth to give the Tigers a 2-1 edge, but Scott's two-out double in the fifth scored Luis Aparicio and Reggie Smith, sending Dean Chance down to his sixth loss in as many decisions.

Roy White poled his seventh homer of the season—a two-run shot in the first inning—and Gene Michael slapped two-run producing singles to lead the Yankees past the Orioles.

Big M Not Fined To Miss Free One

CHICAGO (CP) — Frank Mahovlich, the Montreal Canadiens' big winger on Sunday missed a penalty shot against Chicago Black Hawks, can take solace in the fact he wasn't the only player not to capitalize in Stanley Cup play.

Mahovlich fired the puck at goalie Tony Esposito after being awarded a clear shot when the Chicago backstop threw his stick—accidentally or otherwise—at the puck near the Black Hawk blueline in the first period.

The Big M's deliberate windup at centre ice was nullified by Esposito who came charging out of the goal crease about 30 feet, braked suddenly and then glided backwards.

Mahovlich's concentration was broken and he appeared to hurry his shot. It was smothered by Esposito, but the Canadiens went on to win 4-3 and set up a National Hockey League final to start Wednesday night.

League officials at first announced that the penalty shot, awarded by referee Art Skov, was the first in modern times.

However, a review of records Monday turns up at least two other Stanley Cup incidents in which a penalty shot was called—the latest in the fourth game of the 1966 semi-final between St. Louis Blues and Minnesota North Stars.

It happened with only 34 seconds gone in the game.

FRANK MAHOVLICH

Cesare Maniago and the Stars' netminder turned back that drive.

In 1937, the late Lionel Conacher, then of Montreal Maroons and later named Canada's Athlete of the Half Century, failed to score on a penalty shot against Tiny Thompson of Boston Bruins.

When a professional hockey team scores four times in 16 shots on the opposing goal, there are several possible explanations:

1. The opposing goalie was blind.
2. The game statistician was blind.
3. There were a lot of near-misses.
4. They were very accurate.

or 5. They were very lucky.

Whatever the underlying cause, Montreal Canadiens not only managed a 25 per cent scoring average in Sunday's sixth game of the Stanley Cup finals, they also managed to win without begin credited with more than six shots in any period.

Not only that, but the Habs' Frank Mahovlich failed to connect on the best of those 16 shots, a free one from referee Art Skov after Chicago goalie Tony Esposito forgot his stick did not have a string attached to it.

All things considered, the Canadiens did their absolute best to try and make things easy for the Hawks. They came up dry on their penalty shot, they drew seven of the game's 11 penalties, and several of them called their coach an incompetent to sow the seeds of jeering dissension and put added pressure on their shoulders.

Referee Skov did his bit for the Hawks too, washing out a Montreal goal because the Chicago net popped off its moorings. He failed to see Hawk defender Pat Stapleton give the net the needed jolt after goalie Esposito wandered off and hung up an "out to lunch" sign.

We salute Mr. Skov's bravery, if not his eye sight. People have found hand grenades in their lunch-buckets for less.

Hawks' First Test

That setback notwithstanding, Montreal Canadiens now find themselves two points away from the Stanley Cup. Last September, the odds against them getting this far would have been longer than those against a South American rag named Canonero winning the Kentucky Derby.

If the Habs have one thing going for them tonight in the hostile confines of the Chicago Stadium it's confidence. It's a confidence born of the fact that they have proven they can win when they have to.

Les Habs were down in games 3-2 to Boston and ended up smashing the Bruins on their own ice. Sunday's 4-3 win marked the third "must" victory for Montreal, the third time they have won when losing meant elimination.

By contrast, the Black Hawks have not, until tonight, had to win. They were always a step ahead of the Rangers in the semi-finals, and four giant steps ahead of Philadelphia in the opening playoff round. That knowledge could cost the Hawks whatever advantage the security of playing on their own pond gives them.

A Montreal win would be a popular one, bringing Lord Stanley's old spittoon back to the land of its origin after a year's southern vacation. And many would enjoy seeing a third-place underdog bounce a team that was a division front-runner all season.

If the Canadiens win tonight, it will be largely because they are one all Machiell better than other NHL entries. If they lose, it will be because they are a Sergs Savard less than champions.

Montreal Drafty

Whatever happens to the 1970-71 edition of the Canadiens, Henri Richard and Jean Beliveau are prime retirement candidates — next year's Habs could be a powerhouse.

In the upcoming June amateur draft, Montreal has first, second, and eleventh choices of the cream of Canada's junior hockey crop.

First pick will undoubtedly be Quebec Remparts' right wing wizard Guy Lafleur. The 20-year-old, being touted as a second Beliveau (he also wears number 4), has scored 314 goals in 218 regular-season games as a junior, 130 of them this year, and 103 in 1969-70.

His addition to the Montreal roster comes courtesy California Golden Seals, who were the worst team in the NHL and had previously swapped their draft choice to the Canadiens.

And rumors have it that Sam Pollock has negotiated a trade, involving possibly goalie Phil Myre, and either Jerry Harper or J. C. Tremblay, in exchange for Detroit Red Wings' draft pick.

That selection would be the second in the June draft, since Detroit's performance was the second-worst in the league. If such a deal materialized, the Canadiens would not have to agonize over a choice between Lafleur and OHA standout Marcel Dionne — they'd have both of them!

Seventh choice was obtained by Montreal in the deal that sent Ted Harris and Bobby Rousseau to Minnesota, and eleventh choice is their own, by virtue of their third-place finish in the NHL's eastern division this past season.

The possibility of the Habs landing four of the best 11 junior hockey players in Canada augurs well for their future plans.

It may also convince 'expansion' team governors — who now outnumber the original 'established' league bosses 8-6 — that trading draft choices is not the ideal way to share the hockey wealth.

Quinte's Swan Winds Up

Quinte Makes Building Repairs

Quinte Hotel has looked after re-constructing Construction in the Commercial Softball League this season.

The second new entry in the major Belleville softball circuit is comprised mainly of players who performed last year with the now defunct Stinson Construction squad.

Coach Bob Jones feels that the key to his team's success is defence. "We have a good defensive team, the only thing that I'm really worried about is our hitting. Some of these guys have the ability to stick the ball, but they haven't been making contact."

The key offensive performer figures to be shortstop Dave Duvall, who was one of the top performers with the league champion Ellis Juniors last season, while compiling a .324 batting average.

At second and third are two former Stinson regulars — Wayne Woods and Dwight Rathwell, both coming off good offensive seasons, while first base is being held down by Bob Parsons, who played in 1969 with the Ellis Juniors.

Utilizing the top team defence will be pitcher Bob Swan. "It's important that we have a good fielding team behind him, because Bob isn't the real over-powering type pitcher," notes the Quinte coach.

The former Stinson hurler relies heavily on control as attested by his low total of 39 walks last season, second best among regular league pitchers. Swan's 2.27 earned run average for the fourth-place Constructionmen was fifth best in the league.

Outfielder Harold Workhoven is expected to provide relief help in the pitching department, while the catching chores will be handled by spring but still competent Lyle Thompson.

Among the other outfield candidates are Rick Denard, who played with Stinsons last season and former City Hotel performer Bob McLeod.

Quinte open their regular season Tuesday, May 25, when they meet the Point Anne Optimistmen in a 7 p.m. contest at the Alemite.

Baseball Season Set

Baseball action gets under way on a regular basis Saturday night when the South Hastings League swings into action.

The oldest organized ball loop in the district will once again be a five team circuit with Plane's Concrete (Centrifton), Read, Shannonville, Latta and the Reserve fielding teams.

All contests in the 24-game schedule are slated to begin at 6:45 p.m. with the league opening falling Saturday when Latta visits defending champion Plane's Concrete and Shannonville travels to Read.

Mission Possible

The annual banquet for the Brunswick Thursday afternoon ladies' bowling league was held May 13 at the Shrine Club. After being welcomed by the president, Joan Mitchell, the ladies enjoyed a buffet dinner.

The Mission Impossibles were the first place team this year and each team member was presented with a trophy. These were: Merle Brennan, Ev Campbell, Lela Twist, Mae Olaverson, Betty Cunningham and Theresa Heslip. Jean Desmond won the high average, Joan Mitchell the high triple and Sandy Barnes the high single. The following girls were given special awards: Mary Grossett, Eleanor Haggarty, Mae Olaverson, Bernice Burnham and Doreen Cook. Joan Mitchell received a gift of appreciation from the league for her work as president.

Kinsmen Rely on Speed

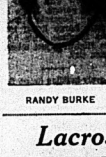
The Belleville Kinsmen Juniors are hoping that speed does kill, or at least do some serious damage to the pennant chances of their Eastern Ontario Baseball Association opposition.

Two players who the Kinsmen are looking to provide different types of speed when the season gets under way, are pitcher Garnie Adams and outfielder Randy Burke.

Adams relied heavily on a blazing fastball to compile a 6-4 record with the Kinsmen last season in addition to helping pitch Plane's Concrete to the South Hastings championship. The 5' 7", 160 - pound hurler also saw senior baseball action two years ago with the Belleville Joyce Realtors.

"His biggest asset would have to be his attitude and desire," says Kinsmen coach Moe Hunter of the 20-year-old right-hander, "he's the kind of guy that can help give the others a lift. I'm pretty sure that he's going to be or captain for this reason."

The four year veteran of South Hastings baseball action worked hard on developing curve last season to complement his live fastball and figures to hold down a starting pitching assignment with the juniors this season.



Burke, on the other hand utilizes his speed in providing outfield defence for the Belleville entry.

The 17 - year - old flychaser saw limited duty with the Kinsmen last season and according to Hunter, "he just has to improve his hitting a little in order to play more regularly. It's something that we're working on."

The 5'9" 140-pounder is expected to be a defensive replacement for some of the sluggers in the Kinsmen outfield.

The Kinsmen will be competing in a league this season with Internationals entries from Port Hope, Kendal and Bowmanville as well as both junior and senior squads from Oshawa and Kingston.

The Kinsmen have currently signed 18 players in preparation for their 24-game schedule, which begins Wednesday, May 26 when Kendal Intermediates invade the Belleville fairgrounds.

Lacrosse Lull Precedes Storm

Two periods of well played exhibition bout between Cobourg and Belleville.

The Cobourg visitors broke open a tight contest to storm to a 7-2 win, while both benches emptied in a wild third period brawl.

Cobourg had built up a narrow 2-1 lead before the outbreak of penalties in the third period, which brought the Belleville penalty total to 18 infractions and the visitors only two less.

Mike Scarlett tallied both Belleville goals before being ejected from the game for his part in the fistic festivities. Other standouts for the losers were defenceman John Wales and forward Joe Clarke, who was performing in his first game.

The next home game for the Belleville juniors will be Monday, May 31 when they open the regular season against the defending champions from Campbellford.

Peewees Airborne

RCAF Trenton peewees were off and flying while the Police Association and Dairy Queen started on equal footing in the first regularly scheduled Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association contests.

RCAF downed the Y's Men's Club 5-3 as Doug Rainboth, Tyler Walker, Mark Desmoreaux, Mike Reynolds and Tony Matheson each counted a goal.

A pair of goals by Jeff Runciman pulled the Dairy Queen into a 2-2 tie with the Police in the only other game played. Robb Ashley and Randy Hutchinson tallied for the law and order forces.

No Definite Plan Yet Chosen For Form of Price Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — The government doesn't have a "cut-and-dried" plan but could choose from several methods should price and wage controls become necessary, Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said in the Commons Monday.

He and Finance Minister Edgar Benson faced several questions about government plans to deal with the cost of living.

Mr. Sharp told John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) the government is studying price and wage controls.

Mr. Lundrigan, maintaining that Prime Minister Trudeau had divulged the existence of a "contingency plan" to impose such controls, asked cautiously that "it won't be sprung on the country like the War Measures Act."

He was called to order.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis asked whether Mr. Benson and his advisors have projected the likely curve of prices for the rest of this year.

Mr. Benson said his expectations would be outlined in the budget.

He and George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) implied price rises and the cost of living is rising.

Mr. Hees said that based on increases in the first three months of 1971, the rate would be 7.9 per cent this year.

He asked whether the government intends to have the prices and incomes guides of 18 months ago reintroduced, or did it plan other measures.

Mr. Benson said the increase was 1.9 per cent for the year ended in April. Mr. Hees had made an "obvious error."

Mr. Hees repeated the 7.9 figure, said costs have been rising steadily, and asked whether Mr. Benson will "continue to do nothing."

Mr. Benson said Mr. Hees was "wrong as usual."

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) said Mr. Benson should find out the reasons for the latest "extraordinary" increase in unemployment rather than "making phoney excuses."

Unemployment rose by 9,000 in Canada last month—during a period when it normally drops.

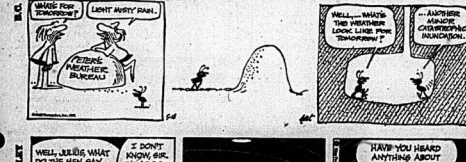
Robt. Stanfield asked whether the increase changes Mr. Benson's forecast for the rest of the year. The minister said it does not. It was still expected that the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate would show a decline over the remainder of the year.

When the Opposition leader asked whether the government would support the establishment of a group for short-term economic forecasting, Mr. Benson said there are already such units. The one at the University of Toronto comes up with substantially the same forecasts as the government, he said.

Mr. Saltsman, saying Mr. Benson greeted last month's unemployment increase with "surprise and ignorance," asked whether he had yet arrived at an explanation for the rise. Mr. Benson said the explanation was in the figures released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

It was at this point that Mr. Saltsman said the minister should consider the reasons rather than making what he called phoney excuses.

Outside the House, Mr. Benson said that ordinarily there would have been 150,000 new jobs in April but there were only 20,000 last month.



The same thing had happened in the spring of 1967 and it was difficult to explain.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Grass Can Result In Scary Trips

Part II — The second of a series of four columns on marijuana.

In yesterday's column I reprinted two letters from youngsters who are in favor of smoking marijuana. They express typical of scores I have received which make such statements as "It's safer for me to smoke pot than to drink." or "Older folks who drink and smoke and overeat are the first to warn us about bad habits like smoking pot. What's so bad about it? It's better than becoming a chronic alcoholic." or "I've never smoked marijana, but I'm on my way to my first pot party. I understand it's not harmful. Any time us kids want to have some fun there's sure to be some old fogies who say 'better not'."

The credibility gap widens between adults and youngsters when marijuana is the topic of discussion. But in view of my willingness to present their side in the opening column, I think youngsters will not consider it unfair of me to present the opposing viewpoint. For example.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: would like to direct my letter to Miss K., who wrote to you about her marijuana problems. Dear Miss K.: I read your letter in Dr. Steincrohn's column and felt I must write to you. Probably you may not even want to read my letter, but I'm sending it to you just in case.

I understand your feelings on smoking grass. Last summer was the first time I smoked and I got bad effects from it, too. I couldn't understand what was wrong. I became paranoid and scared so I quit that night.

I thought maybe if I tried it another time I'd get better effects, but that wasn't true. I smoked with friends about five times after that. but the effects were just as bad, if not worse.

I actually felt as though I were going crazy. I know that it was the grass because I've never taken chemicals. I remember one night I was sitting in the park at the end of my street with some friends. We had some grass.

My friend lit up his pipe and we started toking. I took a couple hard tokes when it hit me. I got scared. I was in a dream and wanted to crawl out. I asked my friend to go for a walk with me and we walked miles without stopping.

I felt as though I had to get away but there was no place to go. I couldn't get out of my dream. I couldn't go home then because I thought my parents would know that I was crazy and put me away.

Well, I finally went home and slept. But I felt "crazy" for days afterward. Do you know what saved me? I'm off grass now because I got up the courage to tell my troubles to my mother and father. With their help I'm normal again.

I'm not a preacher, but here's my advice, anyway. One, don't start. No matter how much your friends make fun of you. And two, if you do start,. remember that your parents are your real friends. Go to them. — Miss K.

* * *

Comment: So go the letters pro and con. I receive these communications from youngsters ranging between the ages of 11 and 25. Many ask my advice about other medical and social problems, — and presumably, take it once in a while. Therefore, I hope they'll believe what I am trying to tell them in this series about marijuana.

I am not attempting to present a lopsided opinion. Only what I believe to be solid, and evidence which seems to support the belief that marijuana is not the "innocent victim" of grownups who are determined to keep pleasure away from their growing children.

But it's time for some sort of proof instead of just reprinting contradictory letters from readers. In the next column I'll present some scientific evidence from recent studies which pinpoint the dangers of marijuana.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Always Somebody Smarter

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

No matter how smart you are, there is always at least one thing you are not clever enough to do. For instance, either you can tie a knot that you cannot untie, or you cannot.

The sentence above is a pure exercise in modal logic. If you can tie a knot that you cannot untie, then the untying is the thing you cannot do. If you cannot tie a knot that you can't untie, then the tying is the thing you cannot do. In either case, there is always one thing you cannot do.

But there is somebody else who can. Somebody who can either untie your knot or tie one that you cannot untie. No matter how smart you may be, there is always something of this sort that somebody else can do better than you.

This is much of what Mark Twain meant when he said: "There is somebody who is smarter than Anybody, and that is Everybody." Without knowing the term, he was expressing a basic principle in modal logic.

Yet, many institutions and organizations, at the top, do not recognize this principle in their operations. They may pay lip-service to "co-operation" or "team-work," but the authorities too often imagine that they alone are able to untie every knot that they tie.

No man, no matter how smart or skillful, can stand in one place and see the Eiffel Tower in the round. Sometimes, one man, working alone can solve a problem. Sometimes it takes two, working from opposite ends. Often, it calls for the multiple vision of a group, whose collective intelligence is greater than the sum of its parts.

Every permanently successful institution or organization needs to maintain a delicate and sophisticated equilibrium between the individual and the collectivity, between the Genius and the Group. The Genius may be able to tie the greatest knot in the world, but it takes the Group to untie it. Or the other way around. There is always something each of them cannot do that the other can.

And, of course, this is the most forceful argument in the world for the practice of democracy, for finding a local and not just a sentimental or utopian standpoint. The leader, no matter how brilliant or decent or well-intentioned, is never clever enough to both tie and untie the knots.

Sooner or later, if his authority is not balanced by the group, he must fall either in the tying or the untying, and the whole society will come apart in his hands. There is no more realistic repudiation of dictatorship than this simple exercise in modal logic.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For May 19

Your birthday today: Healthy self-interest is the key to this year of steady effort and fixed duties. For every step of the way, there is a clear reason for taking it. And in most cases, some early indication of what the final results can be. Today's natives tend to strong will, occasional spells of vigorous creative effort and the knack for getting business organized.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): New projects require broader agreements, further development before they begin to yield significant results. Leave no details to chance.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Prod your unconscious. If trying to explain some reaction you've shown lately under stress, you may find capabilities you hadn't suspected exist.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): If you're proposing something else's ideas, stop and think what you really want. There's no law against changing your mind or contradicting yourself.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): For every fact there are six opinions, depending on where you seek information. Let curiosity lead you into further search.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): If your sense of humor holds out, today is a symbolic circus, amateur, staffed by people you are accustomed to seeing regularly. Either they express themselves strongly or you view them in a different light.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Sometimes a discrepancy can be adjusted, sometimes not. Make the effort where friends, family are concerned; avoid a rush to judgment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Let's get just so far to explain a stroke of luck, but will never quite know the real reason. Count your belssings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Planning everybody is impossible for more than a short time, so you may as well please yourself. Either energy from the strong influences of the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Say what you mean, and mean what you say, but let both be at a minimum in volume and length.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Whatever you do that limits others only shows you up poorly. Live and let live does, in the long run, work out better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your pet theories are testcd. You learn something by teaching to let others know how things should be. Now let well enough alone rather than get involved and lose the chance to see what happens.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Impulses run in diverse, scattered directions. Pause for intuition to guide you or wait for a better time to make serious changes.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains a Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles". It is most unnerving for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown in tests to produce a speedy reduction of swelling. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained over a period of months! Among those sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions — from the slight to the severe.

This was accomplished by a new healing ingredient (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-famous research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H. Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H. Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Good Shoppers Get Top Value In Used Cars

PART I

By RAY STAPLEY

I have two friends who always buy used cars and who usually make a good choice.

One buys a low-priced, older model car because that is all he can afford at the moment.

The other buys a fairly recent, good-looking car because he feels he saves money and still has good transportation.

I think these men represent the two categories into which most used-car buyers fit.

The first chap says he sets a maximum figure of $600 as the total amount he can spend on his car. This figure includes the purchase price, plus any necessary repairs to put the car into good driving condition. At this price, he has to be careful there are not too many major problems. He always has a final check by a reputable mechanic, but as this costs a modest fee, he has learned how to spot major trouble in order to eliminate all but the better buys.

These are the features he checks and how he does it. They are simple procedures anyone can follow.

(1) Steering: There is trouble if the car shimmies or pulls in one direction, or if the steering feels too loose or too tight. Check the front tires. If worn unevenly, this can be caused by faulty steering components. Check the rest of the spares. They may have been rotated to cover up this condition.

(2) Radiator: Check for damp spots on the radiator. There may be minor or severe leaks to repair.

(3) Motor: Listen to the sound. If noisy or knocking, it could involve mighty expensive repairs. Be cautious if the motor looks very dirty or very clean. Both are possible signs of neglect. A spotlessly clean engine may have been washed down recently to create the illusion of exceptional care.

(4) Piston Rings: Warm up the engine. It should be running at least 20 minutes; then put in neutral and press well down on the accelerator, release, then press down again. If much blue smoke is ejected from the tailpipe, or if, when the engine is idling, there is a puffing of smoke from the oil filler hole, this means expensive repairs.

(5) Transmission: Drive in all gears and check for smooth shifting and operation. With an automatic transmission, be sure to try lower gears. Check for any noises or jolting as gears automatically change.

(6) Rear Axle: Noise or howling in the rear-end or a "clunk" when put into gear indicate trouble. Look under the car behind the rear wheels and check for dampness on the round steel backing plates. Check the middle lower section of the rear axle housing for wet spots, too. These may be oil or brake fluid leaks. If oil, it could be caused by faulty seals or gaskets in the rear axle, and if oil is leaking, there could be damage to the rear axle components.

(7) Brakes: Dampness on the backing plates may indicate brake fluid seepage which can lead to sudden and complete brake failure. Check the brakes for grabbing or sponginess, and see if they need to be pumped. All these symptoms can spell major repairs.

(8) Suspension: Sagging indicates weak springs. Apply the brakes sharply and if the car bounces more than once, the shock absorbers need replacing.

(9) Body: Check the body for rust, especially the floor. You can expect a certain amount of corrosion in an older car, but be sure the body is in reasonable condition.

After locating a car that can be put in condition, go to a reputable mechanic for a professional appraisal.

The under-body of the car gets quite a beating during the long winter months and it is wise to check for damage early to save headaches while on vacation. The exhaust system is always the favorite to break down on those Sunday drives.

Canny Buyers' Pointers

PART II

By RAY STAPLEY

In the first half of this series we discussed the interview I had with one man about his system of buying a used car in the lower - price bracket.

The second man I interviewed looks for a higher-priced, more recent model and is prepared to spend up to $2,000.

His philosophy is that new car depreciates approximately 30 per cent the first year and 25 per cent the second. Therefore, a car originally priced at $4,000 will sell for only $2,100 after two years.

He feels the repairs won't come anywhere near this figure all the time he keeps the car. He is not concerned too much with year or model, but looks for a one - owner car with low mileage that has not been abused.

The first thing he does is check the odometer (mileage indicator) for the total mileage the car has been driven. He looks carefully to see if these numbers are in perfect alignment. If they are not, he suspects the odometer has been turned back. If the rubber on the brake and accelerator pedals appear badly worn, this pretty well confirms his suspicion.

Like the first man interviewed, he listens to and looks at the engine and is cautious if it is too clean or too dirty. He has the car put up on a hoist and examines rubber bushings in the suspension system. If these appear badly worn, he feels the car has had rough driving over very bumpy terrain, or has been overloaded and driven hard.

He also looks carefully at the paint and the undercarriage. If the paint work is patchy or the colors don't match or if there are some new metal panels or the frame shows signs of having been straightened, he insists on a detailed story of just what happened from the vendor.

He also has a check-out by a registered mechanic before closing the deal.

And, so it seems the watchwords for prospective car buyers are:

STOP LOOK and LISTEN!

Stop and take your time: don't buy impulsively.

Look the car over carefully, inside and out.

Listen to how the motor sounds: when it is idling and when it is under load and listen for any other abnormal sounds, squeaks or knocks.

With careful selection, a used car can be a good buy.

Good maintenance is imperative if your car is to give you top performance during the holiday months. Oil change and grease job will keep your car running more efficiently and with a thorough check of the running gear, you will be able to face vacation driving with confidence in your car.

You can get some other so-called rustproofing for $79.95. Or less. But not Ziebart.

Because Ziebart prevents rust. And that's not an easy job. Take your rocker panel for example. It's made up of as many as seven sections (depending on what kind of car you drive). All of them are completely sealed off from each other.

Other "rustproofing" methods we know of simply drill one hole and shoot their compound into one section. Leaving the other six to rust. Since you can't see the inside, you'd probably never know the difference. Unless you know about Ziebart.

We get into every section of your rocker panel. Every one. Using our specially patented compound and process. And that's just the rocker panel.

Your car has 26 or more other areas that we treat just as completely. Just as painstakingly.

That's why we can guarantee your new car won't rust for ten years. No matter how many miles you drive it.

Ziebart rustproofing. Our prices start at less than $100. Which is a small price to pay considering how much your car will be worth come trade-in time.

Ziebart AUTO TRUCK RUSTPROOFING

To us, rust is a four letter word.

Mobile Homes Are Replacing Tents

The track of the camper is getting wider every year for a very good reason, say representatives of the numerous trailer companies throughout the area.

The little tent silhouetted against the night-time forest has now become 30 to 40 foot trailer silhouetted against the trailer park.

Licences for trailers were first issued in 1921 and the total at that time was 327.

Since that time, the number of licences has increased exponentially, and according to government statistics, in 1967 this figure of 327 had increased to 198,949. Similarly this figure for 1971 will increase to approximately 300,000 trailers licensed within the province of Ontario alone.

The pros and cons of the trailer versus tent are numerous and easily seen, said a representative of a nearby camping area.

Although the tent is portable and can be carried in the trunk of the car, it cannot give conveniences and comfort that a trailer has to offer.

Sophistication has reached the campground and in some ways the principal of getting out and "roughing it" has changed to bringing along as much comfort as possible and still have access to fresh air.

Donald Jones, manager of the Canadian Tire Store in Belleville, contradicted the increase in sales by saying in 1967, Expo year, peak sales in camper trailers resulted at least partially from the problem of limited and expensive lodging in Montreal. People were buying trailers rather than paying exhorbitant prices in the French Canadian motels. "I wouldn't say that this was an over-all picture but in my area we have discontinued the camper trailer and gone exclusively to tents."

The two camps are evenly divided, said sales representatives of the various sporting goods outlets throughout the city.

Because outdoorsmen are travelling farther afield in their hunt for nature, more comfortable quarters are in demand.

Often a factor in the type of camping equipment needed is the distance of the trips that the family expects to be taking and the length of time to be spent on the trip.

"The only trend I can see in the trailer business," said Walter Richards, owner of Richards Trailers, Trenton, "is that the fold-down trailer has reached its peak and is being steadily pushed into the background by the rigid trailer. My sales have been increasing every year, which tells me that trailers are not going to reach their peak for some time."

The travel trailer has a maximum length of 31 feet and can be 8 feet 6 inches wide. This variety of trailer can be pulled behind a motor vehicle without a special permit.

The travel trailer is comfortable without being extravagant and will give maximum worth for the dollar. A trailer furnished, capable of sleeping six people and supplied with a gas-electric fridge will sell for about $2,000.

With an experienced driver, they can be pulled anywhere that a car can go.

They provide a better shelter, they are warmer and the price of a trailer will not depreciate when the time comes to trade it in, added Mr. Richards.

SMOKE SCREEN

If you're looking for another reason to quit smoking, consider your driving safety. Tobacco smoke leaves a dulling film on the inside of your windshield. The result is reduced visibility and stronger glare. If you do smoke, periodically clean the inside of the windshield with a solution of water and vinegar to wash away tobacco film.

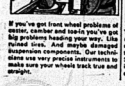
Firestone
Riding System
Service

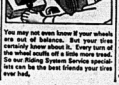
"This bargain can save a lot more than it costs."



"What will happen if your front wheels are out of alignment? Or if your tires need balancing? Well, your car won't give you the comfort it should. But there's more to worry about than comfort. Or even safety. Your tires will take a terrible licking. Pretty soon, you'll notice that the tread is worn right off in big patches. Tires like that need replacing. That can mean forty or fifty bucks worth of tire mileage down the drain. Maybe more.

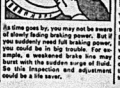
"Without proper lubrication, your wheel bearings can suffer and need replacing. So having them cleaned and re-packed with grease could save another fifteen dollars or so.

"Of course, when you talk about a brake adjustment, there's a lot more than money at stake. A lot more."



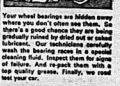
All this Front-end service

1. Precision Alignment.



If you've got front wheel problems of caster, camber and toe-in you've got big problems heading your way. Like ruined tires, and maybe damaged suspension components. Our technicians use very precise instruments to make sure your wheels track true and straight.

2. Wheel Balancing.



You may not even know if your wheels are out of balance. But your tires certainly know about it. Every turn of the wheel snuffs off a little more tread. So our Balancing System Service specialists can be the best friends your tires ever had.

3. Brake Inspection And Adjustment.

As time goes by, you may not be aware of slowly fading braking power. But if you take advantage of our brake check, you could be in big trouble. For example, a weakened brake line may burst with the sudden surge of fluid. So this Inspection and Adjustment could be a life saver.

4. Re-packing Front Wheel Bearings.

Your wheel bearings are hidden away where you don't often see them. So there's a good chance they are being gradually ruined by dried out or caked lubricant. Our technicians carefully wash the bearing races in a special cleaning fluid. Inspect them for signs of failure. And re-pack them with a high quality grease. Finally, we road test your car.

Rad's Pressure Cap Plays Important Role

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"About a month ago, the right side of my car's front carpet became soaking wet. My mechanic checked and found antifreeze was seeping out of the heater core and dripping down onto the carpet.

"He claimed that to cure the leak the heater would have to be removed and repaired. The estimate was roughly $40.

"I could not afford to spend that kind of money, so I asked him if there was any way of patching it up. He told me that the pressure built up by the radiator pressure cap was forcing the fluid through the heater core.

"To prevent pressure from building up in the cooling system, he suggested driving with the pressure cap loose. I find that by doing this the leak has practically stopped.

"My car is six years old and I hope to squeeze two more years out of it.

"Two questions. Would driving with no pressure in the cooling system have any damaging effects? Would a can of stop leak added to the cooling system seal up the leak in the heater core?" — Mr. R. J., Etobicoke, Ont.

During short city runs, you would probably get by without a pressure cap. But when traveling at high speed on long highway trips, the engine would likely boil — which apart from the inconvenience could severely damage the engine.

With a bit of luck, the use of a brand name stopleak in the cooling system may seal the leaking heater core, at least temporarily. When stopleak is used, the pressure cap should not be tightened for a few days, and the car should be driven slowly in order to give the stopleak a chance to seal the defective heater core.

However, since your vehicle has been in service for six years, and you plan on keeping it for another two years as soon as you can afford it, it would be wise to remove the heater and repair the core properly.

Though small and inexpensive, the radiator pressure cap plays a major role in protecting the engine. Pressurized cooling systems were introduced in the late 1930s. The auto industry has gradually increased the pressure under which the system operates and in the past few years cars have been equipped with pressure caps of up to 17 pounds or more.

Here's how the pressure cap functions. Each additional pound of pressure that the cooling system is under raises the boiling point of the coolant by about three degrees.

So, with a typical cap of say 14 pounds, the coolant will not boil until it reaches 264 degrees F., instead of 212 degrees when the system is not under pressure.

Though few motorists are aware of it, when crawling along or stopped in heavy traffic during hot weather, the engine is operating several degrees above the boiling point at atmospheric pressure. If not under pressure, the coolant would immediately turn to steam during these unavoidable delays.

The pressure cap should be tested during a routine check-up or whenever there is evidence of overheating. A special testing device is needed to accurately check the caps, and if defective they should be replaced at once.

Problems Can Be Caused By Antifreeze in Radiator

A reader writes:

"Is it advisable to leave the antifreeze in the engine during the hot weather?

"When my car is loaded to capacity, including a 1,000-pound trailer, the engine sometimes overheats when I am driving slowly in heavy traffic.

"Would removing the thermostat tend to make the engine run cooler?" — Mr. H. B., Scarborough, Ont.

Providing there is no trace of rust or other foreign matter in the antifreeze, no harm will be done by leaving it in the cooling system all year.

However, all good brands of ethylene-glycol-base antifreeze contain lubricants and rust inhibitors, but these additives deteriorate and must be replaced each spring.

Most waterpumps have no grease fittings and require this additive for internal lubrication. Failure to install this lubricant in the cooling system can quickly lead to a leaking waterpump.

Never operate without a thermostat or replace the winter thermostat with a summer unit.

Regardless of season, the engine thermostat is the main control for the entire cooling system. As well as providing hot water for the heater, it assures that the engine reaches its proper operating temperature as quickly as possible.

Though it is often thought that the thermostat is there only to generate hot water for the heater, its most important function is to control the operating temperature of the engine.

To operate without a thermostat, especially in cold weather, results in premature engine wear. Water in the crankcase, generated by condensation rates among the prime enemies of the internal combustion engine. For this reason, it is necessary to raise the block temperature rapidly to a point where any water in the oil evaporates and is expelled through the engine's ventilating system.

It is sometimes said that in the hot weather the water will boil with a high-temperature thermostat, but this is not so. If the thermostat is operating properly, some other cooling component must be defective and causing the overheating.

Too often the thermostat is blamed for problems that occur in the cooling system, and a new unit is installed with no further diagnosing.

A badly-overheated engine can permanently damage the thermostat. Carelessness during installation can cause immediate failure. And, of course, everyday use may sooner or later wear the thermostat out.

If the thermostat is installed upside down (an easy mistake to make) overheating will follow almost immediately.

Permanent Antifreeze Not Really

Nothing is permanent but death and taxes, to misquote an old saying.

And that includes so-called permanent anti - freeze which, when its effectiveness is gone, could at worst spell death to a car's engine and at best, tax the owner's patience.

According to the Car Care Council, even permanent - type anti - freeze can lose its effectiveness if it has been used more than a year. This is particularly true if water has been added from time to time.

Rust inhibitors, generally an ingredient in permanent antifreeze solutions, tend to break down, causing an accumulation of rust and scale in the cooling system.

Therefore, to insure against permanent engine damage due to overheating, a spring time flushing and installation of new coolant is recommended.

The council lists other basic services for keeping cooling systems in top condition. They include:

Checking the radiator and hoses for leaks under pressure. Hoses also should be examined for cracks and sponginess. Defective hoses should be replaced. In addition hose connections should be tight.

Testing the thermostat to make certain it opens at the correct temperature.

Pressure testing the radiator cap to make certain it holds the recommended pressure.

Inspecting all drive belts for fraying, cracking or deterioration. Also make sure the tension is proper.

Checking the water pump for wear.

Taking It Easy in the Mobile Home

The interior of the double-wide mobile home upholds the handsome exterior in its wood-panelled decor. Walter Richards, of Richards Trailer Sales, Trenton, recommended this trailer as a good buy because of the resale value and the comfort found in this "ready-to-live-in" trailer.

Winter Hard on Finish

After the winter's weather has gone, strong chemicals, used for melting snow and ice on roads, may still be on your car. A thorough paint cleaning and polishing helps prevent auto body deterioration.

Little Foreign Models Popular

Sales of the North American-built sub - compacts are beginning to make their impact but the foreign built imports are still capturing a sizeable share of the Quinte district auto market.

The list shows that 24.1 per cent of all new car registrations in the city were foreign built.

The ever - popular Volkswagen beetle with 46 registrations made up 25.9 per cent of the foreign car sales for the Belleville area.

Next in line was the Japanese Toyota with 31 sales or 24.2 per cent of the foreign registrations.

Next in line was the Japanese - built Datsun with 18 per cent of the foreign sales, with Mazda, a relatively new agency in Belleville capturing 6.3 per cent of the foreign car sales.

The various branches of Ford Motors captured 21.1 per cent and Chrysler, including Dodge and Plymouth, 16.4 per cent. American Motors got one per cent of the domestic - built market.

Biggest individual seller in the North American - built standard car field was Chevrolet with 12.2 per cent of the market; Pontiac was a close second with 10.9 per cent while Ford was third with 8.2 per cent.

Of the American - built subcompacts Ford's Pinto was the leader over Chevrolet's Vega by a small margin. Pinto took 3.7 per cent of the American-built market with Vega taking 3.5 per cent.

In the intermediate field, Pontiac's Le Mans was the leader with 4.5 per cent of the market. Chevrolet's Chevelle was second with 3.7 per cent; the Dodge Dart third with 2.7 per cent and Ford's Torino with 2.5 per cent.

Total new car registrations in Belleville for the four-month period were up 32.08 per cent over the same period last year.

Sales of North American-built cars jumped from 310 last year to 403 this year and foreign - built models from 92 last year to 128 for the first four months in 1971.

YOU DON'T NEED PULL

If your car begins skidding or pulling to the side when you apply your brakes, it may be a sign that your braking system needs attention. One brake is probably exerting less stopping force than the other — thus causing the skid.

Compacts Accounting for More Car Sales

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Two compacts per family instead of one large standard-sized car.

That is one of the interesting trends noted at least one local dealer as result of the growing popularity of the compact and subcompact cars.

But there is a difference in opinion whether the trend to the smaller car is taking anything away from the bigger cars.

Trudeau Motors, local distributor for Chevrolet - Oldsmobile admit there has been a definite trend toward the smaller car but, rather than taking away from the standard cars, says sales of compacts have been an added bonus.

"Our over - all sales are up 25 per cent this year — because of the small cars," said John Trudeau, vice - president of Trudeau Motors Ltd.

Another local dealer who feels that the large "standard" cars are holding their own despite the popularity of the compacts is Elliott Motors, Pontiac - Buick distributor.

"Compacts are coming on stronger but there is still a good market for the standard sized cars," said company representative Bryce Philp.

"The styling and design of the heavier cars is attractive to many buyers," he said. "With the smaller cars you forfeit ride and interior dimensions."

And the popularity of house trailers is also a factor in the continuing big car demand, Mr. Philp said heavier cars were needed to handle the big trailers.

At the same time, there is a strong demand for the smaller Pontiac T-37 and the Le Mans models, Mr. Philp said.

On the other hand, Roy Stevenson of Stevenson Ford Sales says, his sales of small cars were doubled during the first three months of this year as compared to the same period a year ago.

Motorland - Chrysler, the other local sales representative of the "big three" in the North American automotive manufacturing field, said interest in the Valiant and Dart compacts and also in the intermediate sizes was high in the Belleville area but still lagged behind other areas such as the west coast city of Vancouver.

"We are starting to get calls for the new Cricketa and for Colts but we haven't any to show customers," commented a company representative.

So far all available models in his class have been delivered to the west coast where the customer demand is higher.

However, deliveries of the new Colt are expected in Belleville in about one month. These cars are being built at a Japanese plant in which Chrysler has purchased an interest.

Short supply of some compact models was also the story at the two other local dealerships of the big three.

Ford has recently gone on overtime production at its St. Thomas plant in an effort to catch up with the demand for Pintos and Mavericks.

Mr. Stevenson says "sold" orders for these cars are coming through but admitted it was difficult to build up a stock to offer a customer choice.

Ease of handling together with lower purchase and operating costs were given as two reasons for the compacts' popularity.

Also, they were said to be in demand as the second car in the family.

Mr. Trudeau said he found the greatest interest in compacts from foreign car buyers and from new owners.

The new Vega, built in an American plant for the North American market, was seeing strong demand from just such owners.

In several instances, families had bought two Vegas instead of one large car, the local Chevrolet dealer, said.

Also in short supply was the Nova Chevy II model and the popular intermediate - sized Chevelle.

But despite the introduction of American built compacts and sub-compacts, the ever-popular German built Volkswagen "beetle" is continuing its merry way as front runner in the compact field.

Also the Japanese built Datsuns, Toyotas and Mazdas are capturing an increased percentage of the over-all market.

"The American built compacts have had no effect on us at all," said a sales representative at the Trent Road showroom of Auto Haus Bell-Ten, local Volkswagen dealer. "Actually our sales are up slightly over that of last year," he said.

Datsun 1200:
A little beauty goes a long way.

Depending on how you drive, Datsun 1200 goes about twice as far on a gallon of gas as a standard domestic car. Impressive.

But there's a good deal more to an economy car than great gas mileage. What's important is how the car behaves while it's covering all that ground.

Its turning circle is less than 27 feet.

And it comes in a choice of Sedan or Fastback models.

Datsun 1200. It's pretty. It's powerful, it's fun . . . and it's economical.

Test-drive it at your nearby Datsun dealer today.

Pre-trip Inspection Can Save Headaches

"Dear, will you 'round up the children while I check the car out? We have to leave in five minutes."

Can you imagine yourself — or any driver — going through a formal check-up procedure every time you use your car? However, if you were an airplane pilot, you would be required to check a number of things before every take-off.

Called a pre-flight inspection, this pilot's check-up involves scrutiny of fuel and oil, control surfaces, instruments, ignition system, carburetor heat control, this switch and that lever. It is pretty complicated until you know your airplane. But know it you must before you are granted a license to fly.

These checks become routine to a pilot, because he is personally responsible for the condition of his aircraft. He cannot blame anyone else if he runs out of oil at 10,000 feet or, worse, out of power as his wheels leave the ground.

It would be impractical for a driver to go through a pilot's complicated pre - flight check every time he decided to drive around the corner, but a few simple precautions can save you untold inconvenience . . . possibly agony.

Here are some pre - flight checks for your car, as suggested by the American Petroleum Institute, that any driver can and should do. They cover the things that can go wrong with your car from one trip to the next (plus some things that sneak up on you), and they constitute the only way to be reasonably sure of your car's condition.

TIRES . . . Take a walk around your car to see if any tires look low. Watch for bulges, cuts or bruises they may have suffered when you hit a curb or drove over a rock. Spend a few minutes occasionally taking a close look at the tread. Even when tread looks all right at first glance, it may not be deep enough to keep you out of trouble on a wet, smooth surface.

STEERING . . . A pilot's directional controls are his rudder, aileron and elevators, which he must check before every flight... A driver can check his steering in seconds: A hand on the steering wheel as you get into the car is all it takes.

Move the wheel two inches to see that the front wheels respond. If your car has power steering, make your test with the engine running. Listen, too, for the squealing noise that wants of impending trouble in the power steering pump or belt.

LIGHTS . . . In early all vehicle safety inspections, lights lead the list of defects. They are either out of focus or just plain out.

Imagine a pilot saying to his passenger during a night flight, "I must remember to get those identification lights fixed one of these days. Would you mind watching for any planes that seem to be coming too close!" This pilot's chances of skill would be better than those of the driver who, because he forgot to have a light fixed, hopes other drivers will see him. A walk - around light inspection takes only a few seconds. Your service man will do it for you (including a check of the brake lights and turn signals) if you ask him to.

BRAKES . . . If our brakes stopped us short of the rear wall when we pulled into the garage last night, we assume they will stop us today. Don't count on it. Instead, make these two easy checks before leaving home:

First, hold steady pressure on the brake pedal for 15 seconds before moving the car. If the pedal feels spongy or fades toward the floor, your bakes need immediate attention.

Seconds, before you have to jam on the brakes on the highway, see that the car stops straight and true at home. Brakes that pull to one side or the other because of overnight dampness can be your undoing. Fluid leakage can develop unexpectedly, too, and this can catch you with an abrupt grab to one side.

IN ADDITION to brakes, lights, steering and tires, rely on your regular service man for a half-dozen other important "pre-flight" checks. He can check and - freeze, belts, hoses, battery and cables, power steering fluid, transmission oil, windshield washer solvent and wiper blades.

Regular Tire Checks Pay Off in Safety

Proper tire inflation is essential. Underinflation causes extreme sidewall flexing, builds up excessive heat, and causes rapid wear on the tire tread's outer edges.

Overinflation causes tires to run hard, subjects them to damage and weakening of the carcass, and causes excessive wear in the middle of the tread.

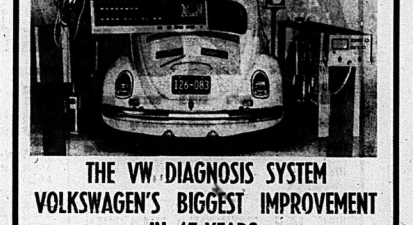
* * *

Inspect tire exterior regularly for excessive or abnormal wear, fabric breaks, and cuts. Remove imbedded foreign matter.

Add an extra three or four pounds of pressure to cold tires prior to heat trips where you anticipate driving at sustained high speeds.



* * *

Replace tires when tread is thinner than 2-32 of an inch, or the "wear indicator" on the tire appears.

Use the "air loss' method failure. A tire that loses three or more pounds of pressure in a week or less, when the others remain the same, should be removed and inspected.

Less Pollution From Well-Tuned Engine

It used to be when a motorist pulled into a service outlet and told an employee to "Check the air," it was a natural assumption to look at tire pressure.

Today, checking the air has an additional meaning. It means checking the engine to make sure the car is not adding unduly to the nation's air pollution problem.

Even though the nation's auto manufacturers have taken significant strides in reducing air pollution from automobile engines, the failure of the car owner to keep his engine in shape has helped slow progress.

For example, studies show that a five per cent incidence of spark plug misfiring, caused by engine neglect, can increase the emission of pollutants by 300 percent. And studies by a group at the University of Michigan engineering school show that harmful emissions can be reduced by an average of 56 percent after a tune-up.

Causes of pollutants are the wastes from gasoline that arem incompletely burned. These wastes from gasoline that are tuned engine.

When an engine is out of tune, there may not be complete combustion of the gasoline-air mixture and a greater production of contaminants is the result.

Therefore, an engine check every 5,000 miles and a complete tune-up every 10,000 miles is recommended.

In addition to elements of a tune-up, there are other key items to help cut down on pollution: the PCV valve, the air filter, the air filter and the gas filter.

• • •

PCV means "positive crankcase ventilation," but we can call it "pollution control valve" for easier understanding. The system has a valve which regulates the flow of noxious fumes into the carburetor so that engines will continue to burn while reducing pollution.

PCV Valves should be changed every 12,000 miles or every tune-up. If a valve becomes plugged or worn it is useless.

OIL FILTER: Smokebelching engines are worn out. They wear out when grit, acids and other junk in the oil enlarge the cylinder walls permitting the engine to burn the oil.

The best way to prevent this polluting wear is to change oil and oil filter at least every 4,000 miles.

AIR FILTER: With every gallon of gasoline a car burns, it also inhales 10,000 gallons of air. If the air is dusty, the grit wears out the cylinder walls, permitting oil to be burned, which pollutes. Also, as the filter traps dust, the amount of air entering the engine is reduced . . . enriching the fuel-air mixture, which pollutes.

So change the air filter every tune-up.

GAS FILTER: Grit in gasoline can plug carburetors and cause stalling. So it's also important to change gasoline filters.

Second Car Risky

Which is often the most neglected car on the road today? Which one poses the greatest hazard because the driver is often oblivious to its needs? And why is this so? Can the owner not afford to keep it in good condition?

The answer to these questions was brought forcefully and tragically to my attention recently when a young man of my acquaintance became another fatal traffic statistic. And the killer? — the family "second" car. And why? — because the windshield wipers were not working properly. No need to go into the sad details, but due to a series of circumstances, triggered by the failure of the wipers, this man lost his life.

Quite often the "second car" is bought as a used car or is retained when the family buys a newer model. Therefore, this car will require more upkeep to maintain. Too often, because it is used only for short runs, shopping and general family errands, the owner doesn't feel like spending much money on it.

Frequently, the tread on the tires is woefully thin, and no one worries because it isn't used for highway travel. But actually, if you are a city dweller you will be traveling at highway speeds on the interval expressways, and if you live in a smaller centre, chances are you will be traveling outside the town speed limit on errands. Remember, it takes only that split second to lose control or skid with smooth tires.

Brakes can fail at slow speeds as well as high ones. Faulty steering components can fail when cutting across street-car tracks or hitting a pothole. The owner of a second car must be more alert to trouble. Don't let economy or neglect jeopardize your family's safety.

There are some very important facts to always think about every time you switch cars, even if it is only to drive to the corner store. If your cars are a different size — maybe one is a standard, the other a compact — then make a mental note of the different space you need when passing and parking.

Frost Plugs Can Cause Mysterious Leaks

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"My car is six years old and I have owned it since it was new. I am mechanically inclined, have a good set of tools, and do most of my own repairs.

"About a month ago it became necessary to add a quart of water to the radiator every three or four days. I removed the radiator and had it cleaned and repaired by a radiator specialist. Then I replaced the radiator hoses and heater hoses and installed a new thermostat housing gasket.

"After all this work although the leak was somewhat reduced, the water continued to disappear and it was still necessary to add water to the radiator every now and then. I removed the cylinder head and sent it to a machine shop to be checked for possible cracks that could be responsible for the water seeping into the combustion chambers. However: the head checked out OK.

"I checked the cylinder walls and the top surface of the block carefully, but could find no cracks. When putting the head back on, I used a new head gasket, but the engine continued to use water. In desperation I put sheets of cardboard under the car and after leaving it parked for a day, I discovered a damp spot on the cardboard at the rear of the engine. I crawled under the car and found that water was slowly dripping from the flywheel housing.

"Could this mean that there is a crack somewhere in the rear of the block? If the block is cracked, can it be permanently repaired, or is a new engine the only answer?" — Mr. D. S., Ottawa.

To begin with, it's highly unlikely that the leak is caused by a cracked block. However, to answer your question, yes, a cracked block can usually be repaired and at a fraction of the cost of replacing the engine.

There is a cold welding process that is most effective — I used it successfully many times in my days as a garage operator. Another reliable method is to drill a series of holes for the full length of the crack and install metal plugs. Every engine is fitted with what are known as frost, or expansion, plugs. There is a common misconception that these plugs are there to be forced out in the event of the water in the head or block becoming frozen solid, and thus preventing the block from cracking. But I doubt that they would offer much protection should solid ice form inside the engine.

When the engine block and the cylinder head are being cast from molten metal at the factory, sand is used to form the hollow areas (water jackets) through which the coolant flows. After the castings have cooled, this sand must be removed and round openings are left in the block for this purpose.

After these holes have been carefully machined, the metal plugs are installed in them to retain the cooling fluid inside the block. This is the primary purpose of the frost plugs. Depending on the make of engine, these plugs differ considerably in size and are positioned in various areas of the engine block and cylinder head.

After a few years of service, they can deteriorate internally due to rust and corrosion, allowing the coolant to escape. Lack of rust inhibitor in the coolant accelerates the deterioration of the plugs.

Many engines have one of these plugs at the very rear of the block. When this one fails, depending on make of car, either the flywheel housing or the engine must be removed in order to get at and repair the defective plugs.

When fluid is disappearing from the cooling system and can be seen trickling away from the bottom of the flywheel housing, this usually indicates a leak in the rear frost plug. However, before assuming that this is definitely the cause, have the whole cooling system tested, using a recommended pressure testing machine. Coolant seepage from some area in the top of the engine will sometimes trickle down the rear of the block and the rear frost plug is blamed in error.

Where the rear of the engine is close to the firewall, it is sometimes necessary to use a mirror to detect a deceptive leak of this nature. While the average rear frost plug itself is worth perhaps 50 cents, installing it can involve a day's work or more.

CAR PICTURES

If a photo is to be taken from a car, it is always best to shoot from a stopped vehicle. If impossible to stop, it is best to shoot through the front window. If you shoot out of the side window, the foreground of the scene will be blurry. Hold the camera as steady as possible (a rule in all situations) without bracing it against the car, as the vibrations will blur the picture.

DEPENDABLE CHAMPION SPARK PLUGS

The fun trend in transportation is still on the upswing as the man from the Ro-In Speed and Custom shop illustrates. The buggy can't be driven on a road-way but that is the only place it can't be driven. Selling for about $2,000, it will guarantee a summer of laughs for the owner.

Worn Shocks Dangerous

Standard operating procedure in many homes at this time of the year is installation of screens in windows and doors. It is the time to check hardware, tighten a few screws here and there and add a drop of oil where necessary.

You may find an adjustment needed in the door closer, too. A combination of wear on the plunger and the lighter screen insert makes the door close differently.

This plunger is not onlike the shock absorbers on your car, which may be showing signs of wear after the rigors of winter. Shock absorbers are, essentially, plungers.

As the plunger on your screen door is designed to resist the forces of the closer spring, allowing the door to close gently, so the shock absorber resists the tendency of the wheel on your car to hop as it bounces off an obstruction in the road.

Shocks also keep the car's body from bobbing up and down like a rowboat at sea. The shock absorber's philosophy is to maintain the status quo; the wheels shouldn't hop and the body shouldn't bop.

Eventually, with age, a worn shock absorber loses its control of the situation. Instead of easing your wheels over bumps in the road, it lets them bounce, sometimes setting up an oscillation like a ball on a long rubber band.

If this only caused an uncomfortable ride, it would be bad enough. But there are other problems created by worn shocks. Most important is the safety factor.

When the wheel is bouncing a few inches in the air, it cannot contribute much to the steering and/or baking of your car. During this short but critical period you are virtually out of control.

Tires and suspension parts also take additional punishment when shocks lose their control. If a worn shock absorber permits these parts to suffer two or three rebounds after a bump, they will have taken double or triple punishment. You'll feel this in your repair bills sooner or later.

Think about it the next time you are driving over a bumpy road. Or better yet, before you do.

Car Owners' Encyclopedia Published

By RAY STAPLEY

In the time I've been writing this column, I've often been asked by readers: "Why don't you write a book on cars?"

A book? I found it kept me busy enough turning out a weekly column without trying to find time to write a book. I knew that the 90,000 words or so it would take to make a solid book wouldn't just suddenly materialize; they would have to be planed, thought over, and revised. So I usually dodged the question by saying that some day I might get around to writing a book — just maybe.

Well, a publisher got his hooks into me and three years of struggle later, by golly, I've done it! I've written a book. It's called The Car Owner's Handbook and it's now on sale across North America.

My publishers' description of the book makes me sound like the Dr. David Reuben (Everything You've Ever Wanted To know about sex) of cars. They call it," and say that it "tells you in easy-to understand terms everything you've ever wanted to know about your car, with a touch of gentle humor and sympathy your wife will appreciate."

Well, I hope so. I certainly tried in the book to help the ordinary guy who is bewildered by the mechanical intricacies of his car.

WINDSHIELD WIPERS

And now let's get busy with a letter I recently received from a reader who had a windshield-wiper problem.

Revealing Test

One of the most revealing tests an experienced mechanic can make for you is a compression test, in which all spark plugs are removed and pressure readings are compared with specifications.

This procedure helps your mechanic determine if the problem is in valves, rings or both. Such a test usually is part of a major engine tune-up, or may cost about $5.00 or $6.00 when done as an individual operation.

The letter goes like this:

"My car is three years old. About a month ago when I turned on the windshield wipers, the glass would just streak and it was almost impossible to see through it for about half a minute.

"I installed a new set of blades. They helped a little, but it still takes too long to clear the windshield. When driving at night, I usually have to stop the car before turning on the wipers, otherwise the headlights of oncoming cars completely block visibility.

"Can you suggest anything more I can do to make the wipers work properly? Incidentally, I never turn on the wipers until there is sufficient rain on the windshield to wash away the grime." — Miss T. G., Hamilton, Ontario

Inside the arm supporting each windshield wiper blade is a spring which ensures that the wiper blade is mating snugly with the windshield.

With curved windshields and the fact that the wind pressure at high speeds tends to lift the blade away from the glass, it's necessary for the spring to exert a fair amount of pressure. The tension of the arm should be checked to determine that the pressure is up to factory specifications. If it is not, the arm should be replaced.

It is also important that the wiper arms be adjusted so that they clean the greatest area of glass without hitting the moldings or interfering with the action of the other blade. The wiper arm is splined and is attached to a shaft which provides the oscillating motion.

Adjusting the wipers is quite simple and can usually be done in a few minutes.

In spring and summer, many motorists neglect to fill the windshield washer reservoir, or they simply add straight water. Even in mid-summer, it's not good policy to use water only. As well as preventing ice from forming on the windshield in winter, washer additives are a detergent and, regardless of outside temperatures, must be used to clean the glass effectively.

During everyday driving, the windshield becomes coated with industrial fallout, exhaust fume waste, and oil droppings from the road. Though this coating is almost invisible when the glass is dry, it will smear when mixed with water.

If the windshield is chemically coated, turning on the wipers as soon as rain starts (even if they are in good condition) can completely obscure vision unless the washers are used first to spray on detergent. And even then it may take a little time to clear away the chemical coating.

To switch on the windshield wipers, especially at night, and expect only the rain to wash off the chemicals is about as effective as trying to wash the grease out of work clothes with plain cold water.

It should be remembered that dirt on the inside of the windshield can also impair vision, especially if the car occupants are heavy smokers.

Trudeau May Ask USSR To Help Reunite Families

Trains Move In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The giant U.S. rail system began shrugging off effects of a two-day paralysis today and started moving tired commuters to their jobs and materials to factories.

Members of the 13,000-member AFL-CIO Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen, which had immobilized the rail system before Congress broke the coast-to-coast strike by passing legislation Tuesday, began removing pickets from terminals and freight yards shortly after President Nixon signed the law ending the walkout.

Union President C. J. Chamberlain notified strikers shortly before midnight Tuesday night the walkout was over and ordered them back to their jobs.

The Penn Central reported freight trains were rolling again within an hour of Nixon's decree. Other railways said they would resume service as the day progressed.

Labor Secretary James Hodgson said it probably would be 24 hours before full service was in effect, but Chamberlain said restoration "should be well along by morning."

The signalmen's union, which represents only two per cent of the 500,000-member U.S. railway labor force, went on strike at 6:01 a.m. Monday in a dispute over wages. Members of other unions did not cross picket lines and almost all service was halted

Congress quickly enacted a measure Tuesday giving the signalmen a 13.5-per-cent wage increase and ordering a halt to the walkout until at least Oct. 1. President Nixon signed the measure about 10:30 p.m.

The short-lived strike had its effects on commerce.

A dozen West Virginia coal mines were shut down; Detroit auto firms and Pittsburgh steel producers cut production. The Kellogg Co. of Battle Creek, Mich., and the Quaker Oats Co. at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, shut down altogether.

Growers and processors of perishable foods sought to divert their produce to trucks but many reported only partial success.

The walkout also affected the stock market. The New York Stock Exchange dropped sharply Monday, rose slightly at mid-Day Tuesday but closed 2.74 points down in the Dow Jones averages.

Cut in Bargaining Power Feared If Troops Pared

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. Senate votes today on Majority Leader Mike Mansfield's proposal to halve the costly 300,000-man American troop contingent in Europe.

But Senate sources said the eventual outcome of the major foreign policy dispute between the Nixon administration and the Montana Democrat actually might depend on what happens in NATO and Warsaw pact capitals during the next two or three months.

They said the White House case was certainly strengthened by the Soviet offer last week of negotiations on mutual troop withdrawals from Europe.

They said some senators who favored a troop cut and appeared inclined to support the Democratic leader now seem to have shied away, expressing concern that unilateral action by the United States might hurt the chances of reciprocal cuts by the Soviet Union.

Mansfield's plan and the several alternatives were offered as amendments to a bill extending for two years the draft law due to expire June 30.

On the eve of the vote, both the White House and Mansfield were opposing various suggested compromises on the Democratic leader's amendment.

Senate Is Expected To Again Reject SST

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Senate is almost certain to vote again today to keep the United States out of the supersonic airliner field, particularly affer the prime SST contractor, Boeing Aircraft Corp., itself dealt a major blow to plans to revive the project.

Despite White House efforts to capitalize on the sudden change of mind by the House of Representatives last week, unofficial head counts showed that the supersonic transport will lose more decisively than it did March 24, when the Senate voted 51 to 46 against it. The vote will come sometime after 5 p.m. EDT.

Even supporters of the plan to build an 1,800-mile-an-hour rival to the Anglo-French Concorde and Soviet TU-144 airliners were stunned when Boeing Board Chairman William Allen last week estimated that costs for completing two prototypes may have soared $1 billion since Congress killed the project two months ago.

The White House has been trying to counter the Boeing statement by reiterating its argument that costs of cancelling the plane will be greater than those of completing the prototypes.

However, the government's national marketing boards legislation has not passed the Commons and Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has said the Conservatives are going to continue to insist on changes in it.

'Joint Papers' Will Be Signed

MOSCOW (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Soviet Premier Kosygin held a second round of talks today and attended a luncheon at the Canadian embassy in Kosygin's honor.

Canadian officials said joint "papers" were to be signed today, but they declined to say what they were.

Canadian-Soviet trade and co-operation were expected to be the main items on today's agenda.

The Canadian leader, on the second day of a 12-day official visit to Russia, may raise the questions of reunification of families—Canada has a big population of immigrants from the Ukrine and other parts of the Soviet Union—and Jewish emigration.

Canadian officials told reporters Tuesday who asked whether he already had raised these topics: "Not yet."

During their more than three hours of talks Tuesday, Kosygin cited Soviet development of gas pipelines in permafrost regions as a possible subject for joint examination, Canadian sources said.

He said that the Soviet Union plans shortly to begin production of bigger pipelines than those made in the United States or any other country, with a diameter of 1,620 millimetres (64 inches), the sources added.

During their discussion of international questions, the two premiers exchanged views on the Middle East situation, Vietnam and the possibility of reduction of forces in Europe.

On the Middle East, Kosygin stressed that the Soviet Union supports the existence of the state of Israel, but continues to regard Israeli occupation of Arab territory as aggression.

Canadian officials said Trudeau replied by noting the need for proper guarantees of Israeli independence and said Israel had occupied Arab territory after "a great many years of intense provocation."

The sources said Kosygin called on Canada to co-operate with the Soviet Union in preparing for an all-European co-operation and security conference—subject of a long-standing proposal by the Warsaw pact countries.

Trudeau told him that Canada favors troop reductions in Europe and hopes there could be discussion to bring them about, the officials added.

Russia Wants Conference

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Soviet leaders have been laboring for about four years for a goal which they may believe is at last within their grasp: a European security conference.

Premier Kosygin's words to his Canadian guest, Prime Minister Trudeau, suggest a note of expectation that the durable campaign might eventually bear fruit.

The Russians first broached the proposal after a meeting of international Communist leaders in Czechoslovakia four years ago. The hope then appeared to be to start a process of disintegration within the North Atlantic alliance. There is a good chance they still have that goal in view.

Last week the Communist party chief, Leonid Brezhnev, offered to negotiate on the withdrawal of foreign troops from the heart of Europe. Kosygin took a cue from that and linked the troop withdrawal idea to the European security proposal. Preparations for the security conference should be stepped up, he said, and quickly added that the European situation required attention to the problem of troop and arms reduction.

No Summer Debate in House On Reform in Income Tax Law

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons does not intend to have a debate this summer on new income tax legislation, scheduled for presentation next month along with the budget.

Informants said Tuesday the government plans only routine first reading for the tax bill, which does not allow for any debate.

This would give the public and special interest groups and lobbies time to discuss the bill during the summer before a fall debate and subsequent enactment of legislation.

The government's decision not to try to hold a presumed long debate during the summer may permit MPs to take a vacation in July and August.

Allocation of Funds Questioned At Separate Board Meeting

A separate school trustee had second thoughts about the 1971 budget passed some time ago and brought in recommendations last night concerning future budget setting.

Zdenek Kvarda told trustees at the regular monthly meeting that "the budget was made up and we passed it without much study of past and future needs."

His motion to re-allocate $915 of the $2,685,000 budget for equipment was defeated because of technicalities of the government grant system.

Mr. Kvarda, supported by Joseph Chapelle, wanted to delete 10 per cent from budgeted convention expenditures and spend this money for school equipment, chiefly tape recorders.

But business administrator Edgar Paquet said such school equipment was considered a capital expenditure and if the $915 were transferred from the operating budget to the capital budget, the government would not pay grants on it. The province this year will pay 88.12 per cent of the cost of operating the Hastings - Prince Edward county separate schools.

Mr. Kvarda also recommended that all new programs be reviewed and brought to the board before the budget is made up.

"Reports with recommendation for future expenditures were received after the budget was set," said Mr. Kvarda, referring to reports heard at the last board meeting from teachers in charge of some school programs.

"In future, let's hear these reports before the budget is set so trustees can decide on the recommended expenditures," the trustee said.

Board chairman Ben Kroeze said there was merit in Mr. Kvarda's suggestion. He said the reports from the, teachers and program heads had been received some time before the budget was set, but presentation to the board had been deferred until last month.

"We have had some difficulties in the past and hope they will be cleared up with our new superintendent arrives," the chairman said. "We get no explanations as to what should be done if programs were to be changed."

Mr. Kvarda also brought up two items not included in the budget and asked where the money was coming from to pay for them.

County Nursing Home Opposed by Speaker

PICTON (Staff) — Delegates representing Prince Edward County's nursing homes last night petitioned county council to avoid competition with private enterprise by using the taxpayers' dollar.

Spokesman for the group, Torontonian Lloyd Stevenson, president of the Associated Nursing Homes of Ontario urged councillors not to convert a home for the aged to a nursing home by focusing on provision of bed care for residents. "We are not at war with homes for the aged, however, they are caring for more and more persons who require nursing care," he observed.

Mr. Stevenson told council Prince Edward has nine nursing homes offering a combined total of 329 beds, 43 of which are now available. He suggested recent plans for a new county home may not be as urgently required as council believes.

The speaker noted that construction costs of county homes are shared equally between the municipality and the provincial government and there is no taxation. For this reason, he said rural home operators argue with the per diem costs quoted by the homes. He referred to a Toronto home for the aged which operates at a cost of $12.50 per day, but this figure excludes capital expenditures which would raise it to approximately $16.

Mr. Stevenson remarked that a cost comparison of nursing homes and homes for the aged is similar to a comparison of apples and oranges.

He criticized the county's trend to introduce bed care wings in new county homes suggesting that this is competition with free enterprise subsidized by the taxpayer. "Nursing homes look after anyone requiring nursing care without active medical treatment," he explained. Mr. Stevenson added that homes for the aged should be built to house senior citizens in good health who do not need nursing care.

At the request of Picton reeve Albert Pirrels, the speaker quoted cost figures for nursing home residents. He noted the government provides a subsidy of $10.50 per day to persons living in these care centres. Private rooms with extra facilities could cost up to $21 daily making the estimated monthly cost of residence range from $300 to $600. Government subsidies do not exceed $10.50 per day for residents receiving financial aid.

Mr. Stevenson claimed residents in county homes who have substantial savings are indirectly receiving government subsidies when they are required to pay a per diem rate which does not include an allowance for capital expenditures. He added that in nursing homes, the actual cost is paid since operating charges combined with other costs set the per diem rate.

A feasibility study in the Prince Edward area was advocated to council before construction of a new county home is begun. Mr. Steyenson suggested that the study could be kept completely objective if representatives from the county's nursing homes formed part of the study team.

"We shouldn't be building orphanages for the aged," warned Mr. Stevenson. He commented that senior citizens who have been self-sufficient in apartments should not reside in homes for the aged. Persons still capable of caring for themselves should be accommodated in subsidized apartments.

The delegate referred to "a stigma" attached to former Ontario Hospital patients now released to nursing homes and considered it groundless. When questioned by warden Allan Anderson concerning the advisability of permitting these persons to mingle with other nursing home residents, Mr. Stevenson supported the program. "Those who come from Ontario Hospital are certified sane and if you can walk in and point them out, someone should give you a golden apple," he asserted.

Mr. Stevenson noted that a ready flow of residents from homes for the aged to nursing homes is possible with a total concept of health care. Elderly persons who become ill while in a home for the aged could be temporarily transferred to a nursing home for care. "It's a total concept with everyone in the right slot at the right time," he observed.

West Hill Residents Want Apartment Ban

Members of the West Hill Ratepayers' Association will ask for "freezing" legislation for two specific West Hill areas to ban construction of apartment buildings.

The action was taken at an association meeting held last night at the Sir Mackenzie Bowell public school when they voted to forward the freezing request to the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board.

Mr. Kvarda also brought up two items not included in the budget and asked where the money was coming from to pay for them.

Association president Ted Fletcher said one resident Douglas Preston will take the request before the planning board at its Thursday night meeting at city hall.

Last night's meeting of the West Hill ratepayers was called to plan action regarding the possible loss of the Wellington Crescent playground which is being offered for sale by Albert College.

Fears are that the 2.2 acre property will be sold to a developer who would erect apartments blocks or a high rise causing traffic congestion on narrow streets and overloading of sewers.

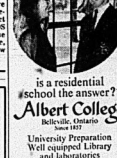
Area residents said that Charlotte Street has already been "ruined" by the construction of apartment blocks.

Two petitions — one asking the city to purchase the Albert College property and to retain it for a playground and greenbelt area, and the other calling for rezoning of the area from the present "H" to "A" have been presented to city council.

Council has all but ruled against purchase of the property because of the price factor and has directed the planning board to consider rezoning for the West Hill area.

But approval for rezoning could take months, especially if there are objections. In the meantime, in bar apartment construction, the freezing action is being asked.

Three members of city council, Aldermen Mrs. Jean Smith, E. A. Orr and Jack Ireland attended the meeting but were unable to say whether freezing action was possible.



Mrs. Jean Orr, as member of the planning board, said the association's motion would be kept at the matter before the board where staff members could provide the answers.

The area for which freezing is asked is for Charlotte, Burton, Moodie, Parker, Warne, Ritchie Streets, Highland Ave., Wellington Crescent, the east side of Wellington Street and Albert College property east of Wellington Crescent.

On a motion from Ray Gunsolus, association members endorsed the two petitions of west hill residents asking for the city to purchase the Albert College property and to rezone the above west hill area.

In the meantime, Albert College has made application to the committee of adjustment for a land split to open the way for sale of the Wellington Crescent playground property.

At the request of city council the committee of adjustment has deferred the application hearing until May 27.

REAL ESTATE
WHAT'S AHEAD IN THE PRICE OF HOUSES?

A fact of life we all have to contend with is that the value of our dollar is not what it used to be and is likely to become more so.

Over the last decade, inflation has reduced the buying power of our currency by some 26 per cent and the change has shown up in the price of houses. Especially since 1967 when a trotting inflation began to gallop.

House price increases vary from one part of the country to another, depending on growth trends affecting land costs. But everywhere they have faithfully followed rising construction and industrial wages.

Buyers seeking home who have not been in touch with the real estate market for a number of years sometimes find it difficult to accept current price levels.

But if there is one obvious lesson of modern times it is that the prices of today may look like incredible bargains in the future just as the values of five years ago look today.

The house you put off buying now is almost certain to cost you more next year.

Parading in their new uniforms on their first public appearance, the Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 Pipe Band looked resplendent and very smart. The occasion was the annual inspection of 608 squadron RCAC Corps recently sponsored by Unit 201.

The Unit donated a trophy named Youth and Good Citizenship Award, to be presented annually to the cadet who excelled in good conduct, smartness and schooling on and off parade. Pres. John Browning presented it for the first time to WO2 K. Watson Cadet 2 Yr.

Dom. Pres. J. C. Lundberg was honored guest and was honored to have a honorary membership in 608 Squadron conferred on him by Capt. Foley, O.C. 608 Squadron.

Chairman S. Melbourne, Sponsoring Committee, accepted thanks and a Citation of Appreciation on behalf of the Unit from Air Commodore A. D. Ross, representative of the Air Cadet League.

For those interested, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will hold their annual inspection next Sunday, May 23. Ex - members are cordially invited to attend.

Clear sunny skies with a gentle breeze and the temperature moderate promised an ideal day for the Good Will Day International Band and Marching Competitions held in Kingston last Saturday. A convoy of cars loaded with enthusiastic members and a bus carrying an optimistic Pipe Band and Color Party left Belleville with high hopes of adding yet another trophy or two to the impressive display won in past competitions. Pipe Major D. McCamley believes that the band this year is as highly trained and with their new dress, smarter looking than he has seen in a long time.

Between 8 and 9 p.m. the band came storming into the club and one look at their beaming faces told the story of yet another victory. Competing against 21 other pipe bands from both sides of the border the Unit Band won the best pipe band award by a three to one decision. Helping the band in their victory were two charming lassies, wee "Snuffy" Richardson and Lindy Wilson. They certainly did their bit and were a welcome addition to the band. The Color Party looked very smart. All in all, it was a grand day in every way.

Two welcome visitors to the club Saturday were former treasurers before being moved to other cities. They were Cdo. "Ernie" Gray, Toronto, and Dom. Sec-Treas. "Mac" McArthur, Ottawa.

Although several members are convalescing at home the hospital list is the smallest in some time with only two comrades in the Belleville General Hospital. They are Cdes. L. Vance, room 308 and R. Reid, room 718.

Trail Map Under Way

TWEED (Special) — The new Hastings county snowmobile trail, marked out last winter, is to be outlined on a map currently being prepared by the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Region.

George Ellsworth, manager of the tourist region, recently drove over the trail made last winter to link Tweed, Madoc and county snowmobile trails north of Highway 7 and said there was no point in waiting until next November before beginning to work on the map.

The Tweed - Madoc trail, which follows lesser used township roads by way of Downey's Rapids, is said to be one of the most attractive in the county system.

May Is MS Month

The Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada has designated the month of May as the month to appeal to the public for assistance in raising funds to expand its research activities.

The Society is spending $130,000 at nine Canadian universities and teaching hospitals this year on problems directly related to multiple sclerosis and has also granted three studentships by persons training in the neurological field to encourage post - graduate research.

This program is financed through local chapter participation in some social funds and by private donations.

Multiple sclerosis is a neurological disease which may produce paralysis and loss of sensation affecting bodily functions including vision, speech, balance and movement. An estimated 25,000 Canadians are victims of this crippling disease.

They're Doing Something About It

A light-hearted look at pollution on the part of Queen Victoria School pupils had a serious purpose under all the fun — bringing an awareness of what young people can do about the problem through the vehicle of student-produced drama. Pollution Solution, written by Mrs. Helen Jones' grade 6 language pupils, with parodies on popular songs, was performed for the last time yesterday, with pupils from other schools as guests. Scenery and costumes of the satire were also made by the pupils and almost every child in the school was involved, including the youngest who made up the chorus.

Rock Festival Is on 'Regardless'

Rock Acres Peace Festival in Madoc township will go on "come hell or high water" and, presumably, in spite of mounting municipal opposition.

James Quinlan jr. and his brother Leon, principals in the family company, LEJJ Enterprises that also includes their father, James sr., said yesterday that the festival is still slated for July 3,4 and 5 on their farm near Queensboro.

Madoc township has passed two bylaws to regulate public gatherings that last more than 24 hours. The first calls for a $500 licence fee and stringent requirements to cover costs of property damage, cleanup operations and police protection. The second is a land-use bylaw, freezing all but its present use until the Hastings county official plan is adopted.

"There was no law against it when it started and it's illegal to stop it now," Mr. Quinlan sr. told The Intelligencer, over a week ago.

He called the municipal opposition to rock festivals throughout the county "partiality" and added that his family is "no better off here than the Negroes in Georgia".

Reports have been received here that the festival is being advertised as far away as San Francisco. The Quinlans say that about 11,000 tickets have been issued between Montreal and London, Ont. and about half have been sold.

The principals of LEJJ Enterprises are being interviewed this week by CFTO News in Toronto and the interview will be televised over Channel 9 at a later date.

$100,000 Tag On Widening Job

Widening of North Front Street in the Bell Blvd. area to accommodate expected traffic to the new Quinte Mall could cost up to $100,000.

Of the total estimated cost, a subsidy of $40,000 is to be received from the province of Ontario with another $40,000 to be recovered through "miscellaneous" revenue, leaving approximately $20,000 to be paid by the city.

City Vetoes LORDC Membership

Belleville city council has turned down membership in the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council.

The action was taken at Monday's budget meeting at which 1971 tax rate was set, despite strong pleas by several aldermen. The cost would have been $2,150.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey brought in the motion stating that the LORDC was an important liaison organization in which the city didn't have a voice.

Alderman Jack Ireland also urged city membership, claiming that the provincial government felt all municipalities should belong.

In not belonging, the alderman said the city was being criticized by neighboring municipalities who felt Belleville was adopting an isolation policy with respect to fire protection and sewer policies.

"Our neighbors don't think much of us," he said, "They feel we are freeloaders."

The comment brought an objection from Mayor J. R. Sills who said city relations with other municipalities were "better than ever".

"We want to co-operate in providing sewer and water service," he said.

Alderman Donald Soutter agreed, noting that Belleville had been the first municipality in the province to voluntarily join in an area sewer and water service plan.

Alderman Gerald Joyce, chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission said his organization was opposed to membership in the LORDC.

The matter, he said, had been brought up at a commission meeting and had been soundly defeated.

The feeling was that LORDC in the past several years had not been of any benefit to the city.

Winter Hard on Roads And Our Pocketbooks

The past winter was tough on roads and also on the taxpayers' pocketbooks.

This was indicated by 1971 budget figures approved by city council Monday which show a cost estimate of $171,500 for what is termed winter control.

And there was also a further item of $83,000 for road patching which Mayor Scott said could rightfully be classed as winter road damage.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds, in his budget report, noted that the winter control item of $171,500 was an increase of approximately 50 per cent over last year's figure.

For the most part, the increase was due to the heavy snowfall during the early part of the year and was sufficient only to cover actual expenditures to date, plus a normal amount to cover winter control operations next December.

Alderman Enos David wondered if too much salt wasn't being used on city streets and asked if the amount used could be reduced.

But the purpose of salt application to streets was to keep roads in a condition to prevent accidents.

"We don't think we are using too much," he said.

And there should be a more satisfactory program of sidewalk plowing next winter.

The public works budget includes an item of $13,000 for the purchase of two industrial Bombardiers which were said more satisfactory for sidewalk work than the Jeeps until now used by the city.

Tyrone Guthrie

Sir Tyrone Guthrie, eminent director, playwright and producer, was not only a man of many talents, he was an internationalist in terms of family background, domicile and the widely-scattered parts of the world upon which he made a personal impact.

Even if he had not made a name for himself in the field of dramatic arts, Sir Tyrone would have been an imposing figure. Indeed he had more of the look of a military man than one connected with the stage. We saw him across Belfast's Great Victoria Street some years ago, not far, appropriately, from the city's Grand Opera House. His tall, spare figure was instantly recognizable, but to most citizens that day he was just a tall gentleman walking along a city street.

Sir Tyrone was later to become Chancellor of Queen's University, Belfast, a post once held by another famous Ulsterman, Viscount Alanbrooke, retiring after nearly a decade in this largely ceremonial role last year. Had he lived, he would have been saddened by the cancellation of the London Festival Ballet's week-long engagement at the Opera House. The visit was to be part of the Ulster '71 festivities and, unhappily, was cancelled because of renewed trouble in the province as well as threatening letters to Beryl Grey, the ballet company's artistic letter.

As a man so rooted in the dramatic arts, Sir Tyrone could not claim to be above the troubles of the Irish political scene, for the country's theatrical tradition drew much of its inspiration from such unrest. Nevertheless, the current problems likely disturbed him as much as any. His own lack of "side" was evident from the fact he made his home in Newbliss, County Monaghan, which although it is just across the border in the Irish Republic is also part of the province of Ulster — this being one of the ironies of Irish politics in a country where Ulster is synonymous with Northern Ireland. Donegal and Cavan are two other republican counties which also are part of the province of Ulster.

Sir Tyrone would have been troubled by such events because his own talents and character were creative rather than destructive and known in much of the world for his association with the Stratford Shakespearean theatre here in Ontario of course is known to most Canadians. Having helped launch that project he established a theatre in Minneapolis and even before coming to Canada in 1953 he produced numerous works in London, New York, Australia, Finland and Israel. There had been plans to have him return to Stratford. Now his span is over. Nevertheless, he accomplished much. He was a true man of the world.

Showing The Flag

The big 707 jets which have replaced the turbo-prop Yukons could not have been acquired in more timely fashion. Indeed Ottawa must have had them in mind all along, with those visits by the Prime Minister to the South Pacific and Singapore, and now the Soviet Union, on the horizon.

Nothing like showing the flag in a good old product of those imperialists, the Americans. The Yukon, to be sure, would have been more of a Canadian product (albeit an adaptation of the old U.K. British Britannia), but we could have run the risk of making a less than effective impression on the air conscious Russians. Sure, the 707 is an American plane, but those Canadian colors and Canadian Armed Forces in big bold red letters do a good job of projecting the Canadian image. We think even the Russians would have been impressed when the P.M. and Mrs. Trudeau arrived in their big flying machine.

U.S. Rail Strike

In the United States the railway workers have gone on strike, and the word is that the economy as a result could sink to a low comparable to depression days. Transport of many vital materials like coal, lumber and so on are dependent entirely on the railroads.

Things then may come to the proverbial pretty pass in the United States, if the railroad men stay out for any length of time. But somehow we doubt if Washington will permit things to go beyond that.

We are reminded though of how vital are the railroads, particularly in the handling of freight. In short they are indispensable, and those who serve them, the men who in the words of the old song are "working for the railroad," should have their due material reward.

P.M. Suggests New Pecking Order

Incomes, Social Worth, Status, and All That

The Globe and Mail

The bargaining table has been the scene of many strange claims, but probably none so unfathomable as those based upon comparisons of incomes. The construction workers' negotiator draws from his inside pocket a list which shows the current incomes of policemen, firemen, doctors, lawyers and lumberjacks and thumps it down decisively.

Maybe it is dramatic at the time, but what on earth is it supposed to signify? Comparison of this kind invites us to make the kind of evaluation for which we are not yet equipped.

Should a lawyer earn more than a dentist? Should one be permitted to extract more from us than the other? Can it be argued that the average householder would be in greater trouble without the services of a plumber or those of an electrician?

Should income be related to professional integrity, to public demand for services, to the color of a man's collar, to the emotional stress of the occupation, to the energy it requires each day, or to the contribution made to society as a whole?

The other day Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau was deploring the worship that went on in the temple of gross national product and suggesting that GNP might be replaced with a more revealing figure — "a new statistic which might be called net social benefit". He was talking generally about economics, environment and people, but there is the germ of an idea there.

Perhaps what is needed is a scale of net social worth from which income, and quite possibly status, would be measured. The big question that arises, of course, is to whom can we turn for evaluation and assignment of pecking order?

To Parliament, of course. This is a democracy, after all, and surely we can look to Parliament Hill for a dispassionate assessment of ratings, occupation by occupation. Enough of this futile preaching about 6 per cent guidelines. All we have to do is get ourselves in the proper order and fix the annual increment.

Anyone who fears that perhaps our elected representatives lack ability or flair for this kind of thing, or that they might be deflected by the wrath of the public, clearly has misjudged the calibre of our parliamentarians. In fact, a modest start has already been made.

Well, not too modest. The subject was the salaries and expenses of members of Parliament, and Marcel Lambert (PC, Edmonton West) was the one with the comparison list. He presented the Commons Procedure and Organization Committee with the number of civil servants being paid more than $18,000 a year, and added the intriguing thought that "MPs are as useful as, if not far superior to, these people".

There. A start has been made by establishing the relative positions of MPs and civil servants. The first levels on the ladder of net social worth have been established and it's just a matter of fitting the remaining pieces into place.

Interest on Lawyers' Trust Accounts

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Interest on lawyers' trust accounts should be used to finance legal aid in Ontario.

The Law Society of Upper Canada, governing body for Ontario Legal Aid, has now elected its new executive for the next five years. It is time to resolve the muddle over the interest on lawyers' trust accounts to the benefit of someone other than the banks and trust companies.

There are about 7,600 lawyers in Ontario and the average general practitioner has many thousands of dollars in his trust account on behalf of clients at any given time. Although the length of time funds of a particular client are in trust may be only a few days, the flow-through results in substantial trust balances at any time. Some lawyers have no trust funds, while others have hundreds of thousands and some bigger firms, millions. The interest on these funds is substantial. Assuming an average per lawyer of $30,000 (a conservative estimate) at 6 per cent this means about $1,500 per lawyer per year, or about $11,400,000 per year in Ontario.

Since most funds are just held a few days, it is impractical to allocate interest to individual clients and the disposition of this income has perplexed the Law Society for some years.

Until the 1960's, there was no formal rule. The Law Society decided this was wrong, and ruled that lawyers could keep the interest. Some lawyers did so and used it to offset cheque charges and other charges imposed by banks and trust companies. Then the Law Society decided this was wrong, and ruled that lawyers could keep the interest, but that they must pay it to clients and that the banks and trust companies should be given the money interest free at 6 per cent.

This means in effect that by rule of The Law Society, many of the people of Ontario through the lawyers indirectly subsidize the banks and trust companies. These institutions have no similar inhibitions when setting interest rates or cheque charges and have accepted the arrangements cheerfully.

If my estimate is correct, this gift to the banks and trust companies may be worth about $11.4 millions a year while the Legal Aid Plan now operated by the Law Society for the Province of Ontario costs the taxpayers of Ontario about $10.2 millions per year.

Manitoba recently announced plans to use interest on lawyers' trust accounts to finance legal aid. In Ontario, the Attorney General's Advisory Committee on Legal Aid Services has recommended that all law firms are required to keep special trust accounts so designated on the books of the banking institutions. A simple direction to the bank or trust company that all interest on such accounts should be forwarded to the Law Society would be adequate. Such a system should be applauded by all, except the banks and trust companies.

Hopefully the new executive elected April 16th will give this matter immediate consideration.

Rock Festivals, the Public, and the Law

Brockville Recorder and Times

It appears that Ontario may be in for a series of big, large scale rock festivals which were one of the less pleasant features of the 1970 summer season. Many of these "happenings" were marked by heavy drug abuse and sexual athletics and the reaction of most taxpayers[who get stuck with some hefty festival bills last year] will be: Good riddance.

But if the rock festivals are really to disappear from the Ontario scene, not much credit will be due the provincial government. After the Strawberry Fields festival at Mosport last August cost the provincial treasury $130,000 for police and medical expenses, former Premier Robarts announced his intention of bringing in legislation to make the promoters pay for such services. Nine months later, no such legislation has been introduced and Bert Lawrence, the new Health minister, says he has no plans for bringing such a bill before the legislature.

A survey by The Canadian Press has discovered only one major rock festival planned thus far for the summer and the credit, it appears, belongs to lowlship councils and (although they are reluctant to take any bows), the Ontario Provincial Police. Local governments, especially in those counties considered likely "target areas" for festivals, have been briskly drafting bylaws to keep them away. A typical case was Malahide Township, north of Belmore village where the council — on learning that a festival was planned for July — passed legislation forcing the promoter to pay for a $500 licence, post a $200,000 public liability bond and pay the costs of policing and cleanup services.

Spokesmen for the OPP — a little publicity-shy on the subject — deny that they are conducting any anti-festival crusade. They say that they discuss rock festivals with municipalities only "when invited". Police officials usually get the thankless policing job by their interest in the subject is generally understandable.

Wily promoters have, however, managed to bypass the law before (and may again) and perhaps the chief reason for the lack of action on the festival scene at present is the type of young people who attend them. In keeping with their general philosophy that the world owes them a living, they are reluctant to pay their way in, much preferring to gatecrash. One of the promoters of Festival Expo, which lost a $350,000 on three shows last summer, says the rock festival era is being killed by freeloaders — "people who don't feel they should contribute anything else but their presence." There is something particularly fitting about the idea that the festival fad should flounder because its fans feel that the whole thing should be served up to them "for free."

Kingston Tackles Drug Abuse

Kingston Whig Standard

The drug problem could be the most pervasive psychological problem that society has ever faced. A problem which embraces all sections of society it is deserving of much more intensive study on the professional level. Clearly, the traditional punitive approach to this problem hasn't discouraged young people or adults from drug use. In fact, the punishment of distributors of the various illicit drugs are reaping greater profits each year.

The signs of a more enlightened official and public approach by the problem of drug abuse in Canada must be regarded as encouraging. That there is more about drug addiction is beyond question. Education on an even wider scale than at present is essential. The fact remains, however, that drug abuse is a medical social problem and that far too long has been labelled a legal problem and assigned to law enforcement agencies rather than the health professions. It is clear that we must deal more intensively with the causes of drug abuse as well as the results.

The Kingston significant strides have been made both in drug education and in treatment facilities. As a recent news report revealed, Hotel Dieu Hospital, for example, is developing a program to provide treatment and care for victims of drug overdoses and drug abuse. The committee responsible for the program includes Mr. Eric Brown, HDH administrator, and representatives of the Board of Governors, the religious sisters, the emergency department, nursing service, medical staff, pharmacy and social services. As committee chairman, Walter J. Vos, director of medical social service, noted, "The drug victim finds it is not a hospital personnel, hostility, rather than help, bureaucracy rather than treatment, morality and even ill-will rather than understanding. It must be kept in mind that the youth drug problem is a community problem and that solutions do not rest upon one single organization or institution . . . The Hotel Dieu Hospital is involved and accepts its share of the responsibility."

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward Heights, the new Department of Health complex for the retarded expected to open here this month will function primarily as an educational institution.

Norris Whitney, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox, said in a telephone interview from Toronto that education will be stressed more than a concept of hospital care. Mr. Whitney, who christened the institution "Prince Edward Heights" noted nothing in its name implies a hospital. He said he suggested the name "because it gives something of the whole county," and imparts the thought that children residing at the complex have a part in the scheme of things.

Although Prince Edward Heights is expected to welcome its first residents this month, no definite date for their arrival has been announced. "It could happen any day now," commented Mr. Whitney. He emphasized development of the complex will be gradual and added he does not expect there will be an official public opening.

Mr. Whitney described Prince Edward Heights as "something to be proud of in the long run" and remarked it will be one of very few examples of its kind in the world. He again pointed out that the term hospital should be rejected, adding that possibly some residents of the complex eventually could find employment in the community while still residing at Prince Edward Heights.

A government announcement of a $2.2 - million allotment to development of the complex site prompted Mr. Whitney to observe "a lot of work will be done over quite a period of time." He referred to a meeting in the school at the former army base when the department of health arranged its takeover and said the school building obviously needed repair. Mr. Whitney commented that the houses and buildings left vacant even for a year, probably would require repairs.

Prince Edward Heights will provide local employment but only to persons well qualified for the jobs involved. Mr. Whitney said he had received a volume of letters from job seekers but asserted that there is no way for everyone to obtain work without proper qualifications. "It's a provincial institution and they certainly will hire people they don't feel can do the best job on the children's behalf," he declared.

Mr. Whitney suggested that the Department of Health will begin "some of its own people" who can direct others until they grow more proficient. He said it might be possible to initiate courses which would allow local employees to upgrade their positions. "It's a specialty of its own type", he remarked discussing the training required by complex staff members. "Gradually we'll learn so that people can guide their education according to fill jobs there", he stated. Mr. Whitney suggested that teachers and nurses, for example, could take special courses to equip them for positions at Prince Edward Heights.

An added benefit of the location of the complex in Prince Edward is the reported swift turnover in real estate. Mr. Whitney also observed many of the needs for Prince Edward Heights will be purchased locally, boosting the economy.

Robert P. MacKenzie, administrator for Prince Edward Heights has reportedly stated that about 40 persons already have been hired to staff the complex, most of them transfers from other units who will form the core into various sections and supplement group of already trained senior personnel. It has been employ about 450 persons when it is operating at capacity. Within three years it is expected to house approximately 600 residents mainly from the Quinte-Kingston area.

Claude Halpin, administrator of Rideau Regional Hospital, Smith Falls, reportedly has said about 32 residents will be transferred to Prince Edward Heights this month. By the end of the summer the school hopes to transfer an additional 120 with an eventual goal of 400 transfers at the close of 1972.

Pipeline Decision Near in Trenton

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The Public Utilities Commission is expected to meet here tomorrow or Friday to put the final seal of approval on servicing arrangements for Dufferin Developments.

The commission has been faced with three options for servicing the 300 home subdivision: extending water mains from Dufferin Avenue in two routes (one through Sunrise Developments, another around it) and a third course along Dundas West and southward.

It is expected the PUC will agree to service the development from Dundas West at an approximate cost of $83,000, with the additional cost of a new pumping station at Fourth Ave. A booster plant on Mt. Pelion is also needed.

Officials of Gore and Storrie, the commission's Toronto consultants, have examined the options with PUC staff and conclude the answer is Dundas.

One of the main concerns of the consulting firm in dealing with the matter has been low water pressure in Stanley Heights and the entire general area north of Dundas West at the town's western fringe.

It is felt the Dundas line will help the water supply in this quarter of the town and in Dufferin Developments to the south. Furthermore growth projections for Trenton call for major building schemes westward on both sides of Dundas. By putting trunk lines along the route, not only Dufferin but other developments would be assisted.

Gore and Storrie contend it would be difficult to service the new subdivision from Dufferin Ave., because of adverse topographical conditions along the route.

In any case, much of the area on this path is designated for park land in the town's new official plan — building in the vicinity is unlikely.

JIM CLEVELAND

The Belleville Family YMCA has announced that Jim Cleveland, a former Torontonian and Bachelor of Science graduate from the University of Waterloo, has been appointed physical education director at the Y. This new position has been created by the Y to be supplemented by three or four regular part-time workers in the education department. Mr. Cleveland took over his new duties Monday, May 17. Former program directors, Dave Hahn and Mrs. Maureen Borland will be taking up new positions. On June 14.

Finishing Touches Going On New Legion Building

When the Belleville branch of the Royal Canadian Legion opens the doors of its new centre, now being completed on the west side of Pinnacle Street, the city will have a modern centre containing lounges, games rooms and two banquet halls that can each seat up to 600 guests.

The ground floor is permanently reserved for the needs of the rapidly growing veteran population of the city and district. The other two floors may be licensed as required so that much needed dining room accommodation can be made available from time to time for large convention groups or special dinner events.

The strategic location of the new hall, just around the corner from the City Hall and the market square, next door to the arena and close to adequate parking facilities will make an impact on the entire downtown district, a Legion spokesman said.

The modern facilities of the building, from its heat conversion air - conditioning to the special ducting for closed-circuit television, is the creation of R. H. Vaughan, Mr. Vaughan was responsible for a course under he Board of Education in which many veterans learned the practical skills necessary for construc-

Bellevillians On Executive

Three Belleville area residents were recently elected to the executive of the Eastern Ontario District of the Purchasing Management Association of Canada: J. B. Harns, Mead Johnson Canada, Belleville, 2nd vice - president; L. Burley, Ideal Venders, Deseronto, director; D. A. Laundry, Wilson Concrete Products Ltd., Belleville, chairman, advisory committee.

Retiring president D. A. Laundry was awarded the Past Presidents' pin by his successor, H. S. White of Brockville.

With the assistance of fellow Legion members, along with a number of tradesmen and professional men of the area, costs have been kept to a minimum without the sacrifice of quality. Supervisory assistance and surplus materials have been donated or supplied at cost prices. As a result, the fully - equipped centre has been finished at a cost per square foot that will approximate $12, to bring total construction costs to a figure of approximately $70,000.

Jack Rashotte, president of the branch stated, "While our first thought must be for the veterans for whom the Legion exists, we know that these rooms will give the branch an opportunity to offer something really useful to the city of Belleville and to its tourist and convention industry. We are also now in a position to take care of all veterans in a worthwhile place of their own."

Ann Landers

Wife Finds Excuses For Her Nagging

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I say a word in behalf of a segment of society of whom you have neither patience nor sympathy? I refer to the Nagging Wife. I can speak authoritatively because I am one.

I did not get this way by accident. Naggers are made; not born. When I married, I was a young, naive, romantic girl. Today I am a nag. Why? Because I married a man who sincerely believes that one day he will replace the missing light bulb in the nursery, put a screw in the basement door knob, install a dozen cup hooks in my pantry, tighten the kitchen drawer handles, bleed the upstairs radiators, etc., etc. He started building a wall cabinet three years ago. It still isn't finished.

ANN LANDERS

My husband works hard. He is home every night, loves his children and is good to me. But, he has turned me into a shrew simply because he is too lazy to do small things.

In closing I would like to say a word to all husbands who have this problem: Don't be ashamed to call a carpenter, a painter or a handyman. Your wife will not respect you less for it. Undone chores can make a wife irritable. It can transform her into the kind of woman she doesn't want to be. I know because I'm an — UNWILLING SCREAMER IN MONTICELLO, N.Y.

DEAR SCREAMER: Bolderdash, dearie. If you didn't enjoy screaming you'd put in the light bulb yourself, install your own cup hooks, etc. If you're so lame-brained that you cannot do these things, you can, I trust, use a telephone. So why don't you call the carpenter or the handyman?

By your own admission you have a husband who is home every night, loves the children and is good to you. Yet you let a few two-bit details spoil your marriage. You make me sick, kiddo.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That fellow who is "healthy as a horse" but falls asleep in movies, at the soker table and in the middle of conversations might have narcolepsy. His wife reported that he had undergone stomach X-rays, thyriod tests, and so on and the doctor gave him a clean bill-of health. Narcolepsy would not show up in these tests. The man should be seen by a nerologist.

I hope you can get the word to them. — MEMPHIS NEUROSURGEON.

DEAR DOCTOR: I received similar letters from dozens of other physicians (three from the Mayo Clinic) and I am grateful to all who wrote. You have reminded me once again the importance of urging people to seek a second medical opinion if they fail to get satisfaction from the first. A competent General Practitioner should be able to recognize the symptoms of narcolepsy. That patient should have been referred to a neurologist.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a small problem that bothers me maybe more than it should. I am 24. My steady girl is 23. Lena is very lively and vivacious, which I am not. Whenever we go anywhere, like to a ball game or a movie, or even to a restaurant, Lee starts up conversations with strangers who are sitting close by — usually men.

I don't think this is right. She says, "I am an outgoing person and I mean no harm." What do you think? — GERRY.

DEAR GERRY: Your girl's "outgoing personality" should not be going out to people she doesn't know, I agree. Lee should knock it off — lest she be misunderstood.

Open the barbecue season with a mixed grill. Mary Moore gives you ideas that may be varied for two or three cookouts: country style ring sausage, pork chops, link sausages and a new hamburger recipe.

Holiday Mixed Grill

By MARY MOORE

Wouldn't Queen Victoria be surprised to discover us celebrating her birthday in such a casual way — a barbecue supper!

A Scientologist would claim she knows.

The mixed grill I prepared was popular: country style ring sausage; pork chops (with fatbb); link sausages and hamburgers with a new idea.

These assorted meats may be grilled under your preheated stove broiler. The cooking times are approximately the same.

1 lb. (or more) country style ring sausage
4 one-inch thick pork (or lamb) chops
8 link sausages
1 lb. ground chuck (for New Hamburgers — see below)

Make the New Hamburgers first: Combine the 1 lb. ground chuck with ¾ cup finely chopped, pared Spy apple, 1 egg, 1½ tsps. Worcestershire sauce 1 tbsp. catsup, ¾ tsp. salt and 1-3 cup water. Shape into four or six meat cakes.

Grease your grill sparingly. Place the chops near centre. If desired cut the country sausage ring into serving pieces and place around chops then add meat cakes on the outside perimeter. Place over glowing coals and cook on one side until all are brown. Turn over and add link sausages (which do not take as long to cook) and cook other side, turning sausages as they brown on bottom. Serve sizzling hot on hard paper plates.

We served ours with warm homemade bread sliced and served from the picnic table. See Monday, May 17, Needless to tell this was a cookout that will be difficult to top at the barbecue meals that are coming up this summer.

I think Queen Victoria would agree and approve.

NOTICE: We have a Seven Week Muffin Batter. Betty is making a batch every week and serving it to her family to see if it lives up to its billing. It is. Muffin Makers should watch for this unbelievably durable muffin batter to be given here within the next two weeks.

Life is a stage and everyone plays a part and even the smallest part is important, every small deed, a smile, a word of encouragement, a friendly hand are all important to someone. Never have the times been more difficult for living. The world is full of tensions. We need thoughts and acts of tolerance, understanding and respect.

She continued, "We as members of the Women's Institute have opportunities to reach women in all parts of Canada and the world. The Associated Country Women of the World, of which we are members, does much to build a better world. The world today is closer together, our neighbors are world wide. We must hold our mind's door open to new ideas and then share those ideas. These new ideas may sweep the nation and help to form a new world."

One Child Hurt; Family Suffers

"Any family with a hurt child is already a hurt family. By restoring the hurt child to health, the whole family is made healthier. . . .

"If you get a cut in one finger, doesn't your whole hand hurt? Well, that's the way it is with a family. When one child is hurt or unhappy, the whole family suffers. A mother and father give their heart and soul to the child who needs them the most. The other children always understand. When a family is full of love, there's enough to go around." — From "When One Finger Hurts" by Marilyn M. Segal

This new book, which comes well recommended by Kingston's Children's Aid Society, tells about the much wanted fifth child in a loving family. This youngest member was a victim of Cerebral Palsy.

Little Debbie improved miraculously, from a potential "basket-case" to a bright, humorous and well-adjusted little girl — the result of a therapeutic program of exercises, games and other activities designed to activate muscles and undamaged brain cells. The whole family endured incredible stresses but they won through.

Dear Doris: 1. Could you please tell me the procedure of getting married by a justice of the peace?

2. What is proper in the matter of dress, reception, announcements and invitations?

I'm a stranger here so I would like to know all the angles before deciding. — New Canadian

Dear New: 1. Very simple. A civil ceremony may take place between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. and you can be married by a judge or magistrate. The fee is $10.

2. Dress simply, in a suit or dress with hat and gloves. A corsage may be pinned either on you or your purse. The groom wears a dark business suit. Your best man and maid of honor may serve as witnesses. Close family members may attend.

If you want people to come to your reception but not to the ceremony, invitations should say so. Later you may send announcements of the wedding to other friends and relatives.

Dear Doris: I am a lonely man looking for a mate. In your column an attractive girl of 27 years was looking for a companion.

Dear Lonely: I am sorry, but the young lady who signed lives a thousand miles away from you. You see, this column of mine runs in cities right across Canada.

I'll give you the same advice I gave her: get into some community activities and find your own girl. It is being done all the time.

Is it better to put up with misunderstandings, or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I'm sorry, but I won't have time, now that I'm working. Perhaps Janie's mother will do it. She doesn't have a job."

If you want your child to participate in activities, you should make an effort to do your share of leadership. Examine your schedule and see if you can find time to be involved.

Bid for Caledon Subdivision Revealed as Squabble Over Land Swells

TORONTO (CP) — Caledon Mountain Estates has applied to subdivide Niagara Escarpment acreage recommended to the government for purchase as parkland, the Ontario legislature was told Tuesday.

The disclosure was made by Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales as the controversy surrounding government land purchases from Caledon continued.

Mr. Bales said, however, the application for subdivision approval by Caledon had not been approved and the department of lands and forests o b j e c t e d "quite strongly" to the application.

It involves 102 residential lots and "under 200" acres of the total 1,070 acres the government was advised to purchase by a report on escarpment recreational land.

Mr. Bales said the company's subdivision application was made about two years ago.

The legislature was told the g o v e r n m e n t purchased 506 acres of land at the forks of the Credit River owned by Caledon Mountain Estates Ltd. bought the 506 acres, eventually sold to the government, for an average price of $728 an acre. By selling to the government for $1,450 an acre 22 months later Caledon made a total profit of $366,435, it adds.

Land Valued at $535,000

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the Ontario government could have bought 1,070 acres of Niagara Escarpment land for $535,000 three years ago.

Instead the government recently purchased 506 acres of the parcel for public recreational purposes, paying $733,700.

Quoting a "confidential legislature source," the newspaper says Professor Leonard Gertler of the University of Waterloo assessed the whole 1,070 acres at $535,000 in a report which the Ontario cabinet received in June, 1968. Though parts of the report were made public in Oct., 1969, the Gertler estimate was not released.

The newspaper says that between May and August, 1969, the legislature's natural and physical resources committee for study.

Speaker Fred Cass first ruled the motion out of order but later agreed to study it and make a further ruling.

The motion asked the committee to find out why the government purchased only 506 acres instead of the entire 1,070-acre parcel, and to inquire into the "reasonableness" of the price it paid for the land.

The committee would also study all applications for subdivision approval by Caledon and inter-departmental correspondence relating to those applications.

The motion also asked Mr. Bales, Mr. Brunelle and Public Works Minister James Auld, as well as a number of officials in their departments who were involved in the land purchases, to appear before the committee.

The committee would be required to report to the legislature by June 15.

Before Mr. Lewis' motion was introduced, Premier William Davis said he would make a statement on referral of the land purchases to the committee when the legislature resumes sitting Thursday.

Self-help Resented

TORONTO (CP) — Objections to Indian self-help programs come from civil servants who fear the loss of their jobs, the Ontario legislature was told Tuesday.

Dante De Monte (L—Toronto Dovercourt), leading off his party's assessment of the estimates of the department of social and family services, said civil servants "have a strong reluctance to being phased out."

Mr. De Monte said discussions with members of the Indian community "all point to one fact—nothing can be done so long as there remains an establishment of provincially appointed non-Indian workers in the field of Indian affairs."

In other business:

—Opposition members charged that the government has taken unilateral action in cancelling a meeting of the standing committee on human resources scheduled for today.

—Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP —Toronto High Park) said a group of employees of the Ontario Housing Corp. have been threatened with cutbacks under the Official Secrets Act for giving out information about tenant unrest in OHC units.

Firecrackers Thrown

TORONTO (CP) — An unruly crowd of 400 high school students hurled firecrackers into the Ontario legislature building Tuesday, demanding that the provincial government justify its cutbacks in education spending.

At one point, about 25 teen-agers bolted past guards and ran through three floors of Queen's Park chanting "We want Davis," but Premier William Davis was not in his office.

The students were evicted. The crowd of 400 was the remnants of a march by students from a number of Toronto-area high schools protesting education cutbacks and increased prices in school cafeterias.

The march itself was orderly and there were no incidents until after the main group of students had dispersed. Then the shouting began and one group forced open two oak doors leading into the building.

By 1 p.m. the centre door had been locked and police reinforcements had arrived. Thirty students knelt on the legislature steps. The group that remained in front of the building after the parade ended carried banners of the Young Socialists and the Canadian Party of Labor.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We would like to take a few camping trips this summer but are undecided whether we should buy or rent a trailer. What would you suggest?

ANSWER: If you are thinking of renting a camper or travel trailer for your vacation, don't wait for summer to reserve one. Do it now. The point is that renting a trailer before considering buying one is a good idea. However, later on you may not be able to get the kind of vehicle you want. You may be forced to take a substitute and be disappointed. Renting a trailer not only allows you a chance to give a specific kind a work out, but also lets you compare it with those of other people you meet on the trip.

Many first renters select a camp-trailer which is essentially a collapsible tent stored in a box on wheels. Its advantages are that it's economical, light, has a low silhouette and is easy to handle even behind a small car. The camper is easiest to tow, but small travel trailers much like tiny cottages on wheels are not difficult. Actually the biggest problem is not forgetting that you have one on behind.

The biggest decision for the new trailer-camping enthusiast is whether to rent or buy, because quite often the down payment is considerably less than the cost of owning. A camp - trailer to sleep six people can be had for around $300 and travel trailers start around $1,500 with one suitable for a family of six costing about $7,000. Rentals vary from $50 a week for camper vehicles up to $100 and more for a family size travel trailer.

Trailer enthusiasts, you'll soon discover, are divided into three distinct types:

The first considers his trailer to be a mobile summer cottage. He plunks it on a favored site within driving distance of his city home and leaves it there all summer, frequently occupied by his family.

The second uses the trailer for his summer holidays — sometimes a month — then tows it home and leaves it there until next year.

The third type is more of the gypsy and stays only a night or two at any given trailer park, then moving on to new sights and sounds.

If you rent as a tryout to find out whether you like this trailer-camping sport join the last group. This way you'll get the greatest exposure to all the fun that it can be.

QUESTION: Please give me a scenic route to the Blue Ridge Parkway, and also mileage from Trenton, and any other information you may have on the Parkway.

ANSWER: For a scenic route take No. 81 to Cortland, N.Y.; No. 13 to Elmira; No. 15 to Frederick, Md.; No. 340 and 522 to Front Royal, the start of the Skyline Drive and the Blue Ridge Parkway. It is 575 miles from Trenton to the Blue Ridge Parkway.

The Blue Ridge Parkway in western North Carolina cuts through a land of rugged mountains, sheltered valleys, scenic lakes, camping and recreational areas, and a fascinating collection of towns and shops where you can find the delightful work of mountain craftsmen. Their handicrafts — from banjos and guitars, to furniture, dolls and loomed goods—are available in many shops along the parkway. At some stops, you can watch the craftsmen at their workbenches and looms.

The Blue Ridge Parkway is literally "the "backbone" of the great scenic region that embraces the southern (and highest) portion of the Appalachian mountain range. For 469 miles it follows the highest ridges between the Shenandoah and the Great Smoky Mountains National Parks, attaining altitudes of over 3,000 feet and averaging between 2,000 and 4,000 feet. It has numerous overlooks, parking areas, and lodges for overnight stays. You may leave or enter the parkway at a number of state and federal highway interchanges.

The skyline Caverns are but one mile south of Front Royal, Virginia, and are the closest caverns to the Skyline Drive. They have the world's only known anthrodite formations. These delicate formations of snow-white calcite have excited geologists since their discovery in 1937. There are guided tours of the Skyline Caverns which include Rainbow Falls, Capital Dome, Cathedral Hall, and many more thrilling sights.

Kerr Says U.S. Rules Apply Here

DUNDAS, Ont. (CP) — Resources Minister George Kerr said Tuesday Ontario will follow the United States in demanding that automobile manufacturers install devices sharply reducing noxious car exhaust emissions by 1975.

"If the internal combustion engine is still a problem we may have to turn to propane or battery-operated engines," Mr. Kerr told a student seminar.

The U.S. Congress last December drafted legislation setting a Jan. 1, 1975, target date for installation of pollution control devices on automobiles.

The American law, however provides a one-year extension for car makers that prove they are making every effort to develop pollution control technology.

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Take two tablespoonful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly blues disappear—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Hellyer Hits Out Disaster Too Mild Word for Policies

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Hellyer says "disaster is too mild a word" to describe the Liberal government's economic policies that have allowed increasing inflation and high unemployment to sweep the country.

Mr. Hellyer, former transport minister who resigned from the Trudeau cabinet two years ago but still sits as Liberal MP for Toronto Trinity, said the Liberal government's economic policy is based on "a tired old interpretation of the 19th century."

He called for mandatory price and wage controls as the only way to get the economy back on the road toward full employment while keeping prices in check.

In a speech to the Council of Printing Industries of Canada, Mr. Hellyer, who quit the cabinet in a dispute over housing policies in 1969, said many excuses have been advanced against use of wage and price controls. But he added:

"There is no alternative to mandatory price and wage guidelines if we are to pursue vigorously and effectively the twin goals of full employment and stable prices at the same time."

Such mandatory guides he said, would not involve the degree of regulation in wage and price controls during the Second World War.

Parents Are to Get Wider Role

OTTAWA (CP) — Education Minister Robert Welch says parents and students will be assigned an increasingly important role in curriculum development in partnership with teachers and administrators.

The education minister, speaking Tuesday at the opening of the Frank Ryan senior elementary school here, said curriculum development "is not a list of topics, a program of studies, a credit system or a teacher's daily plan book—it's all of these and more."

"It is all the experience that children have under the influence of school. Every effort will be made to involve not only central office personnel, but officials at the regional and municipal level, principals and teachers, parents and children, and other agencies."

Remparts Win Away from Bringing City First Memorial Cup

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Remparts will be the city's first Memorial Cup winners if they beat Edmonton Oil Kings tonight in the second game of their best-of-three junior hockey playoff, and coach Maurice Filion says that is what is going to happen.

The Remparts, champions of the Quebec Junior A Hockey League, defeated the Oil Kings 4-1 Monday night in the first game of the final.

"We only need one game to become Canadian champions," said Filion. "And we will be champions after the second game."

"They have a good club, but we have a better one," he said. "You will see the Oil Kings play their game Wednesday. We will win, you can be certain of that."

If Quebec wins, the series is over. If Edmonton wins, the teams play here Thursday night. The game had been planned for Friday but the city had committed the arena for another event that night.

Both teams worked out Tuesday with Hunter putting his Oil Kings through a stiff one-hour drill of skating, passing and shooting.

"We are going to get our sharpness today," he told his players before the workout.

During practice, he continually barked out instructions to his squad, chastising some whom he felt were not working hard enough.

"He gets a lot out of them," said an Edmonton reporter. "There is not one kid on the ice who has a bad word to say about him."

"I can't tolerate a careless practice at this time of year," Hunter said later, adding that carelessness in practice leads to the same kind of play during a game.

"They had real snap today," he said. "They're ready."

Hunter said he plans no lineup changes for tonight's contest, but promised his club would do a bit more hitting.

"If anyone in our league saw that game Monday night, they would say it was fixed," added Hunter.

"They'd said 'aren't you allowed to hit someone?'

"We are going to change our strategy a bit. We have to.

"They are great, fans here. I hope they sing as loud when we are leading 5-1 in the second game as they did Monday night."

The Edmonton team and the Remparts were guests at a civic reception held by Quebec Mayor Gilles Lamontagne Tuesday night.

Reluctant Rebel Hands Habs Cup

CHICAGO (CP) — A rookie goaltending sensation and a reluctant rebel were the toast of Quebec today after leading Montreal Canadiens to the Stanley Cup Tuesday night with a 3-2 win over Chicago Black Hawks.

The victory in the deciding seventh game was the 10th National Hockey League title in 15 years for the Canadiens.

Goalie Ken Dryden, a 23-year-old law student at McGill University of Montreal, who played in only six league games before appearing in a record 20 post-season meetings, shared the accolades with centre-winger Henri Richard, a two-goal scorer Tuesday.

Dryden continued the superb play that has followed him since he became coach Al MacNeil's surprise starter against the defending champion Boston Bruins in this year's quarter-finals.

And Richard, playing on his 10th championship team, made the coach he was openly critical of less than a week ago look like a genius.

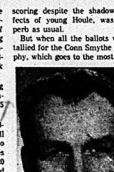
The fiery veteran, who labelled MacNeil "incompetent" because of the rookie coach's juggling of lines to combat Chicago's scoring power, skated both ways like a rookie and scored the tying and winning goals.

In face of home-ice domination through the Cup final, the Hawks were the favorites to cop their first championship in 10 years when the two teams opened play here amidst a blistering heat wave that struck Chicago earlier in the week.

Chicago opened a two-goal lead, Dennis Hull scoring in the first and Danny O'Shea in the second, before the Montrealers put their game together.

Jacques Lemaire cut the Chicago lead in half with a blistering 60-footer, then passed to Richard for the tying score before the second period ended.

Richard tallied the winner early in the third period after taking a lead pass from Rejean Houle at the Chicago blueline, skating past defenceman Keith Magnuson and beating goalie Tony Esposito, who had been almost equal to Dryden throughout the series.



The victory was worth $8,250 a man to the Canadiens, who finished third in the East Division. Chicago, West Division champs, picked up $8,000 a Hawk in post-season earnings.

But there was no question that Dryden, an All-American at Cornell University before doing post-graduate studies at McGill, was the key playoff performer.

Superstar Frank Mahovlich came off his greatest playoff season ever with a record-tying 27 points and record 14 goals while taking a regular shift and killing penalties.

But when all the ballots were tallied for the Conn Smythe Trophy, which goes to the most valuable playoff performer, the award and $1,500 went to Dryden.

HENRI RICHARD

The trophy, originally voted on by league governors, was handed for the first time this year by representatives of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association from each league city.

In addition to the league award, Dryden, a Toronto native, also won a car from a national sports publication.

JACQUES LEMAIRE

"This has to be the biggest goal I ever scored," said Richard, who only last Thursday, following Canadiens 2-0 loss here, levelled his tirade at MacNeil, a first-year man behind the bench.

"Let's forget about it, let's talk about the goals instead," said Richard of his outburst against MacNeil.

"The big thing I feel now is relief that everything ended well. I've been on nine cup teams, but not like this—this was better, lots better."

Captain Jean Beliveau, who said rumors of his retirement after Tuesday's game were highly exaggerated, echoed Richard's comments on the rift within the club.

"That disagreement was settled in a few words last Saturday morning at our team meeting."

Of the victory, Beliveau said Chicago relied too much on too few throughout the series.

"Chicago have a good team, but they rely a bit too much on a few guys. We have more depth and that's the feeling I had all along."

Disappointed and still unsioned, Reay said: "It's been a very long season to wrap it all up in 20 minutes like we did tonight."

Veteran Chicago centre Stan Mikita said the aggressive Chicago Stadium heat offered the worst hockey conditions he had ever played under and that the mid-80-degree temperatures had taken their toll on all the players.

"What's there to say?" replied Bobby Hull to reporters. "We had the lead in the series . . . and the lead in this game by two goals and we lose."

Veteran Phil Esposito, whose job it was to keep Frank Mahovlich in check, was a little more volatile.

"Something went wrong. Damned if it can be explained. We had the game in control and then we let go of it. That's the second time in two games we've done it."

He was referring to Sunday's 4-3 loss at Montreal to even the series at three games apiece when Frank Mahovlich and his brother, Peter, capitalized on bounding pucks in the Chicago zone to score twice and turn the game from Chicago's favor.

Esposito, who appeared fooled on Lemaire's goal, said the haze that hovered in patches over the ice surface had nothing to do with him not making the save.

"I just missed it. No excuses."

Houle, who carried on a long tradition of petite tying to keep Bobby Hull in check, felt the opposite heat more than most.

At 165 pounds, Houle gives away 30 pounds to the Golden Jet and under ideal conditions finds the task difficult.

But a combination of heat and Hull's determination had a profound affect on the young rookie.

"Every game I've played against Hull has been tough, but tonight had to be the toughest," said Houle, adding that he could feel the all-star winger trying continually to break open the game.

"We are going to get our sharpness today," he told his players before the workout.

During practice, he continually barked out instructions to his squad, chastising some whom he felt were not working hard enough.

"He gets a lot out of them," said an Edmonton reporter. "There is not one kid on the ice who has a bad word to say about him."

"I can't tolerate a careless practice at this time of year," Hunter said later, adding that carelessness in practice leads to the same kind of play during a game.

"They had real snap today," he said. "They're ready."

Hunter said he plans no lineup changes for tonight's contest, but promised his club would do a bit more hitting.

"If anyone in our league saw that game Monday night, they would say it was fixed," added Hunter.

"They'd said 'aren't you allowed to hit someone?'

Big M Top Playoff Producer

Although Frank Mahovlich was held scoreless Tuesday night as the Canadiens defeated Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 to win the Stanley Cup, the big Montreal left-winger finished atop the playoff scoring race with 27 points.

Mahovlich set a National Hockey League playoff record with 14 goals and his 27 points tied a playoff record set last year by Boston Bruins' Phil Esposito.

Chicago's Bobby Hull picked up one assist Tuesday to finish in second place, two points behind Mahovlich. Hull ended with 11 goals, also second to Mahovlich.

Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer finished in a third-place tie with team-mate Jean Beliveau with 22 points. Beliveau set a record for most playoff assists with 16.

Jacques Lemaire, who helped lead Montreal to their Stanley Cup victory Tuesday with one goal and one assist, finished fifth with nine goals and 10 assists.

Ashley Earns Number One

CHICAGO (CP) — Referee John Ashley wears No. 1 on his jersey with good reason.

As the National Hockey League's senior official, the tall former pro hockey player draws many of the crucial playoff assignments.

That was the case Tuesday night when he refereed the seventh and deciding Stanley Cup game between Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

It marked the third time this season Ashley has drawn the seventh game of a playoff series, and the first time a referee has been called on that many times in one playoff year to officiate a decisive game.

Ashley officiated at the seventh game of the quarter-final in Boston when Montreal beat the Bruins 4-2 and called the shots here when Chicago ousted New York Rangers 4-2 in the seventh game of their semi-final series.

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau this announced that Montreal Canadiens will be feted at a parade today "to celebrate the glorious victory of les Canadiens at Chicago."

Mayor Drapeau made the announcement hours after the Canadiens had won the Stanley Cup Tuesday night by downing Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 in the seventh game of their final series.

The parade will leave the Forum around noon and make its way eastwards along downtown Ste. Catherine St. to City Hall, where the Stanley Cup champions will be greeted with a 25-gun salute.

Black Hawk Bosses Ignored TV Pleas of Chicago Fans

The name personifies Chicago Black Hawks and television coverage of their home games, or the lack of it, in the Windy City.

The family has turned aside all efforts to telecast the Hawks' National Hockey League home games despite protests from local hockey buffs.

CBS weekly telecasts are blacked out by the local affiliate when the Hawks are at home.

The situation became acute during the current Stanley Cup final with the deciding seventh game here Tuesday night and the Hawks meeting Montreal Canadiens.

To accommodate the overflow, another Wirtz enterprise, the Bismarck Hotel, set aside 250 of its 350 rooms at prices ranging from $30 to $50 a suite to view the game on closed circuit wired in from the adjacent Wirtz-owned Bismarck Theatre.

Estimated gross from theatres and hotel was $53,000.

CBS announced Monday night that it would carry the game nationwide in the U.S., but not in Chicago.

The local CBS affiliate said it was besieged by more than 800 phone calls Sunday, after the Hawks lost 4-3 in Montreal, from fans calling for home telecast of Tuesday's deciding game.

Argos Release Taylor

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League have released flanker Bobby Taylor, clearing the way for the former all-star to make his own deal with any club in the league.

The Argos put Taylor on waivers Tuesday for the price of $350 but none of the other CFL clubs have claimed him.

Taylor, 31, was the leading pass receiver in four of his five years with Toronto. He was obtained from Calgary Stampeders in a 1966 trade.

"Argos gave me the best chance I could hope for," said Taylor who has had clashes with Argo coach Leo Cahill.

"It will give me a chance to choose where- I'm going to play."

Cahill expressed fear in 1970 that Taylor's unbridled competitive drive was a disruptive force on the team. Taylor replied that Cahill was trying to squeeze him into a contract worth far less than reasonable.

TORONTO (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats dealt defensive tackle Ellison Kelly to Toronto Argonauts Tuesday for linebacker Mike Blum in a conditional trade.

For Blum, it will be his fourth team in seven years. He was with Ottawa Rough Riders 1964 through 1967 and was traded with Dave Cranmer to Calgary Stampeders in 1968. Blum, Ottawa-born, refused to go west and went to Argos midway through the 1968 season. Argos sent centre Ron Calhoun to Calgary at the end of that season.

Kelly, a perennial all-star, was with Hamilton for 11 years after playing one year at offensive guard with New York Giants.

Sport Briefs

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Heavy doses of vitamins are useless to athletes, the University of Wisconsin team physician said Tuesday at a symposium on sports medicine.

Dr. Allen L. Ryan said he knows of one football team that gives each player large doses of vitamin B12 before each game, at a cost of about $4 per dose.

"They complain about costs in athletics. If they have a 45-man travelling squad, then it costs them $180 per game. And it is doing them absolutely no good."

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Dental Association announced Tuesday it plans to start a program this fall to equip children in contact sports with mouth guards. Dr. Kenneth Pownall, ODA secretary-treasurer, said the group is asking dentists to contribute their time to the project.

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Centre Fred Speck of Baltimore Clippers was named American Hockey League Rookie of the Year Tuesday, marking only the third time in the league's history that one player garnered both scoring and rookie honors. Speck, a native of Thorold, Ont., who scored 31 goals and 61 assists for 92 points, received 129 of a possible 235 votes in the billoting for the rookie award.

Lonborg Gets Hero's Welcome In Triumphal Return to Boston

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A hurricane of cheers fired up Jim Lonborg's triumphal return to Boston as the former Cy Young winner pitched inspired relief to help the Red Sox stop Detroit Tigers 5-3 Tuesday night.

In the other American League games, Baltimore Orioles beat New York Yankees 6-2, California Angels turned back Minnesota Twins 3-2 and Oakland Athletics trimmed Milwaukee Brewers 5-2. Rain postponed Chicago White Sox at Kansas City Royals.

"I was overwhelmed," said Lonborg, speaking of the cheers of 12,021 that welcomed him home to Fenway Park. "I was shaking inside ... I had goose bumps. I was surprised. I didn't expect it."

Lonborg, the former ace of the Red Sox pitching staff, had nothing but trouble after the 1967 World Series. First he broke his leg in a skiing accident, then developed a chronic sore arm and was finally dismissed to the minors last year.

JIM LONBORG

Slim Jim responded to the acclaim with three hitless innings as Boston wiped out a 3-2 Tigers' run. Reliever Ken Tatum's three-run homer in the seventh.

"When I got my feet on the ground, I realized I had to get some hitters out," said Lonborg, who was just called up from the minors where he has been trying to regain his sublime form.

He pitched his way back to Boston from Louisville with a hot early start this season.

While Lonborg was working his magic, the Red Sox' nats came alive in the seventh on a single by Reggie Smith and double by Carl Yastrzemski before Petrocelli's clout.

Colbert held Washington to one run in his three-inning relief stint as Sam McDowell gained his second victory in seven decisions, after being lifted in the seventh inning.

McDowell, who had a no-hitter through six innings, said he threw "nothing but mediocre fast balls after the second inning. Maybe that's why I was getting them out, maybe they were expecting something more."

McDowell said he talked manager Alvin Dark out of lifting him in the sixth inning after he walked Tim Cullen and Don Wert with one out to bring his total walks in the game to 10.

"He told me he felt good enough to get them out," said Dark. "The no-hitter had nothing to do with it. If he's pitching good, I let him stay in. But when he's walking as many as he was, he's coming out."

Paul Blair sailed the first pitch of the game into the right-centre field seats and Brooks Robinson unloaded a line-breaking two-run homer in the fourth in the Baltimore success. Mike Cuellar beat New York for the eighth time in nine decisions since coming to the American League.

Tom Murphy scattered eight hits and won his first game since April 7 as California stopped Minnesota. Murphy, who had lost five straight since winning his first decision last month allowed only two outfield putouts.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter fired a three-hitter for his seventh straight victory and Rick Monday, Joe Rudi and Sal Bando ripped home runs as Oakland trimmed Milwaukee. Hunter struck out 11 and held the Brewers hitless in every inning but the fourth and ninth.

Phillies Discover Sadly Reds' May Back in Groove

Lee May, back in the groove after recovering from a knee injury, drove in three runs with a single and his seventh homer of the season Tuesday night as the struggling Cincinnati Reds ripped Philadelphia Phillies 4-3.

The defending National League champs, mired in fifth place in the tough West Division race, have won six of 16 starts this month and homers by May have contributed to five of those victories.

In other National League games, Pittsburgh Pirates edged Montreal Expos 3-2; Atlanta Braves downed New York Mets 8-6? San Francisco Giants clipped Chicago Cubs 7-3; St. Louis Cardinals shaded Los Angeles Dodgers 6-5 and Houston Astros nudged San Diego Padres 3-2.

Pete Rose gave Cincinnati a 1-0 first inning jump with his fourth homer, but the Phillies took the lead in the second on run producing singles by Roger Freed and Terry Harmon.

Then, after an infield hit by Johnny Bench and a double by Tony Perez in the fifth, May drilled a two run single to left.

May, who suffered torn knees ligaments in a spring-training collision with Tim Foli of the Mets and didn't get back into regular action until April 23, has slammed 19 hits, including three homers, in his last six games.

Dave Cash looped a run scoring single with two out in the ninth, carrying the Pirates past Montreal and into a virtual tie with New York for the East Division lead.

LEE MAY

Bob Johnson, driven from the mound in the first inning of his previous start, went the distance -scattering six hits-for the Pirates, who trail the Mets by percentage points in the standings following their seventh victory in 10 games.

Aaron belted his 13th homer, a two-run shot in the first inning. In the third, Garr, the league's top batter at .400, connected for the third time in two nights before Boyer's three-run blast, giving the Braves a 6-2 lead.

Marty Perez' triple keyed a two-run sixth for Atlanta, which offset the Mets' four run flurry in the eighth. Bob Aspromonte socked two homers for the Mets and singled during the eighth inning uprising.

Bobby Bonds cracked a two run homer and a sacrifice fly as the Giants snapped Chicago's winning streak at six games and maintained an 8½ game lead over second-place Atlanta in the West Division.

Ken Henderson's two-run single capped a five-run San Francisco burst in the sixth that assisted Ron Bryant of his fourth victory in five decisions.

The Cardinals, who blew a 4-0 first inning lead, broke a 5-5 deadlock in the ninth on Jose Cardenal's bases loaded single off the glove of Los Angeles third baseman Bobby Valentine.

Denis Menke doubled to touch off a tying two-run rally in the ninth at Houston, then punched a run scoring single in the ninth that handed the Padres their fifth straight setback.

Swamp Fever Tests Mandatory

TORONTO (CP) — David Stevenson, Jockey Club director of thoroughbred racing, said Tuesday that effective June 1 negative Coggins test for swamp fever—equine infectious anemia —will be mandatory for horses shipping to the club's three thoroughbred courses.

"In the near future we'll announce plans for testing horses racing on our circuit," said Stevenson.

The announcement by the thoroughbred division of the Jockey Club follows a similar announcement by the standardbred horsemen last week. All standardbreds will be tested and have a government certificate by July 15.

Swamp fever is an incurable crippling disease which sometimes is fatal. More often it will lower a horse's resistance to another disease. Often horses carry the disease without suffering from it. Horses known to have swamp fever must be destroyed or isolated.

Rideau Raceway Running in Red

OTTAWA (CP) — A major creditor of Rideau Carleton Raceway has filed an appeal that has the effect of suspending a proposed settlement of the harness track's debts.

Walter Edwards, owner of Waltham Press Ltd., said Tuesday he seeks to force disclosure of more information about the track from Guaranty Trust Co. Ltd., trustee for the financially-troubled raceway.

Edwards filed an appeal with the Supreme Court of Ontario, which was to have handed down a decision on the previously proposed settlement early next month. The filing means that decision is suspended until Edwards has a chance to put his argument to the court.

The settlement proposed by Clarkson Co. Ltd., on behalf of the trustee was that persons or firms owned money by Rideau Carleton settle for 50-cents-on-the-dollar plus a share of capital stock in the raceway for each $10 of proven claim against the track.

The situation was raised in the Commons Tuesday by Ed Whitby). He asked whether a federal investigation would be held "to see if any skullduggery was taking place."

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said an investigation is under way to "ensure that the Bankruptcy Act and all its provisions have been observed" in the raceway situation.

Robinson Feeling Oats, Not Age

NEW YORK (AP) — Brooks Robinson is feeling his oats. Unfortunately for the rest of the American League, he isn't feeling his age.

"Age!" Robinson snorted Tuesday night after his two-run tie-breaking homer in the fourth inning powered Baltimore Orioles to a 6-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

"Age doesn't bother me at all. It's probably the most over-worked word around. The only thing is that you don't bounce back as quickly and sometimes your legs don't feel up to it."

It was the great third baseman's 34th birthday and he exchanged gifts with manager Earl Weaver. The manager let Robinson bat cleanup—"Earl said it was my birthday present"—and Robby provided the big blow.

The man who has won 11 straight Golden Glove fielding awards also handled seven chances flawlessly.

"The way he fields the short hops, that's the most amazing thing," said Weaver. "You get kind of used to it. You get to expect it, which might not be right. I guarantee you he won't play from for a few years. He's just a kid, a ... tic's not fast, but is he quick."

"I haven't even lost a step," grinned Brooks, whose lack of running speed is his only draw-back. Playing third base I don't have to move around as much as I would, say, in the outfield catching fly balls."

Robinson has hyd good birthdays, bad birthdays and some he doesn't even remember.

"Last year was a bad one. We lost right here to the Yankees 10-4.

"I also remember my 33rd birthday. We were in Kansas City and I was 0 for 23. But I don't know if I got a hit that night."

The answer is yes. Robinson collected two singles and drove in a run.

Coach Herb Mueller of the Belleville Falcons seniors turns aside the scoring effort of Rob Vanderwater, one of the junior-age players who constitute the bulk of the Belleville squad. The Falcons are the only local team to operate as a club with mosquito, peewee and bantam affiliates operating as well as the senior entry in the Bay of Quinte soccer league. The seniors open their schedule tonight in a 6 p.m. battle with the Whitley Travellers.

Soccer Family Swells

The Bay of Quinte soccer league will be one big battling family tonight when the regular 1971 schedule kicks off.

A total of eight teams will be in the fight for this year's championship including 1970 entries Belleville United, Falcons and Parsons; Whitley Travellers, and Quinte Transports from Trenton along with the Bata Braves and CFB Trenton. Rounding out the loop will be a new addition comprised of Warkworth Penitentiary inmates.

The defending champion Parson Cleaners along with Belleville United and Quinte Transport appear to be the class of the league, although as Bay of Quinte president Peter Crowle puts it, "the other teams have a lot of youngsters and they should start showing strongly near the end of the season."

Two of the teams, the Belleville Falcons and Trenton Whitley Travellers are composed almost exclusively of junior age players as the minor soccer systems in both towns are beginning to produce graduates capable of competing in the Quinte league.

The future of the game appears bright with over 700 boys competing in the area's minor soccer setups. Trenton will have a total of 220 boys playing in the 15 teams comprising their minor system this summer, an increase of about 30 per cent over last season.

In line with promoting soccer in the Quinte area, the league has decided to opt out of the Ontario Soccer Association in order to divert badly needed funds towards local use.

"We may be forced back into line by the association, but at least we'll have registered our strong objections to donating funds for teams to make international trips, while there's still so much that we could be doing in our own area," explains Crowle.

The 150 Quinte league players will be competing in a seven - game schedule to be played mainly on Wednesday and Thursday evenings with the occasional Saturday game to be held at Warkworth.

The league executive will be an experienced one with all 1970 officers maintaining their current posts. It will consist of Crowle as president; Bill Lelford, vice-president; Ken Frost, secretary-treasurer and Bob Rutherford, executive member.

Discipline, which has proved to have been somewhat of a problem the past few years, will be handled by a special committee consisting of Dr. T. Woodley, Paul Russell and former past presidents Jack Bennett and Ron Brown.

Tonight's league openers will feature Belleville United visiting Warkworth and the Falcons taking on Whitley Travellers at Zwick's Island beginning at 6 p.m.

Heady Play

Kevin Parry of the Belleville Falcons heads the ball during a practice session at Zwick's Island. The Falcons, which consist almost entirely of junior age players, will be competing in the eight-team Bay of Quinte soccer league. Other Belleville entries in the loop are Parsons Cleaners and Belleville United.

Falcons Wield Only Club In Soccer

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

The Belleville Falcons may take their lumps in the Quinte soccer league this season, but they hope to fare much better in future years by using a club on the opposition.

The "club" that the Falcons hope to employ successfully in local soccer refers to a facsimile of the club system of player development which dominates European football.

The Falcons will not be utilizing a true club system, which consists of grouping players together in regards to ability rather than using age as a criteria for the various classes, because of the objections of the Belleville Minor Sports Association.

The minor sports group, which governs soccer along with all other minor sports in the city, feels that this game like the others under its jurisdiction, should classify players according to their age.

Falcons president Tony Spitzer explained the reasons why he would prefer to see the club system used in minor soccer. "They don't seem to see any difference between sport and recreation and I think that there should be. You can go to the beach for recreation, but it isn't a sport. That's something that requires skill. We're proud of the fact that some of our boys turn out to be highly skilled players and we feel that they should be able to advance as fast as their ability allows them to."

Spitzer feels that not only the more talented players would benefit from such a system, but that those who are slower developing would also be able to take advantage of it. "If a boy is 14-years old and isn't able to compete with other 14-year olds then he's going to drop out of the sport, but if you let him play with 12-year olds of his own ability then he's still able to compete and he'll keep on playing," he theorized.

Despite the fact that the Falcons are not operating totally under the club system, it does provide competition for a youngster from the time he begins to play soccer all the way through to senior.

"We realize that the junior age boys are handicapped competing against experienced senior players, but what were we going to do after they passed a certain age, turn them out on the streets? This way they'll be able to continue in the game," says the club president of the jump to the Quinte league.

The Falcons began five years ago with a peewee team and have since added mosquito, bantam and senior teams under the supervision of the eight coaches in the organization.

The club is currently engaged in building two soccer fields on some unused property at the Ontario School for the Deaf and with the cooperation of a number of Belleville residents they hope to have the pitches ready for play next season.

Herb Mueller, a veteran of seven years with Belleville Parsons as well as single campaigns in Toronto and Kingston will coach the Falcon entry in the Bay of Quinte league.

"I think the biggest thing that we have going for us is that the boys are in top condition and they have a great attitude, they're really enthusiastic about the game," he observes.

The junior age players will be augmented by former Parson standout Bob Rutherford who will play with the team. "I wanted someone on the field who could organize things and since Bob and I played together for a number of years we think along the same line. He should help us a great deal," says Mueller.

The Falcons seniors get their first test of the season tonight when they meet Trenton's Whitley Travellers in a 6 p.m. bout at Zwick's Island.

Wage and Salary Increases Too Large--Benson

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson says renewed inflation poses a very real threat to the Canadian economy and that the danger is heightened by continuing high wage and salary increases.

He told the Commons Tuesday that "wage and salary increases are still running at a level that is not justifiable either in terms of increased productivity or increases in the cost of living."

His remarks were aimed primarily at turning back New Democrat arguments that the government should spend any amount of money needed to increase employment and economic growth even though this might lead to more inflation.

The House was debating an NDP motion urging the government to adopt immediate emergency economic measures to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment, which reached a seasonally-adjusted high of 6.7 per cent in April, compared with six per cent in March.

Under Commons rules, the motion did not come to a vote.

The Galt, Ont., native managed to attract about 100 MPs to the hot, stuffy Commons chamber for a wide-ranging blast at what he called the government's ignorant, incompetent, dishonest and arrogant approach to economic problems.

He said the government must make funds available to municipalities and businesses in addition to stepping up federal programs. Greater assistance should be given to housing projects, hospitals and research centres. Old-age pensions should be increased and taxes on low-income earners decreased.

The government should cut special tax concessions to firms involved in mining and resource development and make this assistance available to industries employing larger amounts of labor.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield delivered a low-key, rambling review of unemployment statistics and the history of the government's efforts to curb inflation.

He reiterated his frequent plea for selective tax cuts to increase consumer purchasing power and stimulate the economy. He described the government's regional development programs as a farce that had done nothing to promote economic equality in Canada.

Mr. Benson said increased unemployment in April may have been caused by a number of temporary factors including a generally severe, long winter in most parts of the country which delayed many spring activities.

The basic aim of the government was to achieve high levels of employment and stable prices, he added.

The United States experienced 6.1 per cent unemployment in April, Mr. Benson said, compared with 5.8 per cent in February.

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) said the government should spend less money promoting equality for the English and French languages in Canada and more on developing the economy.

He said in one area on the west coast of Newfoundland, French-speaking residents had been assimilated by the English-speaking majority years ago. But the federal government now had decided to make this a bilingual district.

Bruce Howard (Okanagan-Boundary) said Canadians must be prepared to accept a lower standard of living if they want full employment.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) said other countries have been able to balance employment and inflation without losing control of either.

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) said government economic policies have been particularly hard on young people. They were learning to live without work and this attitude would spread.

Rene Matte (SC—Champlain) said the government should expand credit to consumers. Price increases would be taken care of by increased purchasing power.

Trade Minister Jean Luc Pepin said Canadians should do as Mr. Benson suggested and wait until the government's economic measures have had a chance to take effect.

He said secondary industry in Canada is having a difficult time because of the relatively small domestic market and high foreign trade barriers.

Gerard Laprise (SC—Abitibi) said the government should concentrate on making more funds available for consumption instead of worrying about production.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said inflation in Canada will never be eradicated until costs stop rising in the U.S.

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina) said inflation has allowed Canadians to have a better standard of living generally. The government should try to provide jobs for young people and prevent them from growing long hair and whining.

Steve Otto (L—York East) said the government should give assistance only to those businesses that could operate efficiently.

THE RETIREMENT TRAP by L. F. Cooley and L. M. Cooley

Retirement: most of us dream about it and plan to do all the things we never had time to do before, but is it the Utopia we imagine? The authors of this book have interviewed many retired people to gain first hand knowledge of such things as retirement villages, investments, health insurance and some of the pitfalls that can be avoided.

THE YEAR OF THE YOUNG REBELS by Stephen Spender

The world at large has been disturbed by the continuous unrest in our universities. The previous concept of the university as a cloistered place of learning, where wise old men taught the immature minds of privileged students has gone forever. Stephen Spender travelled to New York, Berlin, Prague, Paris and London, witnessed the student demonstrations, and met with and discussed the issues with the participants.

CANADIAN PARKS IN PERSPECTIVE by T. G. Nelson

This book is the result of a conference held in Calgary in 1968, and brings to the fore many questions regarding the use and misuse of natural reserves and parks. As the urban areas become more congested, parklands and natural reserves become more important for this generation and those to follow. This collection of essays deals with problems specifically Canadian and covers such subjects as landuse, man and his environment research in National Parks, and federal rural development programs.

LETTER TO A TEACHER by the schoolboys of Barbiana

The school of Barbiana was part of a community of 20 farmhouses on a hillside near Florence, Italy. The school was founded by a priest to provide supplementary education for working-class and peasant boys who had failed in the Italian state school system. This book is the result of a project undertaken by eight of these boys to discover why children from lower income groups did so well in this school and so poorly in state schools. The proposed solutions to the problems of the Italian state schools may well be relevant to the present educational crisis in North America.

VOLUNTEER TRAINING AND DEVELOPMENT: A MANUAL FOR COMMUNITY GROUPS by A. K. Stenzel and H. M. Feeney

FIVE PATIENTS — THE HOSPITAL EXPLAINED by Michael Crichton

This is the story of five actual cases of men and women who were rushed to the Massachusetts General Hospital for medical attention. Written by the author of the Andromeda Strain, who is himself an M.D., the book reconstructs in detail the experience of five patients. As he looks back into the hospital of yesterday and forward into new possibilities of cure and care, the reader gains some understanding of modern medical practice of hospital life and its problems, of why costs are sky rocketing and what lies ahead.

MAKING MONEY FOR YOUR CHURCH by H. K. Knowles

The season for bazaars, teas and other money-making projects is just about over, but the organization with lots of go ahead and enthusiasm plans now for the fall. The author tells of the may dull bazaars she has attended and those that were created with imagination, work, leadership and know-how, where money flowed freely and the crowd had fun; these are the sort of fund-raising projects you can plan with the help of this book.

Inflation Said Still Top Enemy

OTTAWA (CP) — Inflation remains Canadas No. 1 economic enemy and the fight against it will be a lengthy battle, Dr. John Young, chairman of the prices and incomes commission, insists.

Adoption of suggestions that the country should accept more inflation now in order to cure unemployment would start Canada "down a slippery slope," Dr. Young said in an interview.

He saw no alternative to continuing efforts to curb inflation and fight the steady reduction of the consumer dollar's purchasing power.

But there had been some blunting of concern that inflation would continue. Expectations of continuing inflation were not as high as a year ago when consumer prices were increasing by nearly five per cent annually. "But it is not clear to me that they have ended."

For the last four months, consumer prices have run less than two per cent ahead of a year earlier. But there has been a 1.8-per-cent increase since the start of 1971, and unemployment remained at 7.8 per cent of the labor force last month.

The total of 659,000 jobless was unexpectedly high and sharpened criticism of the government's economic policies. Too much emphasis on curbing the economy's growth has produced too high an unemployment rate, says the critiicism.

Dr. Young, whose prices and incomes commission was established to study inflation and whose mandate expires at the end of the year unless extended, does see two possible alternatives to current anti-inflation policy. But he finds neither acceptable now.

One would be to impose direct wage and price controls and the other to relax and accept a higher rate of inflation in hope that it will encourage more employment.

The commission has studied wage and price control methods and the government has said it has such stand-by controls ready, if needed. Dr. Young said the country had to be "prepared for the worst," but "that is not necessarily to say we will get the worst."

Since the late 1950s, most economists have agreed that there is a "trade-off" or choice between inflation and unemployment. Records going back more than 100 years show that when a country has a high rate of price inflation, it can have relatively low unemployment.

"Many economists accepted that idea a few years ago," Dr. Young said. "A number of businessmen, labor leaders and others have now discovered it.

"But events of the last few years make it clear these trade-offs are relevant only for a short-run period. We could have five-per-cent price increases and three-per-cent unemployment, but that wouldn't be a stable situation.

"If five-per-cent inflation were to be taken as acceptable, people would quickly adopt that as a minimum demand, and work up from there. There is still some inflation psychology prevailing, and that would certainly reinforce it."

NDP Member Blames Senior Guard at Millhaven for Beatings

OTTAWA (CP) — Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said Tuesday that a senior guard at Millhaven penitentiary was involved last month when prisoners being transferred there from nearby Kingston allegedly were beaten by guards.

Conservative and NDP members of the Commons justice committee pressed for an immediate visit by the committee to Millhaven.

But Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said this might only stir a riot and interfere with official and police inquiries now under way into the recent prisoner riot at Kingston.

He said it would be better for the committee to wait until conditions returned to normal.

But Mr. Peters contended that the committee might be able to head off another riot by looking into some "fundamental" factors in the situation.

First of all, prisoners had been and still were "terrified" by rumors of constant, secret surveillance at Millhaven. Why hadn't they been reassured before the uprising at Kingston?

Secondly, Mr. Peters alleged, the last busload of prisoners transferred to Millhaven from Kingston April 18 had to run a gauntlet of guards.

He and three other New Democrat MPs who visited Millhaven briefly last month—before being ordered out by Mr. Goyer—had talked to a prisoner with a six-inch scalp wound and bruised leg.

Mr. Peters alleged that a senior guard had been involved.

Mr. Goyer said Mr. Peters's remarks only confirmed his fear that the committee might assume the role of a tribunal if it visited Millhaven now.

"If you want to go back to the inquisition, fine. But I don't think Parliament or the public would support this."

There was a flash of anger as Mr. Goyer added that Mr. Peters had alleged "irresponsibly" that 85 per cent of prisoners at Millhaven were on a hunger strike when eight per cent had missed one meal.

Mr. Peters asked how members are supposed to know the facts if they can't visit the prison.

A motion by Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) that the committee visit Millhaven to interview guards and prisoners about the Kingston-Millhaven events was defeated 5 to 3.

Five Liberals voted against it while Mr. Woolliams drew support from New Democrats Andrew Brewin (Toronto Greenwood) and David Orlikow (Winnipeg North). Mr. Peters isn't a committee member and couldn't vote.

Mr. Goyer raised a number of basic objections to the Woolliams motion.

First, a federal inquiry had opened an investigation into the Kingston-Millhaven affair. Second, a coroner's inquest would follow the death of prisoner Bertrand H. Robert, who died Sunday of injuries suffered during the four-day period in which 500 prisoners held control of Kingston penitentiary. Third, provincial police were questioning every prisoner who was at Kingston at the time of the riot.

The government didn't want to handicap any of these inquiries in any way.

Slain Prisoner Feared for Life

OTTAWA (CP) — Child-beater Bertrand Robert, himself beaten to death during last month's riot at Kingston penitentiary, had sought a transfer months ago because he feared he would be slain by prisoners.

Harold Stafford (L—Elgin) Tuesday asked Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer why Robert's request had not been granted. And other members of the Commons justice committee asked why men like Robert are kept among others who hate them.

Child molesters, sex deviates and squealers have for years been at the bottom of the social scale in prisons and subject to brutal treatment.

Robert died Sunday. He was convicted last fall of disciplining his children by placing them on a hot stove. Brian Enoor, 24, a sex devite, was found dead in the rubble of the prison April 18.

Mr. Goyer said he would prefer not to say anything while the deaths are under investigation. He added, however, that Robert received special protection while in Kingston, as did others in his category.

Terrence Murphy (L—Sault Ste. Marie) said that when the committee toured prisons last year, it found men such as Robert protected by segregating them "in conditions we would not expect a dog to live under."

They spent 23½ hours daily in cramped cells and looked like hungry chickens begging for food.

He suggested special prisons be built in the East and the West for these men.

Charges Will Be Laid

KINGSTON (CP) — Crown Attorney John Sampson of Frontenac County said Tuesday charges will be laid soon in connection with last month's four-day rebellion at Kingston penitentiary.

Ten prisoners were beaten severely and two others killed in a rampage by fellow prisoners on the morning of April 18, a few hours before the rebellion ended. The beatings occurred in the main cellblock, which the prisoners had held since the night of April 14.

Mr. Sampson said the charges would cover "the whole range of activities" involved in the insurrection, but declined to say how many persons would be charged or what the specific charges would be.

The Crown attorney's announcement followed completion of the first stage of a commission of inquiry into the prison disturbances. The three-man commission held a public session here Monday afternoon to set ground rules for the main inquiry, set to start behind closed doors June 7.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Long-haired Rabbi Ousted

Of all the ridiculous "hair" stories I've heard about this year, surely the funniest and saddest is the item about the temple on the Upper East Side of New York, whose congregation voted to discharge its rabbi for having shoulder-length hair and a beard.

Shades of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob! If a rabbi is to be debarred from wearing a beard, the Old Testament turns into a shambles. Why a beard is the essence of a patriarch, the symbol of a prophet, the insignia of a learned man. In early religious art, even God is depicted with a flowing white beard.

No doubt the congregation would feel more comfortable with Alan King's parody of a modern rabbi — "Rabbi Chuck," wearing chinos and tennis sneakers — just as most Christain churches reject the traditional portrait of a Semitic Jesus for a tall, blond, blue-eyed Swedish figure who would be gladly admitted to any club in town, while the true Jesus would be blackballed promptly (they say his parents were Jewish.)

Another absurd and unjust hair story came out of Boston recently, where a municipal judge was hearing a case involving a 22-year-old ex-Marine charged with possession of marijuana.

The judge said he would put the defendant on probation if he consented to cut his hair short; otherwise, he would receive three months in prison. The young man refused to do this, and so the judge put him away.

I think the judge ought to be put away for arbitrary and despotic misuse of his judicial authority and I congratulate the defendant for having the probity to relist this despicable blackmail. He proved himself more honest, principled, and logical than the gallery-playing magistrate.

It is by now a truism that if Jesus returned today, He would be stopped, searched and probably carted off to the precinct station by the first cop who came across Him. Bearded, sandled, headed, no fixed abode, no occupation, a dropout from school, preaching a nutty gospel of turning the other cheek and giving all you have to the poor — and a notorious frequenter of low places and dubious characters. What chance would He have today? Even less than the Romans gave Him.

I am convinced that our anti-hair phobia is in some mysterious, but deeply-fixed, way connected with the Bible and religion; that it serves as an unconscious reminder of the way we have lost, the message we have ignored. Nothing less than this can explain the ugly and irrational rejection and contempt we express for the ancient tresses.

Revision Of Medical Act Coming

TORONTO (CP) — Amendments revising the Medical Act will be introduced this year as the government continues to rewrite all legislation controlling self-governing professions in Ontario, Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said Tuesday.

Legislation under which lawyers and professional engineers operate already has been revised as the government carries out a recommendation of the McRuer commission on civil rights in Ontario, which said in 1968 that the roles of all self-governing professions should be more carefully defined and regulated.

Mr. Lawrence said in an interview that the amendments to the Medical Act will be based on the 13-volume report of the committee on the healing arts, which on April 30, 1970, made 254 proposals affecting the healing arts.

He said it will take several years to change legislation affecting all the healing arts—nurses, chiropractors, dentists and para-medical groups as well as doctors—but changes made in the Medical Act can serve as a model for the others.

Mr. Lawrence discounted a suggestion made earlier by Walter Pitman (NDP—Peterborough) that he can expect "tremendous pressure" against change from the medical professions.

"I've noticed with the medical profession in the last couple of months that they are eager to co-operate in this exercise," he said.

Mr. Pitman had told a legislature committee studying the $990 million estimates for the department of health in 1971-72 that Mr. Lawrence would need some strategy to convince doctors and nurses they are no longer in the market place but servants of public interest.

Toilet Is Burned

TORONTO (CP) — Already facing forecasts of overflow crowds for this weekend's official opening of Ontario Place, anxious organizers also lost a portable toilet in a cloud of black smoke Tuesday.

Police were investigating the possibility of arson in the burning of the glass fibre toilet, latest in a series of incidents this week during attempts to iron out the bugs with preview visits for selected groups.

Yaremko Valentine Is Read

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Secretary John Yaremko handles his department like "a sentimental drip," Donald MacDonald (NDP—York South) told the Ontario legislature Tuesday.

And he offered as proof a Valentine letter he sent to Christine Bennett of Toronto, one of his constituents.

"This year, I have decided to send my Valentine wishes to you by way of personal letter to express my thanks for the pleasure of knowing you," it said.

"For Feb. 14 (and the rest of the year) I make the request Be My Valentine."

Mrs. Bennett sought the nomination in the Toronto Bellwoods riding to run against the minister, and is the riding's representative on the New Democratic Party's provincial council, Mr. MacDonald added.

Rompin' Ronnie's School A Tough Grind

By MICHAEL BENNETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"You have to imitate before you originate, but you never try to duplicate."

That's the Rompin' Ronnie Hawkins school of music.

It graduated The Band, Full Tilt Boogie, and Crowbar, the raunchiest rock - and - blues band ever to come off a southern Ontario farm.

"A lot of people hate us," said Kelly Jay, Crowbar's spiritual leader, piano-pumper and singer.

"They think we're phoney, but we genuinely care about each other. We have things like a group grope before we go on stage, everyone hugging each other."

The boys in the band—not to be confused with the characters in Mart Crowley's play—are Sonnie Bernardi on drums, organist Josef Chirowski, The Ghetto and Rheal Lanthier on dual lead guitars, Robbie Greenway, bass, and Kelly.

They spent nine months in one of the toughest classrooms in the business as Hawkins' backup group, tore up the Fillmore East in their American debut and ran the New York critics out of adjectives.

"We went to him and said we had to get more than $75 a week," recalled Kelly.

"He said: 'I can't take you guys any more, you could screw up a crowbar.'

"We took the name and split."

It was Hawkins' insatiable drive (for perfection in the face of success, and a few other things, that prompted the breakup.

"Ronnie knows how to bring the best out of musicians and make them work together," said Kelly.

"He had absolute control of everything on and off the stage. He believed if you kept them lean and hungry, they'd run faster and play better.

"When we went to play the Boston Tea Party, the band was supposed to sleep in the dressing room to save money and Rheal was to guard his Rolls-Royce."

They might have ended up living like sharecroppers on their rented farm in Ancaster, Ont., if it hadn't been for Frank Davies, a 24-year-old Englishman with a degree in French literature and an ear for talent.

"When I saw them, I couldn't believe my ears or eyes," said Davies, who planned to stay in Toronto for three weeks and never left.

He is the former European manager for Liberty Records, one of only two executives at a five-man signing meeting in 1968 who wanted to pick up Elton John.

Davies made sure with Crowbar.

He gathered his savings and loans—$10,000 in all—started his own label, and recorded Official Music featuring Crowbar and King Biscuit Boy, alias Richard Newell, who looks like a big Steve Allen and blows harp like the legendary Little Walter.

In four months, almost every major American was interested in signing them. Paramount had the most to offer where Davies needed help—promotion and sales.

"We learned how not to be with Hawkins," said Kelly.

"Biscuit taught us how to musically.

"When he left, it was either sink or swim. We learned to water-ski and we've been doing it ever since."

Etna Lava Flow Slows Down After Prayers For Miracle

SANT'ALFIO, Sicily (Reuter) — Fiery laval teeming down the volcanic slopes of Mount Etna slowed considerably overnight and Sicilians in this village less than two miles below the molten river prayed for a repeat of the "miracle of 1928."

For several days the lava, glowing red at night but black and smoking by day, has crept downward at a steady 50 yards an hour. But now it has slowed to an eighth of this speed, having advanced only 150 yards Tuesday.

At its present rate, the lava will take several days to reach this village. But some experts calculate that it will cool and solidify into a solid mass of rock before then.

Sant'Alfio's 2,000 inhabitants Tuesday followed their parish priest in a procession to the edge of the lava to bless it with the bones of their patron saint.

The villagers would halt an end to the flow as another miraculous salvation for their homes because, in 1928, a lava flow stopped just yards from the village after a similar procession with the bones of the saints—the early Christian martyrs Sants Alfio, Cirino and Filodelfio.

But coinciding with their procession were a series of explosions on Etna which opened up a 250-yard fissure near the peak to release the pent-up pressure of boiling gases inside.

Experts believed this could signal the end of the worst stage of the 44-day eruption, drying up the river of lava supplying the most threatening columns. But no one was prepared to declare an end to the eruption yet.

Finance Firms to Become Responsible for Goods

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario residents would no longer have to continue making payments to finance companies for merchandise that turns out to be defective under a bill introduced Tuesday in the Ontario legislature.

An amendment to the Consumer Protection Act would place finance companies under the same obligation as retailers to ensure that merchandise is of good quality.

Financial and Commercial Affairs Minister Arthur Wishart predicted that the bill would make finance companies reluctant to deal with "fly-by-night" retailers who sell shoddy goods and then refuse to service them or avoid their legal obligations by dissolving.

Finance companies will not be willing to take over a debt unless they are certain that the consumer is protected against shoddy merchandise, he said.

Present legislation obligates buyers to make their payments even if they can't get the original retailer to replace or repair defective merchandise.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Part III — The third in a series of four columns on marijuana.

Those you you who have read the first two columns in this series on the problems of marijuana are aware that skepticism rules the roost of pot smokers. They disbelieve those who claim to have undergone painful experiences suffered from the simple act of smoking pot.

They usually say, as did the youngster in the first letter, that it's likely that really bad symptoms are due not to marijuana but to the "grass being treated with some heavy acid". In other words, that someone slipped in a dose of LSD or something similar to produce the "bad time".

However, recent studies do not bear this out. Marijuana itself can produce scary results. For those youngsters still willing to be convinced, here are some recent statistics that may influence them to stop, look and listen.

• • •

I wish they could get hold of an April, 1971, issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. In it there is a report by Drs. Harold Kolansky and William T. Moore of the Child Analysis Division of the Philadelphia Association for Psychoanalysis.

They studied the effects (over a five-year period) of marijuana smoking in 20 men and 18 women, ages 13 to 24. Most smoked two or more times weekly, two or more marijuana cigarettes each time.

I'll quote from a news release on the article by the American Medical Association. The patients consistently showed poor social judgment; poor attention span; poor concentration; confusion, anxiety, depression; apathy, passivity; indifference; and slowed, slurred speech."

Many showed marked indifference to personal cleanliness dressing and study or work habits," sexual promiscuity, staggering gait, and hand tremors. Four of the patients attempted suicide. Four developed psychoses. Seven of the girls became pregnant and four developed venereal disease."

Suppose you have been smoking marijuana. Is it too late to quit? Not according to the report. The study found that "most of the adverse effects of marijuana smoking ceased when the patients stopped using the drug."

The trouble of course comes before one stops, whether it be in the form of a psychosis or actually attempted suicide. While under its effects the "simple" act of driving a car may be an act of suicide or murder.

The effects ranging from mild euphoria to temporary paranoia lead to personality changes that transform the careful driver into reckless misjudgments that threaten him or her, the passengers, and anyone else on the road. Alcohol isn't the only enemy in transportation. Just a few "joints" are mind - altering.

Marijuana is a renegade, outlawed by both medicine and law. In some states it is classified as a hard narcotic.

Independent Body Urged To Test Farm Machines

OTTAWA (CP) — A new independent agency to test and develop farm machines was recommended Tuesday in a royal commission report on farm machinery.

The report, prepared by Dr. Clarence L. Barber, University of Manitoba economist and head of the six-year, $1.5 million commission, was tabled in the Commons by Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson.

Dr. Barber told a news conference improvements in farm machinery have done most to reduce farm implement costs in the last 50 years.

...An independent agency for research and testing to develop better farm machines and to help individual farmers choose implements might save Canadian farmers a good deal and help them remain competitive on world markets."

A five- to seven-per-cent saving could come from limiting, then stopping manufacturers from supplying dealers with floor samples and an inventory of machines free of interest for as long as 23 months. Cost of this practice now is passed on to farmers buying the machines.

The basic recommendation of the commission is that the government consider implementing a program to "encourage farm mechanization and to smooth its advancement." Such a program should:

—Ensure sufficient research and development into farm machinery to provide a continuing flow of new machinery technology suited to Canadian requirements; —Provide facilities for measuring and evaluating the work of new machines to ensure efficient use by farmers;

—Promote a co-operative relationship between manufacturers, distributors and farm machinery users;

—Minimize the adverse effects of mechanization on the health, safety and welfare of the agricultural community;

—Provide credit facilities and capital-formation incentives to encourage an adequate rate of investment for farm mechanization.

MANUFACTURERS CODE DATING

All processed meats such as wieners, bacon and sliced cooked meats are code dated. This code date is the recommended Code of Practice for product dating of the Meat Packers Council of Canada for use by its member firms.

The code date shows the month and the day of the month. This allows you to always select the freshest product in the meat counter. For example, two packages of bacon are coded 0519 and 0537. The 5 represents the fifth month (MAY) and the second number the date. So in this case the package with the 0519 code is the freshest.

Regional Council Meets

Ties to People Close But County Said Dying

A Mysterious Mermaid

The mermaid that lured sailors away from their destinations seems to fascinate little Linda Porter, aged 6. The difference is that this mermaid is a life-size mannikin dressed in scales and fins made of colored paper and her "palace" is the Masonic Temple which was the scene of the treasure chest tea and bazaar by the Belleville Chapter 55 of the OES on Wednesday afternoon. Hastings, City Voices Heard

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Contrasting views as to the future of the county as a regional form of government were expressed yesterday in Peterborough by a Belleville alderman and a senior Hastings county official.

Alderman Mrs. Robin Jeffrey told the 15th annual conference of the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council that the county form of government "was dying of natural causes."

On the other hand County administrator Carl E. Bateman agreed that "better" local government was needed but said the question to be answered was whether regional government would enhance local autonomy.

"Is local government going to be more accessible and more responsible if larger units are formed?" he asked.

The way Mr. Bateman saw it, one of the great problems facing governments at all levels was keeping the ability to respond to the wishes, the desires and the fears of the people it represents, and establishing the ability to communicate the decisions of government and the reasoning behind the decisions to an alienated society.

The two Belleville people were members of a panel discussing regional government and the role of counties in its organization.

Alderman Jeffrey described the county as a faltering system patched by provincial grants with more and more of its functions being assumed by the provincial government.

She said the problems facing county governments had changed since they were established about a century ago and maintained the system should be replaced by a new municipal government taking in both urban and rural areas.

"County boundaries set in the 1840's do not have meaning to most of us today . . . the divorce of cities and towns from the rural areas should end and I for one will applaud the day this happens in my area," she said.

When urban centres and rural areas join together in a positive approach to development through regional action, cities will no longer find it necessary to rape the lands surrounding

Canada and Russia to Hold Talks at Least Annually

Trudeau now has met with the Soviet Union's top three leaders.

He has talked several times with Premier Alexei Kosygin, and once with the top man in the Communist party hierarchy, General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev.

Wednesday afternoon, Trudeau and Kosygin signed a protocol providing for regular consultations of the foreign ministers of each country on bilateral and international problems.

In another development Wednesday, Premier Alexei Kosygin accepted an invitation to visit Canada.

The protocol calls for close collaboration between Canadian and the Soviet Union in such matters as arctic pollution control, northern development, science, technology and culture.

It also calls for speedy exchanges of views between the Soviet and Canadian governments in times of international crisis, to see "what might be done to improve the situation."

Move to Cut Troops Beaten

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon won a major victory Wednesday night over impatient senators trying to force him to reduce U.S. troop strength in Europe without waiting for similar concessions from the Russians.

By a lopsided vote of 61 to 36, the Senate climaxed a week of heated debate by defeating a move by majority leader Mike Mansfield to cut off funds for half of the 300,000 man force serving in Europe for NATO defence.

But the president's triumph had its darker side, with the administration remaining under severe congressional pressure to ease the military burden on the United States and compel NATO allies to pay more for their defence.

Three Sales Like Caledon Deal

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said in an Interview Wednesday there have been at least three other purchases of land on the Niagara Escarpment by the province similar to the recent purchase of land at the Forks of the Credit.

Quoting a public works department report, Mr. Nixon said that in all three cases the land was acquired from owners who purchased their land during the time the government had in its hands a secret report recommending purchase of the property by the province for recreation purposes.

Mr. Nixon said the report showed that of 21 provincial escarpment purchases during the 1970-71 fiscal year, all but one property owner at least doubled his purchase price, and one owner sold his land for 30 times the price he acquired it for 6½ years earlier.

The figures showed "that at the very least there is a possibility people benefited from inside knowledge" of the report prepared by Professor Leonard Gertler, Mr. Nixon said.

"The government may say there was no inside knowledge but as long as there is that possibility, a judicial inquiry should look into it."

On Monday he demanded a judicial inquiry into the recent purchase of land at the Forks of the Credit from Caledon Mountain Estates Ltd., a company with several prominent members of the Progressive Conservative party on its board of directors.

U. S. B-57 Burns Near North Bay

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — Canadian Forces personnel hiked through dense bush today toward the scene of Wednesday night's crash of a United States Air Force B-57 bomber carrying two crew members.

There was little hope the twin-engined bomber's pilot and electronic warfare officer had survived the crash which occurred shortly after take-off from here.

A spokesman for national defence headquarters in Ottawa said Wednesday night the scene, in the area of Tilden Lake, was "a fireball" and there was "no radio contact at all."

Five Canadian Forces personnel, including a doctor, were helicoptered to the scene early today. The helicopter could not land right at the crash site because of the rough terrain. The search party had to hike 1½ miles to the scene.

The plane, flown here earlier this week from its base at Hill Air Force Base, Utah, was one of five involved in a North American Air Defence Command exercise.

Heath, Pompidou Trying To Revive Old Entente

PARIS (AP) — Prime Minister Heath and President Pompidou met today in an attempt to revive the old British-French alliance in order that France will not again veto Britain's application to join the European Common Market.

The success of their summit talks depended largely on the ability of the British and French leaders to align their policies toward the United States and West Germany. To win Pompidou's backing, Heath must convince his host that Britain's co-operation with the Americans and West Germans never would be at France's expense.

Pompidou and Heath grouped their two-day talks around three main themes:

—The sort of Europe they want: This takes in the role a united Western Europe should seek to play in the Middle East, Asia, Africa, toward the Communist powers and so on. It also includes the defence system Europeans should work toward, bearing in mind mounting pressures for reduction in U.S. forces abroad.

—The state of the Brussels negotiations on British admission to the Common Market: This means examining the remaining disagreements. A compromise is expected over the money Britain must contribute to the economic community's coffers, probably seven per cent a year instead of the three per cent offered. It also means arguing about Britain's promise to safeguard the economy of New Zealand, which would go broke if it were to lose its special access to the British market for its meat and dairy products.

—The political, cultural and economic effects of enlarging the Common Market.

Pen Riot Ends At Dorchester

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) — A short-lived prisoners revolt ended at the maximum security Dorchester penitentiary today with all prisoners back in their cells.

Word of the return to normal came in a brief penitentiary statement at 11:55 a.m., ADT. No details were released.

The statement said that all 222 prisoners who had barricaded themselves in the penitentiary recreation hall Wednesday night were back in their cells at 10:30 a.m.

The statement said the commissioner of penitentiaries would hold an investigation into the incident.

Two prisoners were injured by hird shot fired from shotguns by guards when the pair tried to escape from the recreation hall Wednesday night. A prison official said the wounds were not serious.

A tight clamp on information on the revolt imposed by prison officials remained. There was no word on the reason for the prisoners' action.

Chess Tourney Here Over Long Weekend

More than 65 participants in the Ontario Open Chess Championship to be held here over the long weekend, have registered by mail for the event, it was announced this morning.

Stuart Parry, president of the Quinte Chess Club, said entries have been received from as far away as Illinois, Quebec and northern Ontario centres.

As the largest annual chess tournament in the province, the weekend event has attracted some of the biggest names in national and international chess circles. Among those who will both visit and compete are Bruce Amos of Toronto, who last year played for Canada in the chess olympiads, Dennis Allan, a chess master from Toronto and Walter Dobrich, Toronto master player, president of the Ontario Chess Association and a director of the U.S. Chess Federation.

Mr. Dobrich will act as director and official for the chess tournament to be held at Ben Bleecker Hall.

"All games are strictly controlled by time," Mr. Parry commented, outlining the procedures for play as a timed four - hour game. Each player shall be allowed to make 30 moves within two hours. This averages a move every three minutes.

"We don't want to give the impression that we're going to allow a long, drawn out period of play," the Quinte Chess Club president said.

In their various classes, the players, from expert to novice, will receive trophies and prizes provided from the entry fees. Trophies will be presented to the Ontario Champion, the Ladies' Champion, Junior champions, and other categories including best local player.

In addition, the first prize is a cash award of $350.

The hall will be open to the general public on Saturday, Sunday and Monday from 10.15 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 4 p.m. until 8 p.m. Rules are minimal; officials have requested that noise be kept down and no flash pictures be taken after the first five minutes of play.

The tournament will be officially opened at 10 a.m. Saturday by Alderman Paul Russell.

"This is a rare opportunity for local players to experience all the excitement and competition of one of North America's major tournaments without leaving the town city limits," Mr. Parry commented. "We also expect many more local players than those who have registered up to now."

The public will be welcomed to the games and a minimal charge will be asked.

MICHAEL BARRETT

Belleville Students Place Near Top

Two Belleville students who participated in the 10th annual Canada-Wide Science Fair, May 10-16, returned from Edmonton this week crowned with the laurels of success.

Jane Douglas, a 17-year-old Grade 13 student at Centennial Secondary School, placed second in the national senior life division. She also received a $100 cash award from the Canadian Dental Association for the best research project and for scientific merit.

Miss Douglas' exhibit was designed to show the effects of tobacco mosaic virus and potato virus X, as well as the antibody that is produced.

Third place in the senior physical division was awarded to Michael Barrett, a 16-year-old Grade 13 student at BCI, for his exhibit of a computer simulator. Michael describes his project as "an aid to teach the basic principles of computer operation."

Both students won the chance to participate in the Canada-wide fair after taking top honors at the Belleville Rotary fair this spring.

Jane Douglas' exhibit placed first in the whole fair and was awarded first prize in the Grade 12 and 13 Biology division. She also received the agricultural award.

Charge Follows Infant's Death

A Belleville man now residing on Kingston Road in Toronto was yesterday charged with the non-capital murder of two-year-old Tracey Ann Brown.

David Karl Thurston, 20, formerly of 57 Cannilton Road, was charged following the death of the girl in the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto. Doctors operated for 2½ hours on a ruptured liver after the child was admitted Tuesday suffering head and abdominal injuries and severe bruises. She died at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Thurston was arrested Tuesday, charged with assault causing bodily harm and appeared in court on that charge. Following Tracey Ann's death, the charge of non-capital murder was laid.

Thurston and the child's mother, Mrs. Jane Brown, also 20, were residents of Belleville until last Friday.

County Government Is Studied

them and much of the ill feeling against these city land grabbers will end.

Mrs. Jeffery said that adjustment in municipal boundaries was necessary and important if greater economic strength and decision-making were properly related to today's — not yesterday's — problems was to be attained.

"Things the county decide on today have an impact on the cities and things the cities decide have an impact upon the county and yet neither have a voice in each other's affairs.

Instead of fighting to preserve the status quo, to save the ancient boundaries that segregate rural and urban citizens, the Belleville alderman said elected representatives should be getting together in meaningful dialogue in order to ensure that the regional form of government is best for the area.

Much of the blame for the addiction to county boundaries lay with some of the local politicians who did not look beyond their noses, she said. But if politicians listened, they would hear people asking for services, jobs, housing, day care centres and adequate sewer and water facilities.

"The people are asking for us to give them a reformed structure of government that can meet their demands. They want a government ready to solve real problems before they develop."

Alderman Jeffery said she rejected the idea that regions must be divided into metropolitan, urbanizing and rural classes, as though county and city and their intermediate stages were unrelated.

"The fact is they are interdependent, they need each other, and it is no wonder in recognizing this which has created many of our problems."

"Regional government should strive to prepare an area for growth instead of striving to catch up with growth problems."

Turning to the economics of a regional government setup, Mrs. Jeffrey said regions had to have an adequate base so that services could be equalized and disparate economic conditions improved without having to turn to the provincial government to take over more of the costs — and thus the decisions.

"We have to be big enough to take advantage of modern technology and to be capable of strength when speaking to other levels of government.

"We expect to function as partners with the province but we have to be large enough and strong enough to earn our right of partnership."

Although advocating big area, at the same time Mrs. Jeffrey said she wanted a form of local government retained which would be close to the people and readily available to them.

The choice, she said, was not between regional government and the retention of the present modified county system.

Rather, the choice was between regional government and the steady erosion and eventually the complete collapse of local government.

The Belleville aldermen admitted that problems had developed in some of the new regional government set-ups.

But if the provincial government doesn't have all the answers, at least it is looking forward and not backward. At least it is recognizing that the needs of the future call for far - sighted planning and for the replacement of institutions which will not serve those needs.

Mr. Bateman told the panel that he had blown both hot and cold on the regional government subject over the past 10 years.

"There are times when I feel that the only sensible solution to municipal reform is a complete overhaul of our existing system so that we can have a revitalized local government structure to meet the problems of urbanization."

"There are other times when I feel that simple amalgamations within the county framework would suffice and still others when I feel that really there isn't much wrong with our existing system and that change for change's sake will only add to the problems already facing governments at all levels."

The speaker questioned whether under larger units of government, local government was going to be more accessible and more responsive.

He noted that this was a technological age with the computer replacing the personal approach.

"Everyone has a number instead of a name and that number is on a punch card or magnetic tape, Mr. John Q. Citizen has lost his right to communicate on a face to face basis with his government generally and, believe me, he does not like it."

And according to Mr. Bateman this problem would magnify as government becomes more and more impersonal, remote and inaccessible.

The county administrator said he was concerned when more and more he saw governments turning to the caucus or intermingle of the officials to discuss and decide matters which they consider controversial.

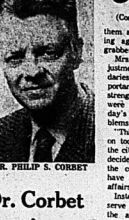
"I'm not convinced that you or hear municipal employees say 'sorry, but that isn't our responsibility and then do not offer to assist that person in directing him to the proper source or explaining to him how he can get his problem solved."

But irrespective of government re-organization Mr. Bateman said what was needed most was government that was more responsive, more accessible and more conscious of the reason for its existence.

"That reason is to serve the citizens by which it was elected.

"We need government staff that are better educated, better trained and with a greater ability to meet the public," he said. "We need councillors that are ready and willing to discuss the issues in the open forum so that the citizens are made aware that their rights and wishes are being properly debated."

Mr. Bateman said at one time he felt that size alone would dictate that these changes would come about but today he was not so sure.



"Most of the problems we are facing today are not with the small rural community, but with the larger urban centre.

"It is a social problem, not just a technological or an economic problem." Mr. Bateman concluded, "and perhaps it is time we did something about this before we initiate changes that will stimulate the problem to greater proportions."

Milton Lindsay, Mayor of Lindsay, defended the county system.

The county system should be the backbone in any "re gional government and t h e leader in all reform ...

"Loss of political power is the greatest impediment to regional government," he said, "and local people are afraid their voice will be swallowed up in a large regional organization."

DR. PHILIP S. CORBET

Dr. Corbet Leaving Belleville

Dr. Philip S. Corbet, who has been director of the Department of Agriculture Research Institute here since 1967, will leave Belleville in August of this year to assume the position of professor and chairman of the Department of Biology at the University of Waterloo, Ontario. Pending Dr. Corbet's departure, and until his successor is appointed, Dr. Peter Harris is serving as acting director of the Research Institute.

Before joining the institute in 1967, Dr. Corbet spent eight years as a scientist in Uganda, first as a fisheries biologist working on Lake Victoria, and later as a medical entomologist studying mosquitos at the East African Virus Research Institute. He came to Canada in 1962, joining the Entomology Research Institute of the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa as a research scientist. While there, he worked on the biology of arctic mosquitoes and on the control of shadflies at the site of Expo '67 in Montreal.

During the last few years, while Director of the Belleville Institute, Dr. Corbet has served in an advisory role for provincial committees on health research and pesticide use, for the Defence Research Board, for the World Health Organization, and for the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. Dr. Corbet has been an active supporter of the Belleville Chapter of Zero Population Growth.

Dr. Corbet will leave the Research Institute with regret. "I have enjoyed this assignment tremendously, and regard it as a great privilege to have been associated with this Institute which has such a distinguished international reputation, and with people who have given it the reputation."

Dr. Corbet's wife, Dr. Hilda Carol Corbet, has been teaching psychology at Loyalist College during the past year. Before joining Loyalist she was responsible for language classes for new Canadians under the auspices of the United Community Services in Belleville.

Dr. Corbett has not been active administrator of the research institute for some months, pending his departure.

Gordon Kierstead, pastor, First Pentecostal Church, Belleville.

Council to Survey Grading for Drainage

MARMORA (Special) — Sewer and road drainage problems were the main topics of discussion at the May meeting of the Deloro village council.

Council as a whole will inspect village streets to consider repairs where water flow is a nuisance.

The main sewer in front of the J. Janiec house will be replaced and the hall painting will also be carried out at the pumphouse.

Defending Champion

Frolicking light-heartedly in her pasture, Eastern Ontario Champion Mare Shirbette gives little hint of the discipline and training that carried her to top honors in 1970. She will return to Belleville May 24 to defend her title in the Eastern Ontario Half-Arabian Horse Show, with her owner-trainer, Judy Rix of Orillia.

Potential Apartments Concern to Residents

City property owners living in areas with a preponderance of single - family dwellings are getting up - tight about the rapid increase in apartment construction.

The first to take direct action were residents of Sinclair Street who have asked city council to rezone their street from "B" to "A" which would rule out apartment houses.

Council has approved the rezoning and notices are now going out to property owners within 400 feet of Sinclair Street to see if there are objections.

Before the requested rezoning becomes effective it would have to be approved by Ontario Municipal Board but if there are objections a public hearing could result.

Now residents of adjacent Ritchie Ave. also want their area rezoned "A" to block apartment house construction and are preparing a petition before making the formal application to council.

Also, many West Hill residents east of Sidney Street between Burton Street and Highland Ave. are thinking in terms of rezoning to block further construction of apartments.

Quebec Students Visiting Brighton

BRIGHTON (Staff)—Forty-nine students from Beaupert, Quebec, arrived here today for a five-day exchange visit with their counterparts at East Northumberland Secondary and Smithfield Public schools.

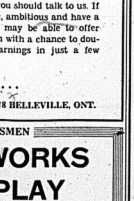
A party of students from Brighton stayed at Beaupert during their trip to the Quebec Winter Carnival this year.

The departments of tourism and information has provided the Quebec party with two bilingual guides during its stay here.

On Friday, the Beaupert students will accompany their Brighton and Smithfield hosts to school. They travel to Niagara Falls Saturday, spend at Presqu'ile Park Sunday and return home the following day.

The French clubs of both area schools sponsored a number of fund raising events during the winter to finance their trip to the carnival and Beaupert and the practice of Ontario Quebec exchanges will continue in the future.

Belleville Jews Join in Protest



A group of Belleville Jews from the Sons of Jacob Synagogue travelled to Toronto last night to join the protest against Soviet persecution of Jews.

The Toronto meeting was held to urge Soviet authorities to recognize the right of Jews to emigrate, to enable those living in Russia to exercise their full rights and to put an end to the defamation of Zionism and the Jewish people.

The protest meeting was an outcome of the First International Conference on Soviet February.

There are about 35 Jewish families in the Belleville district.

May 24th Horse Show To Be Canada's Largest

Canada's largest Half - Arabian horse show is slated for Quinte Exhibition Grounds next Monday, Victoria Day.

The second annual Eastern Ontario Half - Arabian Horse Show, sponsored by the Belleville Half - Arabian Show Committee has already, exceeded last year's record for entries and prize money.

Special attraction this year will be Cindy Neal, a member of the Pan - American riding team, who will give an exhibition about 3 p.m. Monday.

The show will open officially at 12.30 p.m. and continue until 6 p.m.

The judge will be Larry Thornhill, who has built his reputation as a judge in the Canadian and American Nationals.

Committee chairman Bob Klassen is expecting 150 to 200 entries for the show, with competitors coming here from all over Ontario and Quebec as well as New York state and Michigan.

Two of Canada's three Legion of Merit horses will compete here — 'Bout Time, a Windsor horse owned by Marianne Porter, and Belleville's own Pinok's Starsam, owned by Warren Whitley.

The Legion of Merit is a coveted award presented to North America's outstanding Arabian horses. It is awarded on the basis of maximum winnings within a minimum period of time, much the same as the Triple Crown is awarded to Thoroughbred horses.

A full slate of classes will be presented at the show, with reining, jumping and pleasure classes, including English pleasure and Western pleasure championships.

Open, all - breed racing, Jumping and Western riding classes will also be held with $100 prizes for each event.

A total of $1,500 in prizes will be offered, with many area horses in the running for the money.

This area is renowned for many good horsemen and top horses and the best will be competing Monday.

Among the notables will be Mary O'Neill (of snowmobile racing fame) on her Half-Arabian Gear-Mar-Rose, who won the half-mile trotting race last year at Belleville; Joanne McNevin competing on King's Crystal, is the heavy favorite for the half-mile race. Henry Vanderbosch, a long-time jumping enthusiast is entering three horses in the $100 jumping stake. He will compete against the stables of Bill Doyle and Ron Jorgenson.

Also competing is the Whiteley Farm of Belleville, whose horses have a habit of winning provincial championships.

Pinok's Starsam is the reigning Eastern Ontario Champion Western Pleasure Horse, Eastern Canadian Champion English Pleasure Horse and the 1969 U.S. Reserve National Champion Half-Arabian.

Ron Jorgenson of Carrying Place will be show manager this year and Berie Sommers is show steward.

A Half - Arabian horse is one sired by a purebred Arabian and therefor has 50 per cent, and usually more, Arabian blood. The mares bred to Arabians may be of any breed and size, from ponies to hunters and from 12 to 18 hands high. This permits unusual diversity of classes within the breed.

The first Half - Arabians came to North America with Columbus, but it was not until this century that the class gained widespread popularity.

Maryland Balloon Is Found in Field

CARRYING PLACE (Staff) — "Dear Finder, This card was launched by balloon as part of a science contest at Braddock Junior High School.

"You can help by completing the information and drop in the mail."

This message, on a small card contained in a plastic bag, was discovered in the shredded ruins of a large orange balloon by Mrs. William Dawson, of RR1, Carrying Place, was taking a Sunday afternoon walk with her husband when she discovered the balloon in a cornfield. "I kept thinking I'd finally we picked it up," she said.

The balloon was launched by Rachel Swartz, a junior high school student in Cumberland, Maryland, on Oct. 20, 1970, as part of a scientific experiment.

Mrs. Dawson filled in the card with the information requested and returned it in the mail. The number four contained on the card seems to indicate this is the fourth of a series of such craft.

Sunny Interludes

The lawn and recreation area in front of Belleville Collegiate presents a varied scene these sunny mornings. Observed Tuesday were students at exercise, engaging in some track work, while nearby an open air class was in progress. Meanwhile, over at the business college a group of boys and girls were sitting on the steps as if grouped for a photograph but evidently just soaking up sun, between classes maybe, and what better way to spend a few minutes at least on a sunny morning.

It was all very relaxed and simple. "Teach us delight in simple things," wrote Kipling. "In mirth that has no bitter springs."

If education today has become a complex thing, with costly schools and administrative systems, and students caught up in the impersonality of it all, it is good to see it also has moments such as Kipling envisaged.

Some other thoughts on education: we can see how the old ideas of discipline have been ix go and psychology — understanding the kid and all — has become accepted practice.

The Prince Edward home and school council were told of the new order of things recently by Robert Goodson, regional education consultant with the Department of Education in Kingston. No longer do we have the strap, but rather something which might be described as accentuation of the positive and ignoring of the bad elements in youthful behavior. And this with a view to establishing a base for "modification of behavior."

A 13-year-old Belleville pupil was cited. The youth had "terrorized his teacher" and had a vocabulary "like our Prime Minister." It is rather a long story how the youth was dealt with, but it involved the psychological approach and a degree of what is acknowledged as "bribery." This included being allowed to watch TV at home "for periods of time proportionate to the hours he spent in school."

"Hopefully," said the educator, he will learn that by staying in school he will get a reward."

Somehow, we do not quite follow this reasoning. However, maybe in the long run this sort of thing pays off. At the same time we doubt if there is anything more effective than a teacher who is the charge of the students, who can and does administer discipline (including the strap) where necessary. But then those days are past, are they not? The strap for one thing is virtually a thing of the past.

Incidentally, we hope Mr. Goodson was only joking when he spoke of the youth having a vocabulary like the Prime Minister's. The P.M. has been recorded as saying nothing worse than "fuddle-duddle," which cannot be equated with the "foul language" Mr. Goodson went on to attribute to the 13-year-old classroom tyke."

Budget Set

The increase of 2.2 mills for Belleville taxpayers announced at Monday's budget meeting is a reasonable one. It is reflected in the 51.7 mills set for residential properties and according to Mayor Russell Scott is a lower increase than for most Ontario centres.

Meanwhile, despite opposition from a number of aldermen, Council has voted themselves an increase in pay, the second in the past two years. This is the trend of course, and raising the stipend to $2,500 could help attract newcomers to Council, including some of the less affluent members of the community, as envisaged by Mayor Scott.

The Mayor's remark that Council should not be made up of too many housewives and retired businessmen illustrated a point, although Dr. Scott was asking for it when Alderman Robin Jeffrey retorted that he might also have included doctors and lawyers.

As it is Council membership reflects a fair spread of community interests. If in the future it should attract the working man (or woman) Mayor Scott speaks of, so much the better.

Livestock Losses

The recent loss of a two-year-old heifer, believed chased by dogs into a swamp, and restitution of $150 by Thurlow township to its owner, is a reminder to dog owners to keep their animals under control. Last year the township paid more than $1,200 in livestock damages, mostly in connection with sheep.

A Private Person

Margaret Trudeau Stays Out of the Limelight

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Just for a change of pace and switch of interest, this particular column is for the ladies.

About Margaret Trudeau — or, perhaps more accurately, not really about her — because despite a couple of carefully restricted and highly selective public appearances around the National Capital — she remains pretty much the mystery woman of 24 Sussex Drive.

The most interesting thing about her so far is not her youth and beauty nor that she became the bride of one of the world's most eligible bachelors, but the altogether startlingly new and different style she is setting as the nation's first chatelaine.

The contrast of Marge (do not forget the hard "g" pronunciation if you meet her and manage to get on a first name basis) to Jeanne St. Laurent, Olive Diefenbaker and Mary-on Pearson could not be sharper.

They were — or compelled by circumstances became — such public persons.

And she is such a private person. Completely her own woman, as far as the world outside No. 24 Sussex Drive knows, and it knows precious little because of her very privacy.

Friends — she has few intimates — say she is this way not only because she is instinctively a private person but becoming all the more so because Pierre has made such a thing, almost a fetish, of privacy.

There have been two small receptions for her so far in the Capital.

An officially - designated still-cameraman took a very few, quick ob - not - waste - time - or - make - a- nuisance - of-yourself photos for publication. But no press coverage for the Awards of Merit for City Youths

Tracie Watson, 11, and Donald Ferch, 10, were merit award winners in a province-wide poster contest sponsored by Fire Chiefs' Association. Co-ordinated by Paul Stephenson, left, the area contest was for all school students. From the province, there were ten thousand entries for the competition. Chief Lee Cullnane presented the certificates to the youngsters along with a cash prize for their efforts. The city of Belleville also received recognition for fire prevention in the past year.

Community Involvement Is Urged for Blind

The registered blind must emerge from their segregated clubs and "show that they can become part of the community", the supervisor of recreation for the Ontario division of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind says.

D. Stewart Hayter was guest speaker last night at the annual joint meeting of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Advisory Boards of CNIB.

"Children have the greatest possibilities - as far as integration is concerned," he told his audience, assembled in St. Andrew's Church for the annual banquet. "They are pliable and flexible, both the sighted children and the blind. The blind children should participate with their friends from their own neighborhood in municipally - run day schools or day camp programs."

Mr. Hayter said that organized recreation for the blind began 50 years ago with five-pin bowling, but is assuming increased importance now.

"By 1980 most of the work done in North America will be in service - oriented fields, instead of the productive fields we have now," he said.

Service work does not lend itself to employment of the blind, and therefore a great need will exist in the future for recreation for the blind. Recreation Mr. Hayter defined as any form of leisure - time activity, including sports, cultural and craft activities.

However, the speaker cautioned that "protective, segregated recreation" is still needed for those who lose their sight late in life. Fifty per cent of the registered blind are over 60, and find adjustment difficult without access to clubs and groups for the blind.

In 1970 there were 138 blind people in Hastings county and 28 in Prince Edward. The Hastings advisory board registered eight blindness prevention cases and Prince Edward one.

Hastings county provided services necessary to relieve eye conditions and to prevent total blindness to four people last year and Prince Edward to one.

Trained workers, themselves blind, aided 117 sightless persons in Hastings and 22 in Prince Edward.

Ten blind people in Hastings and three in Prince Edward received rehabilitation teaching from blind teachers, including instruction in touch reading and writing, typing, handicrafts and household skills.

One blind person was given special instruction in foot travel and use of the white cane.

A total of ten people in the two counties were employed in sheltered workshops, newsstands, tuck shops and the like.

Fifteen were given emergency relief or supplementary help in cash or kind.

Eleven are living in residences operated by the CNIB.

Special counselling and advice was given to two visually handicapped children and their parents.

Total cost of these services in Hastings county in 1970 was $31,043. The advisory board received $25,808 in revenue, the largest sum ($12,-300) from United Community Services' annual fund drive. The net deficit of the year was $5,235.

Municipal donations from Belleville, Trenton and the county totalled $2,500, general donations were $9,472 and provincial government grants amounted to $1,200.

Total cost of services in Prince Edward county last year was $7,134 and revenues were $4,722, leaving a deficit of $2,412.

The county contributed $700, general donations amounted to $3,715 and provincial grants were $290.

Trudeau Plane Back at Base

TRENTON (Staff) — The Canadian Forces 707 that took Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, wife Margaret, and their official party into Moscow's Vnukovo airport Monday, is certainly not sitting around waiting for its VIP passengers to come home.

The plane, flown to the Soviet Union by Major M. D. Broadfoot of Trenton, has already returned here to carry out other commitments with 437 Squadron.

"We cannot have a plane sitting around doing nothing," one defence department spokesman said.

Another 707 will fly out from Trenton to repatriate the prime minister at the close of his 12-day tour. In the USSR, he is travelling by Russian aircraft.

Council Plans Housing Survey

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County council plans to launch a survey to discover if subsidized senior citizen housing is needed here.

The decision was confirmed at Tuesday's council session after councillors referred to a proposal for a unique combined Ontario Housing Corporation's senior citizens' housing unit, a new hostel-type unit and a smaller replacement for the present Home for the Aged.

This plan was announced last week following a meeting between councillors and representatives of several provincial departments. The conference included the Hon. James Snow, minister without portfolio and board member of the OHC, H. Pullen, development manager, OHC, and L. Crawford, department of social and family services, director, homes for the aged branch. It was stated in a press release last week that "shared responsibilities would greatly reduce unit costs for both construction and operation".

Woman Indifferent To Moles on Her Face

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Will you please tell me why a well-educated, well-travelled, socially prominent, affluent, middle-aged woman who spends a fortune on clothes and a major of money in the beauty shop is content to go through life with two ugly hair-sprouting moles on her face? One is about the size of a large pea. The other is nearly as big as a dime.

Whenever I see this woman I am jarred anew by the sight of her moles although I have known her for several years. I cannot understand her indifference. Is it possible she is unaware of these unsightly growths? Would it be terribly rude of me to suggest that she have them removed? I'd like to hear your opinion on this. — CAPE COD.

* * *

DEAR COD: Keep quiet. The woman knows the moles are there. If she wanted to do something about them she would. Apparently they do not bother her. And, frankly, they should not bother you that much. I suspect souvenir in your childhood (a person you didn't like) had hair-sprouting moles, and this is why you are overreacting.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Who do you think you are that you can call a person insensitive, inconsiderate and sadist just because she telephones a friend in the middle of the night to tell her a mutual acquaintenance has died? More often than not the person who makes such a call hates to be the one who breaks the bad news, but someone has to do it.

What about nurses, doctors, police officers? Are these people sadists also? I hope you do better on your next answer. This one was lousy. — GREEN BAY READER.

* * *

DEAR GREEN: Nurses, doctors and police officers must notify the next of kin because it is their professional responsibility to do so. Instructions must be given and decisions must be made. It is up to the family to issue orders.

Please tell me what purpose is served by waking up a person in the middle of the night to inform him that a mutual acquaintance has died? The person who gets the call can do nothing but lose a night's sleep.

As I said in my first response, anyone who feels that he cannot wait until morning to pass the bad news has a streak of sadism.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: With so many changes taking place these days perhaps I am not on the latest. Is it now the "in" thing for the bride to completely ignore her family and the groom's family when planning the wedding party?"

I have a dear friend whose daughter is being married soon. The girl has two sisters and a brother. Her fiance has a sister and a brother. The bride has selected as her maid of honor, a girl she met only recently. Her bridesmaids are local school-mates. She has persuaded her future husband to ask a college buddy to be his best man.

Don't these roles belong, traditionally, to sisters and brothers? If I am wrong, please tell me. — NEENAH, WIS.

* * *

DEAR NEENAH: The privilege of serving as maid of honor or best man (also bridesmaids) goes traditionally to sisters and brothers. It is also traditional that the groom select his own best man and ushers. There may be over-riding personal reasons for doing otherwise, but a wedding is an occasion which calls for tradition and for strengthening of weak family ties.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Controlled Atmosphere Storage Boon to Apple Industry

By MARY MOORE

The reason you can buy wonderful Canadian McIntosh, Delicious and Spy apples in prime condition as late as May and June is because they come from Controlled Atmosphere storage.

Controlled, Atmosphere storage is an advanced form of cold storage in which not only temperature and humidity but also the amounts of carbon dioxide, oxygen and nitrogen are controlled, so that loss by respiration is very low.

A sealed room is required for this process and care must be taken to keep the atmosphere constant. These extra precautions add to the cost of the product, but extend the storage life appreciably. Some varieties of Canadian apples are now available for export at times when they were previously unobtainable.

In CA storage, maturing is slowed down and texture is maintained. The apples almost literally go to sleep — in fact CA apples are referred to in the industry as Sleeping Beauties.

I visited the Norfolk Fruit Growers' Association plant in Simcoe, Ontario and am full of admiration for their wonderful apple "know-how".

I have been testing apple recipes all week. You will remember that last week I gave you a tested recipe for Canadian Apple Pie using my beloved Spys.

Today I am giving you two more apple dessert recipes with a difference.

NORFOLK FRUIT CUP

1 cup pared, diced (¼") McIntosh apples
¼ cup white wine
1 cup chopped Honeydew melon or cantaloupe
1 med. orange chopped (see below)
½ cup red, pitted, drained, Canadian canned cherries
¼ cup maraschino cherry syrup

Soak apples in white wine in covered jar 24 hrs. Add all remaining ingredients. Serve in stemmed glasses for dessert (or as a first course.) A delicious change. NOTE: With very sharp knife pare orange right through to the juice cells and slice and cut into ½" cubes, removing the centre pith as you cut.

BAKED APPLES

Wash and core as many Spy apples as you need for the number in your family. Be sure to remove all of the seeds and rasp carpels.

Into hole measure 1 tsp. sugar and fill to top with red jelly or jam. I used red currant jelly. With point of paring knife slit skin around broadest circumference of apple. This allows them to split a little at sides without spewing out at the top. Place in baking dish and add 1 cup hot water, cover with foil and bake about 1 hr. at 400 deg. Fahr. or until tender. Serve warm or cold with some of the pan juice spooned over each.

Dinner Menus

FRIDAY

Treasure Chest Decor Highlights OES Tea

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

The days when pirates sailed away to the exotic scenes of their adventures were evoked by the hall decor at the 'treasure chest' tea and bazaar held on Wednesday afternoon at the Masonic temple by the Belleville Chapter No. 55 of the OES.

At the entrance to the hall, a life size mannequin dressed as a mermaid reposed gracefully in a miniature underwater palace, the floor of which was studded with shells and corals. A porpoise sported in one corner of her "room" while colorful flying fish hovered over the net draperies.

In the hall, a large treasure chest overflowing with fake pearls, silver medallions and a variety of other jewellery sentinelled the entrance. The jewellery was donated by members and friends and after the event, it will be sent to a school in the North West territories, so that the Indian children can use the beads and stones for their handicrafts.

Brightly colored starfish, and other kinds of fish were "trapped" in the fishing nets pinned to the curtains and walls. Tropical birds with brilliant plumages hovered in the air while palm leaves adorned some of the curtains. Fixed to the centre of the wall drapery was a painting of more exotic flora and fauna done on a beige mat.

The main tea table was centred with a mahogany treasure chest resting on a base decorated with yellow and blue flowers. The centrepiece at the smaller tea tables consisted of miniature gilt-painted treasure chests on styrofoam bases sprinkled with colored gravel. The serviettes had an anchor motif, further underlining the nautical theme.

The convener of the tea was Mrs. Laura Simpson while the co - convener was Mrs. Ivy Loveless.

A novel table at the bazaar was the sea food table convened by Mrs. Ann Combes with Mrs. Reta Bonnetta as co - convener. Offered for sale on this table were cans of sea food, tuna salads and a large cooked lobster.

Another unusual feature was the treasure chest of groceries table convened by Mrs. Gladys Sheffield with Mrs. Beverley Shaw and Mrs. Betty Lou Allin as co - conveners. Draws were held on several treasure chests filled with an assortment of groceries and the co - conveners conducted their business dressed in grass skirts and colorful blouses with garlands of flowers round their necks.

The home bake table was convened by Mrs. Margaret Finnigan who was assisted by Mrs. Helena Cook. The variety table convener was Mrs. Pearl Johnson while the co - convener was Mrs. Pearl Kerr. Presiding at the candy table were Mrs. Bessie Hart, convener and Mrs. Jennie Taylor, co - convener. In charge of the men's table was Harold Bankier who was assisted by David Hollinger. A green thumb table selling a variety of potted plants was convened by Mrs. Florence Moon with Mrs. Bessie Hollinger as co - convener. The convener of the business girls' table was Mrs Claire Elliott.

The tiger lily convener was Mrs. Leah Pitt with Mrs. Margaret Booth and Mrs. Thelma Liddle as co-conveners.

Mrs. Louella Brickman was the tea room convener and the co - convener was Mrs. Marjorie Gray. Refreshments were convened by Mrs. Bobbe Locke with Mrs. Wanda Clare as co - convener. Pouring tea were Mrs. Reta Henning, Mrs. Norma Graham, Mrs. Eva Weese, Mrs. Irene Brown, Mrs. Anna Post, Mrs. Mary Botford, Mrs. Doris Roberts, Mrs. Wynn Tomlinson, Mrs. Pearl Johnson and Mrs. Thelma Liddle.

Guests were received by Mrs. Dgrothy Jones and Miss Jeane Stephenson while the tea room hostesses were Mrs. Kathleen Adams, Mrs. Thelma Liddle, Mrs. Odycle Cross, Mrs. Ada McMullen, Mrs. Laura Simpson and Mrs. Gladys Gray.

Lobster for Tea?

Mrs. Ann Combes displays a large cooked oyster which was one of the main attractions at the sea food table, a novel feature inspired by the nautical theme of the decor at the treasure chest tea and bazaar held on Wednesday afternoon by the Belleville Chapter 55 of the OES. Mrs. Combes was the convener of the sea food table while the co-convener was Mrs. Reta Bonnetta.

Women's Hospital Auxiliary Enjoys Two Presentations

Women's Hospital Auxiliary members were recently entertained by two presentations, one entitled 'Puppets for Moppets Show', as dramatized by Mrs. C. D. Ashley, convener of the puppet group and her committee. They displayed a charming little family of puppets, including a clown, monkey, bunny rabbit and jolly Santa Claus. Her assistants each read a verse of poetry in relation to the individual puppet being featured. Mrs. Ashley said these are all made from bits and pieces of material, providing many hours of pleasure to the recipients. Tribute was paid to Mrs. E. Hall by Mrs. Ashley, as the originator of the Puppet Group some 17 years ago. Mrs. Hall expressed thanks to the group for their presentation.

The second feature, 'Pediatrics Shenanigans' was displayed by Mrs. A. Twigg, convener of pediatrics. She demonstrated the efforts put forth by the volunteers to make a child's life more content while a patient in hospital. Mrs. P. Stokmans, playing the role of a child patient, slightly discontented, soon became adjusted with the understanding care of the volunteer.

Mrs. J. B. Durrant, convener of Volunteer Hospital Services, explained a few details on the construction of volunteer service for pediatrics and reported a revision of guide lines in relation to this work. She also reported 92 volunteers gave 695 hours of service during April and 1738 books and magazines had been distributed to patients.

The president, Mrs. J. E. Nelles reported that Auxiliary memberships will be sold in December and bulletins will not be mailed after March to non - paid members. She expressed thanks to social convener Mrs. M. Tretina for the arrangements made for the recent Laboratory Technicians graduation reception; Mrs. Nelles reported preparations are being organized for nurses' graduation October 2.

Mrs. P. M. Till, convener of Holiday Treats reported baby bootees were handed out on Mother's Day. She especially wished to express thanks and appreciation to the Women's Institute of Madoc for their donation of an abundance of knitted bootees and slipper socks. The interest of an outside organization is much appreciated.

The Opportunity Shop is prospering, and a cheque for $1,100 was presented to the president by convener Mrs. C. A. Campbell. She said the Shop will be closed May 24, and requested donations to be delivered before the late June closing.

Membership convener, Mrs. S. B. Bochnak reported there are 279 paid up members, including 50 new members. The Bulletin editor Mrs. J. H. Forrester asked that members who are moving, to be sure to inform the committee of a new address.

A social period followed with refreshments served by Mrs. Tretina and committee.

B and P Club Installs Officers

A number of business items were discussed at the meeting of the Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club held Monday evening at the Sun Valley Motel.

Miss Jeane Stephenson, outgoing president, conducted procedures following a tasty steak and mushroom dinner. She also gave a comprehensive report of the recent Provincial Conference held in Niagara Falls which she attended as a delegate. Several members of the club also attended this event.

Annual reports from each of the officers were given and a typed financial statement was available to all members. An impressive candle lighting ceremony was conducted by Past President Dorothy Ellis who presented an immediate past president's pin to Miss Stephenson. In turn she was congratulated by the new president Lois Brown for her fine leadership during the past year. Mrs. Brown then conducted the remainder of the meeting.

For the program an excellent demonstration on wigs with members participating was given by Miss Linda Watson, Frankford.

Plans for the final meeting of the year were discussed and this was left up to the executive for a final decision.

WEDDING

OOSTING — MUMBY

St. John's United Church, Campbellford was the scene of the recent wedding of Susanne Harriet Mumby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mumby of Campbellford, and of Jan Roelof Oosting, son of Mrs. Feike Oosting and the late Mr. Oosting of Stirling. Rev. Gordon A. Whitehorne conducted the ceremony.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white peau-de-soie empire style gown with a shoulder length veil. Her bouquet consisted of red roses and ivy in the shape of a cross.

The maid of honor Cathy Wickens of Minto wore an empire style gown with a green velvet bodice and a green taffeta skirt. Green velvet bows adorned her hair and she carried green tinted 'mums.

The bridesmaid Jill West of Stirling was in a green velvet empire gown and carried green tinted 'mums.

The bridegroom was attended by Peter West as best man while Brian Callery was the usher.

The bride's mother wore a double blue and white double knit dress with a blue hat and black accessories. The bridegroom's mother chose a mauve fortrel dress set off by brown accessories.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Northern States the bride donned a rose accordion pleated dress, black accessories and a black hat. Upon return the newly married couple will live in RR 1, Stirling.

Dear Doris: I gained too much weight around my tummy. I am not pregnant. My husband tells me to try and eat as little as possible. I do that. And I keep away from pastries.

My clothes fit too tight around my waist and I look like a bag tied in the middle. — Tubby

Dear Tubby: You don't have to make a martyr of yourself; you have to eat right. Not just nothing.

You can eat just as much as anybody else, if you stick with the foods that nourish you without laying on the fat layers. You can have bread and jam, if the jam is a diet spread and the bread is whole wheat.

You can have sweet desserts if they are fresh fruit, or fruit juices made into jelly. You can have a vegetable cocktail between meals to stave off the pangs.

You can have gorgeous, delicious steaks, chicken, omelettes, if you trim off the fat, and don't fry things in a lot of same. Salads ought to be eaten with just salt, or a dressing made with cottage cheese or yogurt.

It's a challenge, but reducing this way saves health and keeps you feeling good. Write in for my Simple Recents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Doris: I am an unemployed male, 24 years of age and single. I plan to attend technical school but if I can't enrol until next September, I don't intend to sit around idle. I was wondering what a person's chances are of hitchhiking around the world?

My main concerns would be food and shelter. Do you know of any organizations which I could perform odd jobs along these regards? Perhaps, too, would be of help to me in the way. — Wanderlust

Dear Wanderlust: Hitchhiking scorns an ocean has its problems, though there may still be ships needing deck hands. You can't travel on exactly nothing.

Redesigned Tankers Could Eliminate Oil Pollution Threat

OTTAWA (CP) — Highlights of Wednesday's parliamentary committee meetings:

COMMONS

Environmental Pollution—Derek Cove, a North Vancouver naval architect, said redesigning tankers would almost eliminate the possibility of oil pollution on the Canadian west coast from a proposed tanker route south from Valdez, Alaska. Later, Capt. Fred Collins of the Vancouver tug company Seaspan International said a tanker route through Juan de Fuca Strait was feasible under carefully controlled conditions.

External Affairs—Mitchell Sharp, the department minister, said that although he saw little chance of Canada extending its territorial waters to 100 miles on the east and west coasts to prevent pollution, Canada would hold the U.S. responsible for any pollution damage in Juan de Fuca Strait off Vancouver Island as a result of oil being shipped to Cherry Point, Wash., from Valdez.

National Resources—When the third and fourth units of the Ontario Hydro nuclear power plant at Pickering become active, there could be a serious shortage of necessary heavy water to keep it going, J. L. Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, said that while the Canadian General Electric plant at Point Tupper, N.S. was at full production of heavy water, there still were problems with the Glace Bay, N.S., plant. The Douglas Point, Ont., plant would not be in production until 1973.

SENATE

Banking and Finance—Ron Basford, corporate and consumer affairs minister, announced a system of tariffs awarded Sound Recording Licenses (SRL) Ltd., by the copyright appeal board. Over the protests of broadcasters, radio stations grossing over $100,000 annually will have to pay royalties of three-twenty-fifths of one per cent of gross revenue for the right to play SRL records. Television stations and theatres would pay a nominal fee of $1 for 1971.

Mackasey Under Fire for Ending Seasonal Aid

Heads Indians

George Manuel, new president of the National Indian Brotherhood, says federal Indian Affairs department money — $213 million this year — should be allocated by Indians through responsible tribal councils. He says it is all spent now by the department at the Ottawa level and Indians themselves have never had a say in the use of it. (CP Photo)

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey explained to the Commons Wednesday why the government has decided against extending seasonal unemployment benefits beyond the May 15 cutoff date and quickly received a scorching blast from the opposition.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) said the minister had become "a part and parcel of the whole devious scheme." r. Mackasey had adopted aM Mr. Mackasey had adopted a deceitful posture.

Ed Broadbent (N D P —O s hawa-Whitby) said the minister now has joined "the minister of finance and his other, smug colleagues." If he were really concerned with the average Canadian he would resign from the government.

Gilbert Rondeau (SC—Shefford) said Mr. Mackasey is part of an incompetent government.

Mr. Mackasey said that if the seasonal benefits—payable between Dec. 1 and May 15—were extended to the end of June it would cost between $35 and $45 million. This was not the best way to spend so much money.

He said the number of persons receiving seasonal benefits, at last reporti some 200,000, was not proportionately higher than last year when 180,000 received such benefits. Of these, some 40,000 would be resuming work in the fishing and agriculture industries, and others would return to work in forestry and water industries.

About 60 per cent of the total would have been back at work by the May 15 cutoff date, he said.

Mr. Broadbent said that since the cold weather and snow delayed spring activity by about a month this year, the cutoff date should be extended for this reason alone.

Mr. Alexander said the judgement of the government had to be questioned when it spends $58 million on youth programs but refuses to extend seasonal benefits.

The resignations of former transport minister Paul Hellyer and former communications minister Eric Kierans had exposed the disastrous economic course of the government, he said.

Later in the question period, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked whether the government would advance the date—July 1—when new unemployment insurance legislation is to take effect.

No, replied Mr. Mackasey.

Hearing Deferred

TORONTO (CP) — A private members bill that would permit the City of Toronto to expropriate property to further plans of real estate developers was deferred until next Wednesday by the Ontario legislature's private bills committee.

One use of the bill, sponsored by Henry Price (PC—Toronto St. David), would be to give the city power to expropriate land needed by a Montreal developer for the proposed $200 million Eaton Centre development in downtown Toronto.

Greene Says Canada to Use Oil for Own Good

MONTREAL (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene told a group of American oilmen Wednesday that Canada intends to utilize its natural resources primarily for its own good and expects its trading partners to open their doors to more finished products manufactured in this country.

Mr. Greene told the spring meeting of the American Petroleum Institute's marketing division that foreign interest in Canada's resource industries has helped the country grow but long-term energy trading commitments with the U.S. which might have unpredictable results should be avoided.

"There is no place in Canada-U.S. energy relations for trading arrangements amounting to long-term commitments too far in advance of our ability to predict their consequences to the Canadian economy and, therefore, to continental relations."

The inaccuracy of forecasts for the last two or three years shows "it would be wrong to commit too far downstream resources which belong to the Canadian people," he said.

"We are not against the export of these resources when they are clearly in excess of our own requirements, particularly where the export today can benefit the Canadians of today, and at the same time can help generate the discovery of more resources for the Canadians of tomorrow."

Mr. Greene emphasized that the government is not afraid of foreign investment which, he said, has contributed to Canada's growth.

"Governments—both provincial and federal—have been accused of everything from the outright giveaway of our birthright to allowing foreign domination of our resource industries to permitting the wholesale export of raw materials instead of developing further processing industries at home.

"This sort of criticism has become very popular with certain segments of our society of late. It is usually . . . delivered with far more emotion than facts and perhaps all of us who have knowledge are responsible for this. Sometimes the criticism has been afforded the dignity of emanating from creditable pundits; for the most part a great deal of nonsense has been uttered."

Despite such criticism, Mr. Greene affirmed that foreign investment has always been an important factor in Canada's growth.

"There are many things we are not particularly happy about. But, we are not afraid of foreign investment . . . and if the citizens of other countries are ready to invest their money in Canada, if they are prepared to abide by our laws in doing so and to become good corporate citizens of Canada, then we are certainly not going to penalize them."

Canada should be more concerned about exports of more labor-intensive products, he said.

Countries which trade with Canada should open their doors to more finished products from this country if they want to continue using a developing natural resource industry here, the energy minister told delegates.

"In a country whose continuing problem . . . is that of unemployment this must be a prime objective.

"U.S. tariff policies which fail to recognize this essential Canadian need . . . may well be shortsighted and inhibit the growth of our resource industries." It would be politically unacceptable to continue exporting only raw materials.

It would not be possible, however, to insist that all natural resources be processed before export.

"If we had a monopoly on world production of oil, gas, minerals, pulp and all the necessities we export, I suppose we could insist that it be done. But such is obviously not the case, each of these are competitive markets in which we must meet the competition if we would sell. . . .

"Those who have ready and pat solutions which ignore this premise are either economic illiterates or political demagogues."

Hope Is Essential Ballast But Poor Compass

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

In navigating through life, hope is an essential ballast, but a terrible compass.

• • •

One mania I have never understood is the passion for betting on horses; at least if people bet on turtles they would get a lot longer run for their money.

• • •

"Incompatibility" strikes me as an absurd grounds for divorce; all couples are incompatible, being made up of two individuals of different sexes, and the whole point of marriage consists in learning to find areas of compatibility.

The way in which most of us assert our "individuality" is by using our freedom to become exactly like our neighbors.

• • •

People who are uneasy in the presence of the famous or talented should keep in mind Eleanor Roosevelt's wise injunction: "Remember, no one can make you feel inferior without your consent."

• • •

A "well - informed" man is someone who has thought up better arguments to support our position than we have.

• • •

The difference between Freud and most of his popularizers is that Freud knew when a cigar was just a cigar.

• • •

We can bear any scorn from the young, except their current evaluation that to be old is per se to be unattractive; and a nascent culture that finds no beauty in age will become increasingly self-lacerating in time.

• • •

Insurance protects you against everything txcept the legalistic terminology it is couched in.

• • •

A "pseudo-intellectual" is an intellectual who makes no effort to conceal his sense of superiority from us.

• • •

Whatever the disparities in language, people laugh much the same all over the world; and where there is universal humor, there is hope for universal agreement on matters that cannot be laughed at.

• • •

The most a defeated politician learns from experience is to be more plausible next time.

• • •

The most annoying sort of bickering neighbors are the ones who are loud enough to be disturbing without being loud enough to be intelligible, so that we get all of the din and none of the dirt.

• • •

I have yet to meet a professed "self-made" man who was even slightly ashamed of his maker.

• • •

Some people are so tactless that the form of their apologies constitutes another offence.

It's often hard to tell the difference between a reformer with an idea in his head and one with a constriction in his bowels.

Very Quick with A Rhyme Was Ogden Nash

He'd Have Rhymed This Head to Say He's Dead

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Ogden Nash, whose hard-to-forget rhymes deflated the pompous and cheered the troubled, died Wednesday. He was 68.

Nash had been receiving kidney treatment at Johns Hopkins Hospital following abdominal surgery in March.

Nash's satire was a little sharp around the edges, but never bitter. Its wisdom came from a wealth of insight rather than from one philosophy.

He found cheerful and flippant fault with such items as women's hats and other people's children. But the Nash irony had a mixture of tenderness and love of life that quickly won him friends.

Nash's career as a poet began in 1930 when, as a 27-year-old writer for Doubleday and Co., he wrote some nonsensical lines of poetry and captured the attention of New Yorker magazine.

After publishing his first book, Hard Lines, in 1931, Nash turned to poetry full time. He wrote more than a dozen other volumes and helped compose three Broadway plays.

Nash didn't neglect the problems or the times with his humor. One of his most famous verses championed the environment long before ecology became a household word:

I think that I shall never see
A billboard lovely as a tree.
Perhaps unless the billboards fall
I'll never see a tree at all.

In 1931, the waning days of Prohibition in the U.S., Nash wrote "Candy is dandy, but liquor is quicker." In the 1960s he added: "Pot is not."

Some of his verses were couplets and quatrains that, once heard, ran through the mind over and over at the oddest moments:

Celery, raw
Develops the jaw.
But celery stewed,
Is more quietly chewed.

Nash's big splash in verse catapulted him to the managing editor's chair at the New Yorker for six months. Twice he went to Hollywood as a script writer.

He scored a smash on Broadway in 1947 with One Touch of Venus, later made into a movie.

Committee Won't Provide Forum for Critics of Quebec Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner made it clear Wednesday that the government has no intention of providing a forum for opposition members to criticize its activities during the Quebec crisis last fall.

The Commons debated a government motion to set up a joint House-Senate committee to consider replacement legislation for the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, which expired April 30.

Mr. Turner said the government would not support an amendment offered last Tursday by Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) to have the committee report first on the circumstances surrounding the Oct. 16 proclamation of the War Measures Act.

He said the amendment was not designed to ascertain what emergency legislation may be needed in the future, but was designed to appraise what had been done inthe past.

He asked whether it would not turn the committee proceedings into a "partisan, political exercise, possibly acrimonious."

Mr. Woolliams argued when introducing the amendment that it would be impossible for the committee to recommend legislation for future emergencies involving violence and disorder if it could not examine what had happened in the past.

Mr. Turner said he was not suggesting that the committee should not look at the history of terrorism and violent confrontation in Canada.

The bombings, murders and riots were largely a matter of public knowledge.

The committee and its chairman would have discretion under the resolution.

As with all parliamentary committees, however, the majority of members will be from the government.

Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) said the government has already decided to draw up special legislation and is merely trying to spread the guilt through a committee.

Tougher Law Planned On Welfare for Teens

TORONTO (CP) — Thomas Wells, Ontario minister of social and family services, said Wednesday the province is planning tougher regulations to reduce welfare payments to some groups.

Mr. Wells said in an interview the regulations will be directed at teen-agers who leave home and live on welfare and immigrants, especially United States draft-dodgers.

Mr. Wells also said the province may ask the federal government to amend the Canada Assistance Act to add residence requirements for welfare recipients as one way of cutting down on welfare to U.S. draft-dodgers. Under this act, Ottawa pays 50 per cent of welfare payments.

Immigrants with landed immigrant status must be sponsored by relatives in most cases and it is the responsibility of the relatives to provide for the newcomers, Mr. Wells said. As a result, they are not a pressing problem.

Cut in Number Trained As Teachers Advocated

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The president of the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario said Wednesday it's unfair, immoral and unreasonable to keep teachers' colleges open to capacity in light of the existing teacher surplus and a declining student population.

Marion Evans said in an interview that "teachers' colleges have always had the attitude they are government agencies and therefore can't deny admission to anyone who wants to attend."

Two B's Picked In Midget Draft

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

PETERBOROUGH — It's official title is "the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A priority selection meeting". But ask anyone who follows minor hockey fortunes in the province and he'll tell you it's "the midget draft".

The annual selection, in which the ten OHA Major Junior A teams name players they hope to sign, was held Wednesday in Peterborough, home of the 1970-71 regular - season champions, and two Belleville hockey products were among 144 boys picked in 16 rounds.

JOHN MULVIHILL

Defencemen Kevin Dockrill and John Mulvihill, both members of Belleville's Eastern Ontario Junior B entry for the past two years, were eighth - round choices in the 12 - round selection of boys eligible to play midget hockey this past season.

Dockrill, a rugged right defenceman, was named by Kitchener Rangers as their eighth choice. He picked up four assists and 44 minutes in penalties this year with Belleville Fairways.

And left - side rearguard John Mulvihill, captain of the 1970-71 Belleville B's was named by Peterborough Petes. An offense - conscious defender, Mulvihill scored eight goals, assisted on 25, and logged only 27 penalty minutes.

Peterborough coach Roger Neilson said Mulvihill impressed him as a "heady" player. The Petes have three returning defenceman from their pennant - winning team, and Mulvihill was one of five blueliners Peterborough named in their 32 choices.

Peterborough management is also hunting for goalkeepers to fill the gap created by the loss of Trenton native John Garrett, the league's best goalkeeper for the past two seasons. They named four goalies in the 12-round midget and four-round over-age midget selections.

Meanwhile, four members of last year's Trenton midgets were named in the midget - age selections.

Ron Ferguson, younger brother to Toronto Marlboros' George, and Belleville Mohawks' Al, was a sixth-round choice of St. Catharines Black Hawks. Ferguson, a six-foot-two, 170 - pounder, has been a centre with Trenton Lions the past two seasons.

Teammates Darrell Cole, a six - foot - two, 210 - pound defenceman, and centres Steve Keech and Kevin O'Donnell were ninth, tenth, and eleventh - round choices of Toronto Marlboros. Keech collected 61 goals and 48 assists this year for the Trenton midgets, the second time he led the club in scoring.

No area players were among the 32 named who were not eligible for midget hockey this past season, all but a handful of whom played junior B hockey.

The honor of being first draft choice fell to Wilf Paiement, a minor - midget who played last season with New Liskeard juveniles. Paiement, a 185 - pound 15 - year - old, is a brother of Rosaire of the NHL's Vancouver Canucks. He was named by Niagara Falls Flyers, who earned first pick by virtue of their last-place finish in the ten - team league this winter.

Among the draft early-birds was Gananoque forward Willie Wing, picked fourth in the opening round by Hamilton Red Wings.

Kingston midget Bob Ferguson, son of former NHL-er and Belleville Mo-Hawk Lorne Ferguson, was a sixth-round choice of Oshawa Generals. Teammate Darryl McGregor was picked by Niagara Falls in the seventh round.

Drafted players are not obligated to join the teams that name them. If a selected player objects, the drafting club must arrange to transfer him to another club or let him return to his original club.

Quinte Track Changes Don't Include Winners

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Some new and pretty faces made their first appearance and some of the oldest track and field records in the book made their last at the annual Bay of Quinte COSSA meet held at Centennial Secondary School yesterday but Trenton High School just kept rolling along.

"I wish we could burn those black and gold sweaters," grumbled one rival coach as a Trenton runner broke the tape for what seemed to be the 100th time in the meet.

The only thing in danger of burning was the track, as Trenton scorched the opposition for thirty tenth consecutive Bay of Quinte title piling up 294 total team points to as well as each other in the marathon ten hour competition.

Trenton boys piled up a record shattering 227 team points to walk away with the "AA" title, while the BCI girls combined for 84 points to win the major school section in their category, Albert College came through to win the team titles in both boys and girls in the "A" section.

"I was extremely pleased with the times yesterday," noted Trenton coach Peter Howe, "I think that our indoor training paid off 200 per cent, but I was also glad to see the quality of performance at some of the other school improving, particularly in the younger age groups."

The top individual performance of the entire meet was turned in by Trenton bantam Mark Petrie. The first year performer shattered Bay of Quinte records in the 100 metres, 200 metres and long jump to easily win each event.

Despite the all-around effort by Petrie, the top individual award in that age group went to BCI's Bruce Sutherland for a 5'4" high jump. The top individuals were determined by Protuguese tables which compares the performance of the athlete to the existing world

In the midget boys section Dale Best of Centennial blazed to a 24.0 time in a heat of the 200 metres to tie a record set in 1954 and earn the honors as the top individual performer.

Centennial grabbed two other records in the section as pole vaulter Don Johnson wiped out the oldest Bay of Quinte mark with a 9' 5" vault; and distance runner Ron Brown turned in a 4:55.2 timing in the 1000 metres.

Brown officially won the 3000 metres as well although he finished far behind King George elementary school student John Sheppard, whose winning performance didn't count in the official standings.

Marie Brain of Quinte topped the midget girls with an 8.0 clocking in the 60-yard dash to take the individual honors. The 14 year-old contestant added a 12.8 first place performance in the 100 metres, which was half a second faster than the winning senior mark.

Trenton's Dennis Bowman was a triple winner in the junior boys and added the individual crown with his record breaking 15.4 effort in the 120-metre hurdles. Bowman topped another mark with his 43' 6" triple jump and added a third win in the long jump.

Teammate Judy Aziz of Trenton earned top single honors in the junior girls with a mark of 5' 0" in the high jump. Charlene Quinn of Quinte set two marks for the age group in winning the discus and javelin.

Senior boys individual winner Chris Milligan earned the title for his winning 21' 11½" long jump add added a record in the 200 metres, while tying the existing mark in finishing second in the 100 metre dash. Teammate Duncan Armstrong was credited with a similar 11.2 clocking in winning the event.

Distance standout Paul Cory chopped 24 seconds off his record - setting 3,000 metre run of last season and added another win in the 1500 metres.

Cory qualified for COSSA in the 800 metres, but agreed to let BCI middle distance star Dave Simmonds replace him. Simonds, who set a Bay of Quinte record in winning the 800 metres missed the start of the metric half - mile.

The senior girls individual title went to Nancy Hastings of Trenton for a 4' 11" performance in the high jump. Nancy Fran of Picton was another standout in the section setting records in both the 200 and 400 metres.

The top four finishers in each event qualify for the Central Ontario championships to be held next Saturday at Sir Thomas A. Stewart Collegiate in Peterborough.

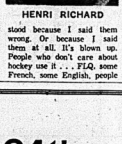
Gary Mutswairo of Albert College, nicknamed the "Mini-Flash," easily out-distanced the competition in junior 100 metres competition in the Bay of Quinte COSSA track and field meet held at Quinte Secondary School Wednesday. Mutswairo and his teammates captured both the boys and girls "A" championships, while the Trenton High School boys and BCI girls took team honors in the "AA" section. The top four finishers in each event qualified for the COSSA championships next Saturday in Peterborough.

Richard Shows Remorse

MONTREAL (CP) — "I'll be very disappointed if Al MacNeil is not my coach when we go to camp this fall . . . I mean that."

Those were the remorseful words Wednesday of Henri Richard, the diminutive Montreal centreman who scored two goals in the Canadiens' 3-2 Stanley Cup win over Chicago Black Hawks Tuesday.

While coach MacNeil sat quietly in the corner of the plane flying back from Chicago early Wednesday, Richard was saying:



"Look around . . . look at these players who are celebrating a great thing, the Stanley Cup. Is Al MacNeil enjoying it like them? I hope he will because he deserves it as much as me."

After the Habs were defeated 2-0 in the fifth game of the series, Henri told some French-language reporters that MacNeil was an "incompetent coach, "the worst coach I had ever played for." And now he's sorry, very sorry.

"It's such a shame," Richard was saying after the Habs' 19th Stanley Cup triumph.

"They say he's through. That's a crime . . . a damn crime."

"I said a few words . . . words that were misunderstood because I said them wrong. Or because I said them at all. It's blown up. People who don't care about hockey use it . . . FLQ, some French, some English, people who hate jump on this."

HENRI RICHARD

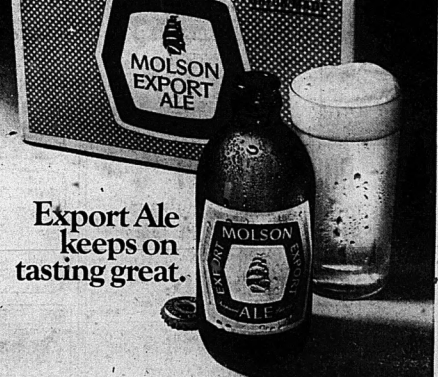
Still sad and trying to relax after a dressing-room celebration, one in which he sat aside from his team-mates in sober meditation, Richard went on to explain the outburst.

"Let me say, for once and for all, exactly what I meant and what I believe," Richard said.

"Worst coach . . . incompetent. I said that, right? I never meant that.

"I'll never change my mind about that game. It was a terrible coaching job. That was one game. I've had terrible games too.

"Every coach has a terrible night, every player a terrible game but one game doesn't condemn a man."



Richard went on to say that Al MacNeil of Sydney, N.S. was exactly the opposite of incompetent.

"He's a rookie so he makes mistakes just like I did when I was a rookie," he said.

"When he was bad I said so. When I've been bad, they've said so. Well, maybe not all the time. That's why I should have said nothing."

WHIT TUCKER

OTTAWA (CP) — Rough Rider Whit Tucker, one of the top-rated pass-catchers in the Canadian Football League, announced his retirement Wednesday.

Tucker, 30, blamed knee trouble for forcing his retirement. He has had surgery on his right knee twice since 1969.

He said his speed was gone after the last operation and that he didn't want to risk more knee trouble by staying in the game.

He also said his appointment as manager of an Ottawa stock brokerage firm was a consideration in his retirement from football.

Habs Applauded by Half-million

MONTREAL (CP) — Half a million Montrealers bathed in bright sunshine and unrestrained joy Wednesday as downtown streets became a sea of hockey fans applauding Montreal Canadiens, hockey's Stanley Cup champions.

From office buildings, restaurants, bars and shops, the fans flooded main arteries and mobbed the parading Canadiens.

The procession of convertibles carrying the winners of Tuesday night's seventh and deciding game of the world championship Stanley Cup series took more than 2½ hours to travel its two mile route.

The girls, tip-toeing in their mini-skirts and hot pants, waved and threw kisses. Some got closer, the men shouted their congratulations and encouragement.

From buildings came more cheers and presents for the victors—flowers, streamers and ticker-tape.

Police were even more hard-pressed than when the Montreal Alouettes brought home the Canadian Football League Grey Cup last fall. Tuesday night's 3-2 win over Chicago Black Hawks brought the National Hockey League championship to the city for the 10th time in 18 years but the fans appeared more excited than ever.

Fifth Year for East

Remparts Win Memorial Cup

QUEBEC (CP) — There was a tiger when Junior hockey in this city was at a low ebb, but today it's at its zenith.

The reason: Quebec Remparts are the No. 1 junior hockey team in Canada.

The Remparts, Quebec Junior A Hockey League champions, brought the city its first Memorial Cup ever by defeating Edmonton Oil Kings 5-2 Wednesday night to sweep the abbreviated best-of-three national final in two games.

It marked the fifth straight year that a team from Eastern Canada has won the national junior title and it was the third consecutive season that a team from the province of Quebec has taken the title.

Montreal Junior Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A series won the crown in 1969 and 1970.

"There's nothing I can say," said winning coach Maurice Filion after the game. "I'm so happy.

QJHL president Bob LeBel said the Memorial Cup championship was a great thing for his league and the Quebec team.

"It's the greatest thing that could have happened," said LeBel. "I'm very proud of them."

Wednesday's game, Edmonton general manager Bill Hunter promised that his club would do a little more hitting than they did in the first game of the series Monday night, won 5-1 by the Remparts.

But referee Jack Bowman of Montreal ruled with an iron hand. He assessed a total of 34 minor penalties, 13 to the Oil Kings, Quebec team captain Guy Lafleur was given a misconduct penalty in the second period when he protested a charging penalty too vigorously.

The Remparts grabbed a 1-0 lead on a power-play goal by Jean Landry at 9:17 of the first period, with Quebec holding a 5-4 manpower advantage.

But only 19 seconds later, Oil Kings' defenceman Derek Harker tied the score.

Hunter became incensed with Bowman's officiating a few seconds later when he penalized Harker for holding and was even more annoyed when the Remparts took advantage of the penalty and grabbed a 2-1 lead on Jacques Richard's goal at 11:26.

Before the period ended however, Edmonton tied the score as Bert Scott tipped in a goal-mouth pass from Don Kozak at 16:05.

Richard increased the Remparts lead to 4-2 at 6:26, beating Hendricks with a shot from just inside the blueline while the Remparts' Pierre Duguay was off for holding.

The Oil Kings protested that Richard Grenier's pass to Richard crossed two lines and was therefore offside, but to no avail.

Landry then scored another power-play goal at 18:57 to cap Quebec's splurge and round out the scoring for the night.

As the clock ticked off the final seconds, the 11,401 fans rose and started singing the Remparts' theme song, Ils Sont En Or.

ATHENS (CP) — Rea Madrid, snatching an equalizer with the last kick of normal time, lived to fight again Wednesday night after their European Cup Winners Cup final with Chelsea of England ended in a 1-1 tie after extra time.

A 56th minute goal by centre-forward Peter Osgood seemed to have won the game for Chelsea until Ignacio Zoco popped up in the 89th minute to grab the equalizer.

Chelsea, dominant in the second half, struggled to keep out the Spaniards in extra time as Real, six times European Cup winners, launched a final all-out assault in an attempt to win the Cup Winners Cup at the first attempt.

The teams will replay here on Friday.

SOFIA (AP) — Bulgaria defeated Hungary 3-0 Wednesday in a first-leg qualification match in the European Cup of Nations soccer tournament before 30,000 fans in cool and rainy weather.

On that day Northern Ireland with two points meets Wales in the last match of the series. Wales has two points and Scotland one.

Braves Break in Bats Against Expos

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mike Lum and Clete Boyer each drove in three runs with a pair of homers Wednesday night as Atlanta Braves shelled Montreal Expos 10-4.

In other National League night games, Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Cincinnati Reds 6-1, Philadelphia Phillies trimmed New York Mets 4-1, Los Angeles Dodgers nipped St. Louis Cardinals 6-5 and San Diego Padres edged Houston Astros 3-1 in 10 innings.

In an afternoon game, Chicago Cubs thumped San Francisco Giants 9-3 behind Billy Williams's two homers.

Lum, filling in for sore-legged slugger Hank Aaron, belted his second and third homers of the season while breaking in a new set of bats delivered just before the game.

Boyer crashed his second homer of the night—and sixth in his last eight starts—after chugging around the bases earlier in the game for an apparent inside-the-park shot which, in reality, had cleared the fence and caromed back on to the field.

In their last three games, the Braves have walloped 11 homers—to seven for the opposition—while winning all three to move within 7½ games of pace-setting San Francisco in the West Division.

There have been 50 homers hit in 21 games at Atlanta this season—30 by the home team.

Boyer, who has homered in each of the last three games, capped a five-run Atlanta flurry in the third inning with his two-run inside-the-park wallop that wasn't.

Neither Boyer, nor the umpires were aware it had gone out.

CLETE BOYER

"I was looking for the umpire's signal," said the 34-year-old third baseman. "I didn't run too hard to first because I figured the left fielder would either catch it or it would go out. I ran pretty good to third but going around third I had just about had it."

Boyer led off the sixth with a drive far over the left field fence and Lum followed with another homer to right. Lum completed the long-ball barrage with a two-run blast in the eighth.

"When I found out I was going to play," said the Hawaiian-born Lum, "I started back to the clubhouse to tell my wife to come out and watch the game. Someone else was on the phone and another guy told me my new bats were in.

"So I went over to get them —and I broke them in right. But I never did get around to calling my wife. She's never seen me hit a home run."

At Chicago, Williams knocked a three-run homer in the first inning, a bases-empty homer in the third and a two-run triple in the sixth, powering the Cubs to their seventh victory in eight games.

J. C. Martin added a two-run homer for the Cubs and Ferguson Jenkins survived three San Francisco homers on the way to his seventh consecutive victory and eighth in 10 decisions.

Jenkins, a 27-year-old Chatham, Ont., native, became the first Canadian-born, major league pitcher to win 50 games.

Roberto Clemente drilled four hits, including the first inside-the-park homer ever hit in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium, as the Pirates shot into first place in the East Division.

In addition to his third homer of the season, Clemente singled and scored in the first inning, tripled home one run and scored another in the fifth and laced a run-scoring single in the ninth.

Philadelphia's Terry Harmon cracked a tie-breaking three-run double in the seventh inning, handing the Mets their fourth straight setback and dropping them one game behind the Pirates in the division.

Rookie Bobby Valentine started a tying two-run rally with a seventh inning single and broke the deadlock with a run-scoring single off Bob Gibson in the eighth, carrying the Dogers past St. Louis.

Nate Colbert doubled in the 10th and raced home on Ollie Brown's single off the glove of Houston second baseman Denis Menke, giving the Padres their first victory in six games.

Oakland Sings Happy 'Blue's'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vida Blue, Oakland Athletics' young southpaw pitcher, continues to dominate batters in the American League.

Blue won his ninth straight game Wednesday night, a 3-0 whitewashing of Milwaukee Brewers. It was the fifth shut-out for the dazzling 22-year-old.

"I'm learning as I go along," says Blue, who must be one of the fastest learners in baseball. The only time he lost was on opening day to the Washington Senators.

Blue, who pitched a one-hitter and a no-hitter last season after being called up to the big time from the minors in September, says he still is not completely confident on the mound.

Despite the statistics' Blue doesn't necessarily think of himself as a shutout pitcher.

"When I go out to pitch," he said, "the first thing I think about is winning the game."

Blue had control problems in the early innings, walking a batter in each of the first three frames, but got better as it got later and wound up pitching one of his strongest games.

After the rocky beginning, Blue at one point retired 10 batters in a row before Danny Walton's single opened the seventh. The only other Milwaukee hits were singles by Roberto Pena in the third and Ron Theobald in the eighth.

What did Williams have to say about his brightest star on a pitching-rich staff?

"Well, he's not much of a hitter," Williams said.

Rentzel Goes To LA Rams

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) -- Dallas Cowboys have traded off a public relations problem, grabbed a needed clutch-receiving tight end and bagged two flashy wide receivers to add leverage to their Bob Hayes negotiations in a lightning series of National Football League swaps involving seven players.

Wide receiver Lance Rentzel, on probation for five years for indecent exposure, was traded Wednesday to Los Angeles Rams for tight end Billy Truax and wide receiver Wendell Tucker.

Lance Alworth of San Diego Chargers, the seventh-ranking receiver in professional football, was sent to the Cowboys in exchange for tight end Pettis Norman, offensive tackle Tony Liscio and defensive tackle Ron East.

The Cowboys, who only recently obtained speedy flanker Glosier Richardson from Kansas City Chiefs, have been searching for more receiving help after Hayes, who played out his option in 1970, decided to shop about for a possible new team.

Rentzel's trade came because Cowboys' officials felt it would be best for him and the team.

Rentzel pleaded guilty to a charge of exposing himself to a 16-year-old girl last November and didn't play in the Cowboy's stretch drive to the Super Bowl.

"We know we are giving up one of the top flankers in the league, but I thought he would be better off in another city where he had the same opportunity to play regularly," coach Tom Landry said.

Rentzel caught 185 passes for 3,531 yards and 31 touchdowns in his six NFL seasons.

Alworth's statistics are awesome. In nine seasons, he has caught 493 passes for 9,584 yards and 81 touchdowns.

Goyer Comes Under Heavy Fire For Handling of 'Pen' Revolt

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer's cautious, close-mouthed handling of last month's savage Kingston penitentiary rebellion coupled with continuing reports of reprisals by guards against prisoners have brought sharp attacks on his department's actions.

Mr. Goyer came under heavy fire in Ottawa this week from opposition critics for his refusal to allow the Commons justice committee to visit Millhaven penitentiary and interview the Kingston rioters, transferred there after the uprising ended.

Asst. law professor Desmond Morton of the University of Toronto, who played a central role in ending the April 14-18 rebellion, has unleashed several broadsides against Mr. Goyer and his refusal to order a public inquiry into the disturbances.

However, it is doubtful that Mr. Goyer, in his toughest fight since assuming the usually inconspicuous solicitor-general's portfolio late last year, will relent to either demand.

About 500 prisoners were transferred out of Kingston to Millhaven and other institutions after the riot, which resulted in the deaths of two convicts and 19 others injured in beatings administered by fellow prisoners.

Reports have filtered out of Millhaven and into the Commons of brutal beatings administered by guards to prisoners at Millhaven in reprisal for the six guards that were held hostage during the Kingston rebellion. The guards were released unharmed.

As the situation stands now, a three-man commission of inquiry begins in-camera hearings on the rebellion June 7—without the public, without the news media, though Mr. Goyer may release its recommendations.

No charges have been laid yet in the deaths of convicts Brian Ensor, 26, found dead in the prison, and Bertram H. Robert, 34, who died later of injuries suffered during the rebellion. No charges of any kind have arisen from the rebellion to date, though Crown Attorney John E. Sampson of Frontenac County says charges are pending.

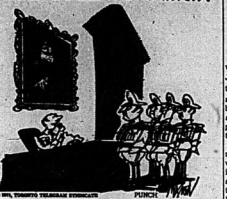
Discussing the relation between possible charges and the closed inquiry, Prof. Morton wrote in Wednesday's edition of The Globe and Mail:

"As in-camera inquiry will not do, whether or not charges are laid. If charges are laid, an in-camera investigation or a well import secret inquisitorial proceedings . . . previously unknown in the Canadian adversary process.

"If no charges are laid, surely the public is entitled to know why not. In any event, the public is entitled to some information both as to the law and the alleged facts."

In Ottawa Tuesday, New Democrat Arnold Peters of Temiskaming suggested a visit by the justice committee might help kicked out the front gate.

The prisoners' side of what happened after the riot, as pieced together from affidavits, Mr. Peters' comments and from convicts' letters received by Prof. Morton during the past month, is as follows:



Three hundred of the 500 convicts who surrendered the main cellblock the morning of April 18 were moved to Millhaven aboard buses that shuttled back and forth between Kingston and the new institution, 17 miles to the west of the city.

Those aboard the last bus to enter Millhaven, including most of the ringleaders, had to run a gauntlet of guards' clubs and fists. Mr. Peters said he talked to one prisoner who suffered a six-inch scalp wound and a bruised leg.

Another prisoner, Norman McCaud, swore out an affidavit saying he had been beaten by the guards. McCaud was on a prisoners' committee that negotiated settlement of the penitentiary rebellion with Prof. Morton and four other members of a citizens' committee.

On May 12, says Prof. Morton, 19 prisoners identified as ringleaders were moved from Millhaven into solitary confinement at Collins Bay penitentiary, including William Knight, another member of the prisoners' committee.

Woman Had Whip, Use Is Suggested

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Court Judge Gordon Johnson suggested Wednesday that "a few solid whacks across an unprotected backside with a bull whip would probably serve as an excellent deterrent" for persons guilty of creating disturbances.

Judge Johnson made the remark while sentencing five women who interrupted a fashion show in the Hotel Vancouver and created a disturbance at the Vancouver public library last March 10.

The women were given suspended sentences and placed on probation to keep the peace for two years after being convicted of creating a disturbance in the library by shouting, screaming and swearing.

"If you ever come before this court again, I intend to deal severely with you," Judge Johnson told them.

Witnesses testified that one of the woman was carrying a bull whip at the time of the disturbances.

Lewis Demands That Young Go

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Leader David Lewis called Wednesday for the immediate dismissal of John Young as chairman of the federal prices and incomes commission.

The Commons refused the required unanimous consent for a motion proposed by Mr. Lewis condemning Mr. Young for what the motion called a continuing series of statements claiming that inflation is Canada's Number One problem.

Mr. Lewis said this was outrageous "propaganda and apology for government austerity programs" which had forced unemployment to record highs.

If the prices and incomes commission were allowed to continue, it should be re-defined to prevent its chairman from acting as a government propagandist.

Later in the question period, Mr. Lewis asked whether Mr. Young's statements indicate that the government is preparing a continuing fight against inflation.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson said he had not seen the statements attributed to Mr. Young. The government had been following an expansionary policy for a year.

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said opposition comments seemed to indicate that the government should not be concerned about inflation.

Prices for Beef Likely to Go Up

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada said Wednesday beef prices in Canada may increase during the second half of this year.

G. E. Steele said the rising prices would be due primarily to increased cattle feed prices in the United States.

Blight damage to corn in the U.S. reduced the annual yield by 15 per cent, American agricultural sources warn that the condition is expected to recur this year, he said.

Kierans Makes Plea

End to Boom-and-bust Policies Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Eric Kierans, former communications minister, said Wednesday Canada needs a fundamental revision of its economic thinking in trying to emulate the United States.

Since the post-Second World War days of Mackenzie King's government, successive finance ministers have adopted policies towards business that have resulted in boom-and-bust cycles, he told a luncheon meeting of the National Press Club.

He said the same kind of thinking now sways the Trudeau government, from which he resigned in protest against its plans for continuing business advantages under the country's proposed new tax laws.

Unless there is a fundamental change in economic thinking, Canada will undergo another boom in business investment in new plant and equipment and another employment slump resulting in more unemployment, he said.

Mr. Kierans, a former president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges and prior to that, a Quebec provincial revenue minister, blamed the country's swings between boom times and high unemployment on tax laws encouraging business to invest in new plant and equipment.

Since the Second World War, various plans have been employed to give business tax advantages for expansion and modernization.

Business can claim more against taxable profits now than is actually spent on new plant and equipment. In 1968, some 192,000 corporations reported to their shareholders they had profits totalling $8,350 million, he said. But that year, they reported profits to the revenue department for tax purposes amounting to only $5,020 million.

The difference was between the kind of depreciation companies actually set aside for new plant and equipment, and the amount they are permitted to deduct from profits for tax purposes.

Mr. Kierans said through tax-law treatment of depreciation, the government has been encouraging business to replace workers with machines.

The United Saes has he greatest industrial plant and equipment in the world. Canada shouldn't try to emulate that artificially, Mr. Kierans said. To try to make a leap into the U.S. ranks of industry distorts the whole Canadian economy, he added.

"Now we have virtually a branch-plant economy. That is not the fault of the United States, but our own fault. We haven't the capital the United States has, but we have got an awful lot of labor. We should be taking advantage of our plentiful supply of labor."

Mr. Kierans said that while industry has built up its plant, machinery and equipment supply at high cost, the government has for about two years been trying to slow down the economy. What it has done last been to cut off demand, but prices can't go down because of high industrial costs that still have to be met.

In addition to attacking the accelerated depreciation allowances made for business expansion in current tax laws, Mr. Kierans criticized corporation tax deferrals. He said business now has about $3,500 million that it can use at no interest, but which is really owed to the federal treasury.

He also said the current rate of corporation taxes, about 52 per cent of profits after accelerated depreciation charges, should be cut to about 40 per cent. The government, in its proposed changes in tax law, intends to keep corporation taxes at about 50 per cent.

Mr. Kierans said the government's announced plan for integrating personal income and corporation profits taxes "will collapse on its own accord."

New Detention Centre Planned

TORONTO (CP) — The government will replace the old juvenile detention centre in Hamilton with a renovated facility on Jarvis Street, to be opened at the beginning of August.

Attorney-General Allan Lawrence announced Wednesday that the costs of renovation and building a gymnasium will be about $60,000. And rental will amount to $100,000 a year.

When did you last look at your tires?

You may be in for a nasty surprise. Official safety inspections indicate that most motorists don't know what shape their tires are in. Ernie's Special Was Spotty

NEW YORK (AP) — Tennessee Ernie Ford, who looks like a city slicker and talks country-style, made a song Wednesday night with an hour of variety mixing urban sophistication and rural corn.

The NBC special, called Sing America Beautiful, was a sort of glorified sing-along as the studio audience joined in on some familiar tunes. Just about all the music was familiar at the opening production number, Waiting for the Robert E. Lee.

The comedy—jokes by Ernie and guest star Danny Thomas—was on the level of Hee Haw. Then Diahann Carroll came along and stole the show with her version of Danny Boy and 76 Trombones.

Tom and Dick Smothers had a short turn with a little singing and a lot of their usual wrangling.

The show was pretty much of a hodge-podge, and there were uncomfortable moments when things were pretty saccharine, but its intentions were good.

Word out of Hollywood is that guest stars will be paid about the same next season as they were this past one.

Top drawer talent on the top variety hours will receive up to $7,500.

Widest range for pay is in the two-hour made-for-TV film features. Some important performers have received as high as $75,000, although the normal range for such series is about $30,000 to $35,000.

Desert Dwellers Seek Aid

The banner was strung across Ocampo's unpaved main street.

Faces of peasant farmers reflected surprise as they watched their president and his party stir up clouds of white dust in walking through the streets of this outpost in the northern state of Coahuila.

Ocampo is indeed a "door to the desert." The surfaced road from the outside world ends at the city's limits. Beyond, there is nothing but desert spotted with 2h ejidos—the communal farms that dot parts of Mexico's land revolution a half century ago.

For the people who live on those farms little has changed since the days of the revolution. They still try to scratch a living from the desert with primitive methods, managing only a marginal existence far from the current of this country's flourishing economy.

President Luis Echeverria, 48, promised in his inaugural address Dec' 1 to do something about the problems of the "campesinos" and their poverty. He called this the most serious problem Mexico faces.

His visit to the northern desert was his way of showing he means business. He has created a national Arid Lands Commission "to promote development of the arid zones of the country."

About half of Mexico's land area is considered arid, land on which no cereal crops will grow without irrigation or land where crops fail at least half the time because rainfall is scarce.

Echeverria is telling the farmers not to expect spectacular overnight results, and is urging them to help help help them. He inaugurated here one of the self-help plans.

This area's main product is candelilla wax, a substance with several uses, the most important as an ingredient in the hard white covering of some kinds of chewing gum. The Ocampo area produces one-fourth of Mexico's national candelilla wax production and exports large quantities to the United States.

But overproduction has forced down the price and built enormous stocks in Coahuila warehouses.

Echeverria wants to stop production for a while and get the farmers to work building desert roads.

They will be paid the minimum wage of $2 a day), which is more than double the average daily income from the land here. The government hopes this will stimulate the region's economy while federal and state authorities look for new ways to provide steady employment for the 13,000 ejido farmers in the Ocampo area.

The government will also spend about $6.4 million over the next four years on irrigation projects, schools and sanitation.

This will include help for construction or rebuilding of 1,500 farm adobe houses, two health centers and three schools. One school will teach new agriculture techniques.

Tapes Favorite Loot for Thieves

A pattern for thefts of stereo tapes decks has been set with increased numbers of the luxury items stolen from parked cars.

Police last weekend reported four such players stolen and in each case cars were locked . . . thieves had to break windows to gain entry to the vehicles.

City police Chief Douglas Crosbie said this morning that in discussion with police departments across Ontario officers realize "this is getting to be a common occurrence and from the numbers being stolen, it is evident that there is a market."

As long as people are willing to buy these items, thieves will have a market."

Chief Crosbie warned the public to "be sure when you buy, to know where these machines come from. If someone offers a tape machine for sale and there is any question, we would appreciate a telephone call."

The chief said tape decks are a present novelty much like radios in cars were a few years ago. He said with more automobiles equipped with radios, the market for them as a novelty dropped off and he predicts much the same result for tape machines.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Part IV — The last in a series of four columns on marijuana.

In previous columns in this series I promised that I would at last get down to some important questions and answers regarding the marijuana problem. I'll keep that promise. But before I do, I think this short note will be of interest:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I feel that it is your responsibility to make your readers aware of some facts about marijuana. First of all, marijuana, like all other drugs bought off the street, differs in quality and content.

One should never take anything if he is unsure of its components. Almost everyone knows that marijuana comes in two forms, hasish and grass; but some people who are unfamiliar with drugs, may not know that some "pot" is soaked in opium, morphine, and other more dangerous drugs.

And marijuana coming from the Middle East and Vietnam is usually stronger than that coming from Mexico and especially from the United States. You can't be too careful. And I suppose the best way to be careful is not to smoke at all. (Signed: One who is careful).

* * *

If it is true that familiarity breeds contempt, I hope what I tell you now about marijuana will breed sufficient contempt for this Indian hemp plant to say "no" if you are ever offered a joint by your peers. It will enable you to resist such jeers as "don't be chicken".

I suppose you know, but I'll repeat it, that hashish is often five or six times stronger than the usual marijuana. It is much more concentrated. A chemical THC (tetrahydrocannabinol) is the basic ingredient of marijuana and hashish. The amount present determines the strength of the drug. Marijuana is illegal in most countries. Such a widespread ban would not be in force if its intoxicating effects and potential harm were not recognized and accepted.

When it is smoked, it enters the blood stream quickly and immediately begins to affect the user's mood — causing anything from mild euphoria I mentioned earlier to more extensive personality changes bordering on psychosis and suicide.

We know what physical effect it has, but not just how it exerts such effect. We don't know the long term effects of the drug, but short term reactions are: reddening of whites of the eyes, coughing due to irritation, rapid pulse, dryness of throat, increased hunger and drowsiness.

But it's the emotions that seem to bear the impact of its action. Time becomes distorted. Minutes seem like hours. Colors and sounds are intensified. Although the individual user feels high, nevertheless he tends to withdraw into himself.

He may burst into uncontrollable tears or laughter. He may become suspicious and abnormally anxious. He cannot make good judgments. His reflexes are blunted. (Therefore his poor driving.)

Marijuana is not a narcotic and doesn't cause physical dependence, therefore ordinary withdrawal does not cause symptoms of physical sickness. But if taken regularly the drug may cause psychological dependence.

And of course the real danger is that the marijuana user may become a real narcotic addict. No direct cause-and-effect link has been discovered. Nevertheless, researchers have found that the one predisposed to using one type of drug may be likely to go on to using much stronger drugs.

This is no time or place for going into a dicussion of the legal aspect of marijuana. All I ask is that youngsters learn to say no to any invitation to indulge. Drug experimentation is poor compensation for potential personality and physical damage that may last a lifetime.

If your're on the stuff, get off. If off, don't jump on what seems to be a hilarious bandwagon of daredevilry. But really is just plain stupidity. Marijuana? Keep off the grass!

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For May 21

Your birthday today: The sun moves into Gemini at 1:16 p.m. Eastern Daylight time. In other years the time of the change is not the same; may be earlier or later. Both Taureans and Geminis born today (in any year) are promised a second, third and perhaps a fourth chance to change their methods for increased material rewards. All todays natives are enterprising, restless people.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Concentrate on practical methods that have worked well in the past. Leave the experimenting to others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your budget or resources limit your participation in some venture. Let it pass; another, more suitable, is coming up soon.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Today tends to be a long one. Take a rest when you can and avoid rushing around. Later hours bring unexplained or coincidental conditions for which no plans exist.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Display your skills and scholarships. With any luck somebody watching will be helpful. Fill in today's work evenly.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 23): Your activities quite likely reach a moment of crisis where you must take some chances no matter what you may be trying to achieve. Pray for guidance.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 — Sept. 22): Think again over recent events. You see another facet of human nature, another side of the story — or even change your mind about something important.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): A theatrical quirk in your nature comes to the surface and you catch yourself showing off or arranging a moment of drama. Go ahead in good humor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Change and exchange exceed normal rates. Forcing issues or stalling them avail you nothing. Listen well, then adjust to new rules limits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You put your foot into unlikely places — not just your mouth. Signatures and pledges are easy to give, difficult to redeem later, impossible to get out of in good order. Use restraint.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): What your friends do defies logical explanation. And there's more to come if you don't spoil things by trying to find out details prematurely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Stretch your patience — the result is well worth waiting for, or can be replaced by even better alternatives after you have proved your worth and drives.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Long established habits and contacts make the difference in something referred to you for personal attention.

Trailer Liquor Store Opens

PORTLAND, Ont. (CP) — Ontario's first portable liquor store opens for business in this Rideau Lakes resort community of 300 today, offering a selection of 300 brands of liquor and wine.

The store, a 60-foot-long white trailer, is self-service and intended mainly to shorten the trek for thirsty tourists, said manager John O'Callaghan.

The nearest permanent liquor store is in Elgin, 10 miles west of here. Mr. O'Callaghan said the Liquor Control Board of Ontario portable store will offer a selection comparable to that offered in Elgin and other small community stores.

Beer drinkers will have to wait until June 1 for the Brewers' Retail portable beer store. Portland residents approved sale of liquor in a referendum vote last December, but the community has no hotels, nightclubs, lounges or bars.

The liquor store, the first of several planned to open this year, will remain open for business until mid-November, when the deer hunting season closes.

Portland is 40 miles northeast of Kingston.

Minorities Question To Be Topic

OTTAWA (CP) — The situation of minority nationalities in the Soviet Union is one of the topics Prime Minister Trudeau will discuss with Soviet leaders, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) asked whether Mr. Trudeau will suggest to Kremlin leaders the need to give a free vote to Estonians, Latvians, Lithuanians, Ukrainians "and other captive peoples."

External Affairs Minister Sharp said the prime minister would.

Mr. Diefenbaker also asked whether the prime minister would seek permission to place a Canadian consul-general in the city of Kiev to aid Canadian citizens of Ukrainian origin who wish to visit.

Mr. Sharp said he is not certain whether the prime minister would do so, but the topic has been discussed in the past.

Aid Denied Troubled Children

TORONTO (CP) — A report to the Canadian Mental Health Association says no cause in Canada is as unpopular as that of providing services instead of punishment for troubled children.

The report, released Wednesday, says a three-year survey of facilities for children in Ontario "uncovered a nightmare."

"Few Canadians are ready to believe that mothering is a skill, not an instinct, that all babies aren't well-fed and treasured, that all children are not equally able to behave themselves and learn," it says.

It says Canadians are tender toward the battered child, toward children killed or maimed in accidents, physically handicapped or mentally retarded, but refuse to believe that one million children in the country suffer from emotional and learning disabilities.

The survey was made under the auspices of the mental health association and the Toronto Junior League. Volunteers surveyed day care and homemaker facilities, family and child agencies, mental services, police, juvenile courts, teacher training institutions and group homes.

They found services overwhelmingly inadequate and said:

"Some parts of Ontario have no services whatsoever for troubled children. For treatment they fall back on the embittering techniques of punishment and shame."

Residential Plans Given Top Priority

Board Hears Zoning Pleas

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Recommendations for the future of Belleville's residential development were given top priority at last night's meeting of Belleville and Suburban Planning Board.

Staff planners were instructed to analyze the residential portion of the draft official plan before proceeding with any other portion.

These instructions were issued after several petitions requesting rezoning of "B" class multi-dwellings to "A" class single family residential, were protested to city council and planning board.

The West Hill Ratepayers Association and west hill area residents are the most recent of the petitioners to request curtailment of apartment development in their district.

The first to take direct action and receive approval for rezoning from council, were residents of Sinclair Avenue.

Home owners along adjacent Ritchie Avenue have made the same request.

The Ontario Municipal Board must approve the city's rezoning before it becomes effective and a public hearing must be held to determine what objections might arise.

"The city engineer will be consulted," said planning director Bert Kenny, "but until final Belleville and Suburban Planning Board agreement has been given for the proposals, the engineer won't be consulted in depth."

The report indicated that future apartment developments would rent for an estimated $145 monthly and three-bedroom townhouses would rent for $185.

For purposes of the official plan, the report suggests future rental development be based on a 60 per cent apartment and 40 per cent townhouse growth pattern.

Mr. Danziger told the planning board there "are no town houses for rent in Belleville now except those in the Ontario Housing projects" and of those renting single family units, "25 per cent couldn't afford to move into modern apartment units, based on the family income analysis."

Britain Gets Euromart Green Light

Heath and Pompidou Aim At Super Power Europe

PARIS (AP) — President Pompidou of France and Prime Minister Heath of Britain met again today to conclude a broad agreement to work for a united Europe rivalling the American and Soviet super powers.

Pompidou, after long secret talks with Heath Thursday, gave the green light for Britain's admission to the European Common Market, removing the biggest obstacle to the British bid. Diplomats of the two countries worked through the night to formulate a joint declaration.

The two leaders proclaimed their desire to revive the British-French entente cordiale in an exchange of toasts at a state banquet shortly before midnight Thursday night.

"On many essential points," said Pompidou, "and particularly concerning the general concept of Europe, its organization and objectives, our views are sufficiently close to allow us to continue without pessimism."

Heath in reply said he was heartened "to discover in my talks with the president how close are our ideas and aspirations."

Pompidou, harking back to President de Gaulle's crusade against American domination, said unity would permit Western Europe to regain "command of her own destiny" and recover "a purely European concept of civilization."

Although both stressed that much remains to be negotiated before the enlargement of the European Economic Community, Heath said he believes British entry will be settled soon and this will clear the way "for a momentous step forward" toward European unity.

For France, it will mean abandoning more than a decade of hostility toward its British neighbor.

For Britain, it will mean abandoning its 30-year-old policy, better known as the Common Market. They are France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. Three other applicants—Norway, Denmark and Ireland —are lined up behind Britain, waiting for the terms of its admission to set the pattern for theirs.

For Britain's Commonwealth partners, it threatens the collapse of their association, even though some members can negotiate special trading links with the enlarged community.

Six nations now make up the European Economic Community, better known as the Common Market. They are France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. Three other applicants—Norway, Denmark and Ireland —are lined up behind Britain, waiting for the terms of its admission to set the pattern for theirs.

44 in Montreal Hospitals After Vicious Street Fight

MONTREAL (CP) — Fourteen policemen and 30 demonstrators were taken to hospital Thursday night after a vicious street fight at the start of an anti-war demonstration.

A police lieutenant said motorcycle gang members provoked the brawl which broke out near the start of the demonstration about two miles east of the target — the United States consulate.

Placards and pamphlets proclaimed the parade to mark the first anniversary "of the solemn statement by Chairman Mao Tse-tung of China for people of the world to unite to overthrow U.S. imperialists and their lackeys."

About 75 demonstrators were arrested after the attack on police barriers with two-by-fours.

Between 300 and 500 demonstrators gathered at St. Louis Square in east-central Montreal and got as far as police barriers at Sherbrooke and St. Urbain streets.

There, the front rank swinging their sticks, charged the police riot squad.

"We didn't make a move until they were on top of us with two-by-fours," said one riot squad member.

About 40 marchers were arrested immediately and taken to police headquarters. That number went up to 75 by the end of the demonstration.

Hellyer Plans New Party

"... no unemployment problem, but we do have a surplus of salt!"

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Hellyer said today that he and some associates—unnamed but not MPs—will launch a movement next week that could become a new political party.

The former Liberal transport minister made the statement to reporters after saying in the Commons that this disagreement with government policy will force him to sit as an Independent Liberal.

Mr. Hellyer declined to say how many persons comprise the new group or even whether he is leader or chairman.

He said the group will hold a news conference here Tuesday to outline its plans on how a greater impact can be made on government. There now was discussion of his proximity to the U.S.

This proximity, he said, is reflected in the "growing consciousness among Canadians of a danger to our national identity."

Trudeau also said Canada will consider what steps it can take to speed mutual troop reductions in Europe by the North Atlantic Alliance and the Soviet bloc. He said he would hold cabinet discussions on the subject after his return to Canada.

In two hours of discussions Wednesday, Brezhnev set out in detail his views on troop reductions and a European security conference, the prime minister said.

The two men also exchanged views on Berlin.

Trudeau said Canada favors mutual and balanced force reductions in Europe and believes a European security conference could be useful if certain problems were cleared away in advance.

He cited the NATO view that it might not be a useful conference unless a satisfactory solution on Berlin was found first, but he did not say that this was a pre-condition.

He rejected the suggestion that the protocol on regular Soviet-Canadian consultations would make Canada in any way an "honest broker."

He said the two parties agreed to consult on political and other topics on a regular basis, and if in some cases this meant talking to their respective friends as well, this did not make Canada a broker.

"I have never been particularly fond of the role of carrying messages from one party to another. People are able to do that themselves."

Asked if he had been asked to carry any messages from Soviet to U.S. leaders concerning troop levels in Europe, he said no, and added that had he been asked to, "I would have said they could peddle their own papers."

He said that in talks with Kosygin and President Nikolai Podgorny he expressed the hope that the Soviet Union would take part in an international conference on the Arctic.

But he did not succeed in persuading his Soviet hosts of the usefulness of such a gathering, he said.

They preferred to deal bilaterally with arctic affairs, without bringing in non-arctic nations.

Canada Shuns 'Honest Broker' Role Between Super Powers

KIEV (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, having widened channels of communication with Russia in three days of Moscow talks, continued his tour of the Soviet Union today with a visit to Kiev, the Ukrainian capital.

Trudeau made plain after his talks with top three Soviet leaders that Canada will not be an "honest broker" in disputes between super powers and that he had not been asked to assume any "mediation" role himself. He would have turned it down if he had been asked.

At a Moscow news conference Thursday, Trudeau described the protocol signed by himself and Premier Kosygin as part of Canada's effort to affirm its independent foreign policy in face of "the overpowering presence of the United States of America."

The prime minister said Canada has found it increasingly important to "diversify its channels of communication" because

Dr. Potter Is All For Regional Government

Any area in Ontario designated a recreational and conservational or agricultural is "doomed" to never realize its full social and economic potential unless regional government is instituted.

The Hon. Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP for Quinte told The Lake Ontario Regional Development Council's 19th annual convention that regional government is the only way all municipalities can get a fair share of the tax dollar for development of major services.

Regional government, he said today in an address to convention delegates, "would allow a more rational distribution of industrial activity to the greater benefit of a larger number of people."

At present, said Dr. Potter, individual municipalities must finance their own major services and assist in education costs.

"While the larger, developed urban centre may be able to raise the necessary finances, the more rural areas face considerable problems," he said.

The Ontario government does not wish or intend to impose regional planning or government on the people of the province the cabinet ministry-advise and assist. But, Dr. Potter warned, "there cannot be little pockets of dissent, for that is a positive way of destroying the effect of the entire effort.

"Our researchers in the Regional Development Branch anticipate that tourism will become the major industry for the Lake Ontario region—with the Haliburton Highlands, the Kawartha Lakes, the Trent Waterway, the Quinte area and the Land O'Lakes being just some of the notable tourist areas," he said. "This is not to ignore the expanding and diversified manufacturing sectors in the major urban centres and the viable agricultural areas in the south, particularly Prince Edward, Northumberland and Durham and Southern Victoria counties."

It is anticipated that economic expansion in Peterborough, Lindsay, Belleville, Port Hope, Cobourg will provide job opportunities and social services for the people of the entire region.

The province had undertaken a study of the Lake Ontario region and phase I, an analysis of trends, programs and potentials will be released later this year, Dr. Potter said. This will be followed by a phase II report containing concepts for the future development of the region.

"It is no secret that Ontario's development has lacked somewhat in planning over the past—years, declared Dr. Potter. "In some instances municipalities have permitted behind - shelter development which isn't a great deal to be desired."

Because of this lack of planning, cities are facing the problems of too great and too rapid development, are plagued with social problems, overcrowding, pollution. At the same time other municipalities are declining and are desperate for economic development. It is these problems that the province, through its regional development program, is "setting out to arrest".

Dr. Potter handed a bouquet to LORDC from "the people back at Queen's Park in Toronto".

"You are the most aggressive of councils in Ontario," Dr. Potter said. "Your council has continued to provide a flow of invaluable grass roots opinions and suggestions that must be overcome and on the forms of development that you feel is essential for our region."

However, in presenting the bouquet to the development council, Dr. Potter chastised his home city of Belleville for not showing up to the organization.

In outlining the regional benefits derived from the council Dr. Potter departed from his prepared text to "ask the Belleville mayor to take note".

No Doll For PUC

TRENTON (Staff) — There is a new kind of doll on the market but the Public Utilities Commission here will not be buying one of its own.

"Reaucl-Anne" is not a plaything. She is a lifesize, very human-looking mannequin now being sold for use in mouth-to-mouth practice sessions.

The purchase of a "Resucl-Anne" for $359 was an item on last night's PUC agenda but commissioners dismissed purchase of the item for regular commission employee safety classes because they have now learned they can arrange to borrow one from the local chapter of St. John Ambulance.

Other Ranks To Get Medals

TRENTON (Staff) — The Peruvian government will offer another vote of thanks to members of 424 Squadron who assisted in relief operations following last year's earthquake in the South American country.

In a presentation ceremony to be held in CFB Trenton's Hanger 18, June 1, Peruvian merit medals will be received by 27 men from the Trenton Squadron involved in the operation.

Some of the recipients have been posted to other bases in the past year but will be returning for the event.

Reviewing officer for the parade will be Lt-Gen. M. R. Dare, Vice-Chief of Defence Staff, who will also make the presentations.

The government of Peru in December called five senior members of the Canadian party led by Lt.-Col. W. I. Butchart, to Ottawa for a medal ceremony. The pending June awards will recognize men of all ranks involved in the Trenton squadron's efforts.

Tourism Said the Biggest Asset Of This Area of the Province

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Tourism in the Lake Ontario Region could be lost to foreigners by Default, Edward Haynes, director of the Lake Ontario Regional Develop Council, warned Thursday.

He was one of the speakers at the organization's annual conference that heard complaints about inertia and veer of apathy, criticism of education and suggestions about changing the basis of taxation in give municipalities more power.

Mr. Haynes said people in the Lake Ontario development area "don't fully appreciate the potential of the tourist industry."

If tourism is not developed to its maximum potential it could be lost to foreign investors, he said.

Dr. R. T. Potter, minister without portfolio, said tourism will become a major industry, but the "expanding and diversified manufacturing sectors" should not be ignored.

The "obsession" with education took a lambasting from New Democratic Party MPP for Peterborough, Walter Pitman.

Mr. Pitman suggested compulsory education should be ended.

Some students are wondering if they are just collecting papers, he said, while the goal should be an educated society and an expansion of the human personality."

He said the "education obsession" was underlined by current high unemployment when $7.07's who cost $50,000 to train drove cabs.

Rev. H. J. Maloney, a member of the board of governors of Loyalist College, Belleville, said the community colleges are a partial solution to the problems of the public educational system.

In another panel discussion, the mayor of Cobourg, Jack Heenan, suggested a tax on gasoline and liquor could be levied by municipalities as an alternative to high property taxes.

He said money from these sources could finance recreation areas.

Other delegates discussed inadequate funds and voter apathy.

James MacQuarrie, Victoria County solicitor, deplored voter turnouts of 15 to 20 per cent in municipal electoral and suggested people who didn't vote should be struck from the rolls for one election.

Wayne Wood, clerk - treasurer of Dysart Township, cl debts and federal and provincial control of revenue, and suggested the only alternatives were wider tax powers or increased grants from the senior governments.

Mayor Heenan, who called for municipalities to be put on a equal tax-footing with senior governments, c i t e d Lakeland, Fla., as a city which gets 85 per cent of its revenue from tax-sharing arrangements with the state on roads.

Grade 13 Books Free

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Prince Edward school trustees last night voted to maintain a refundable $10 book deposit required annually from all students issued free texts at Bloomfield Collegiate Institute. The money, deposited at the beginning of the school term, is refunded at the close to all students returning complete sets of books in satisfactory condition. Deductions are made if any of the issued texts are missing.

Trustees also agreed textbooks should be issued free next year to grade 13 students since they are the only group not grant available of all books. Students entering grade 13 in former years have been required to buy their textbooks with hopes of re-selling them at graduation.

Board member Hutton Martin supported the decision to continue a deposit system describing respect for public property as "one of the great lessons of life." He said $10 is a "sizable sum" which offers students an incentive to take good care of school books.

Trustees were informed by Superintendent Harry A. Shortt that in the early days of the deposit system damaged texts netted from $1.000 to $2.000 annually.

Originally, inspection of the used books was handled by the school principal and the principal. In later years the entire teaching staff became involved in checking damaged books and the money kept now totals approximately $700 each year. It was stressed teachers are not responsible for the drop in the sum of the deposits realized since it is an almost impossible task to determine one year's "wear and tear" on the textbook. A stamping system has been introduced and books are stamped differently if renters fell late.

Several trustees observed this year's graduating grade 13 students may become annoyed when they learn there will probably be no sale for their used books since textbooks will be supplied free of charge next term.

Housing

A cross-sample of 1,500 renters in the Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow Township districts, the majority of renters fell into the $5,000 to $10,000 bracket and "it was discovered that a large percentage of renters (60 per cent) would be paying over 25 per cent of their incomes to rents, rent."

This percentage is considered the maximum renters should be required to pay for accommodations and the report suggested that the housing needs of persons unable to afford rents on the open market would be met by some form of low rental housing.

To this end, the planning staff recommended that, for the purposes of the official plan, land should be set aside for appropriate housing needs based on the 60/40 split.

This survey was undertaken to provide background material for the residential chapter of the official plan," explained Mr. Danziger.

In his report, he indicated that renters fall into the following categories single and townhouse, single family homes and converted homes.

His recommendation for land to be set aside did not rule out the latter two categories. The owners of developers have been concentrating on construction of apartment accommodations in Belleville is not promising.

The current development planner said that without adequate supplies of low income rental units, the renter will be forced to live in older converted dwellings unless some other low cost accommodation is provided.

In order to encourage the increased availability of low rent housing in the Quinte region, Mr. Danziger recommends local municipalities consider:

— Obtaining federal and provincial aid and programs for construction of low rent projects along the lines of Ontario Housing Corporation housing.

— Encouraging flexibility and originality in housing design in order to take advantage of any money saving innovations in construction methods.

— Promoting programs that would encourage private enterprise to enter into the field of low rent housing.

This survey will provide an extensive background for the planning staff's recommendations, which the board has requested for the June meeting.

Hilton Questions Water Decision

TRENTON (Staff) — According to Trenton Public Utilities Commissioner Hilton, for the projected Lake Ontario pipeline to feed this town with water would be like "carrying coals to Newcastle".

He expressed the opinion at last night's regular commission meeting and other members were in substantial agreement with him. The remark was prompted by disclosure of a letter received from Ontario Water Resources Commission project co-ordinator, A. R. Patterson, "requesting clarification of Trenton's commitment to the pipeline scheme.

"The town is in no way committed," said Mayor Duncan McDonald, explaining that Trenton has no intentions in the immediate future o. drawing water from the pipeline that will make lake water available to all Quinte-area municipalities.

He said the only reason Trenton is participating in area water servicing scheme is because it was clear that if "the town is not part now it cannot join later."

"If we are going to need lake water in 20 years, they will expect us to share in the capital cost of the pipeline," for which, he said, engineering studies will be finished in July, default i v e costs by September.

Mr. Hilton contended t h e OWRC will not be able to keep Lake Ontario clean, partially because ita pollution is an international problem, already of sizeable proportion.

He suggested t h a t the OWRC has the power to clean up the Trent watercourse — an adequate source for Trenton's water needs and to do this would be feasible.

"I agree with those who they can control pollution in the river far easier than in the lake," said Mayor McDonald.

One key to Trenton's involvement in area water service will be cost. The, raw cost of supplying a customer with 100 cubic yards of water is 17.5 cents for which the residential charge is 24 cents, 27 cents to CFB Trenton.

Commissioner Hilton takes the position that Trenton is in a favorable position to attract industry with its abundant supply of cheaply delivered water.

Fearing that deeper involvement with the pipeline will make water more expensive for domestic and industrial users, he called on the PUC to determine exactly where the town stands in its relationship to t h e regional scheme: Trenton will be asking its own questions before it answers those from OWRC.

Retarded Can Be Helped

For three days delegates from 117 local associations in Ontario discussed the many problems still facing the three per cent of the population who are mentally retarded.

Keynote speaker, F r e d Krause, deputy director of the Mental Retardation in Washington, D.C., noted that "now after so long a time of being thought helpless, hopeless human accidents, we know that the retarded can be helped, can become in many cases, contributing citizens".

Among the issues discussed at the conference were investigated workshops and residences services for the whole family and recreation programs for all-age retarded people.

Planning Board To Pay Back Rent

The Belleville and Suburban Planning Board is "living on borrowed time," Arthur F. Jones, secretary-treasurer informed the board last night.

Mr. Jones was referring, however, to the fact that planning board had not paid its monthly rent of $250 since the end of March.

No written agreement has been signed to pay city hall for the rent and the "only way we'll sign a lease is on a month-to-month basis."

The board gave their approval to payment of rent on a monthly basis.

City-Dwelling Students Can Go Out to the Farms

The Ontario government is fostering urban - rural cooperation and understanding through a summer student exchange program.

It will send 4,000 city youngsters down to the farm for a week of finding out what agriculture is all about.

The main objective of the Urban - Rural Exchange Program 1971, is to provide a learning experience for young people aged 12 to 15.

Under the scheme, students will apply, through forms distributed in their schools, to spend a week on a farm. The host family on the farm will include the urban student in the regular farm life so that he or she will get a serious insight into the business of farming. The exchange is conceived as an ideal opportunity for Ontario farmers to make urbanites aware of the agricultural situation.

"This is not a baby-sitting job for farmers," said the coordinator for this area, Monica Alyea. "They will gain long - term benefits through increased understanding of their problems."

Miss Alyea is one of 20 university students hired by the Ontario government to coordinate the scheme. She is responsible for four counties, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Hastings and Prince Edward.

Urban students will be selected only from cities having populations of 20,000 or over. In this area only youngsters from Belleville and Kingston are eligible. About 120 from Kingston and 80 from Belleville will be selected.

They will be taken by bus to their host farms and picked up again at the end of their week's visit. Each child is asked to contribute $3 toward the cost of transportation.

Instigators of the program hope that the friendships formed will enable rural young people to visit the city at a future date arranged between the families involved. In this way, the rural students will have an opportunity to sample urban life.

All students will be covered by insurance and an orientation meeting will be held for groups of visitors before they leave for the farms to instruct them in farm safety.

The host farm families are being sought through 4-H and Junior Farmer clubs and agricultural associations.

Students can pick up application forms at their schools and further inquiries can be directed to Miss Monica Alyea, Box 470, Picton, telephone 476-2124, or to the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food office in Stirling.

Jobs for All!

Unemployment in the Soviet Union? We have been curious on this score and mentioned it the other day, suggesting that Prime Minister Trudeau might learn a few things regarding the job situation while in that part of the world.

Well, we have just come upon a news bulletin from the Soviet embassy in Ottawa. It is under the byline of Yevgeni Dvornikov of the Novosti Press Agency and he writes as follows:

"The absence of unemployment in the Soviet Union invariably figures in the yearly reports of the central statistical board. This time too, the board stated that there was no unemployment in the USSR in 1970."

After a dig at the decadent West, noting that what has always been an acute social problem for many capitalist countries is non-existent in the Soviet Union, Dvornikov continues: "The planned economy makes it possible to plan employment as well. That is why scientific and technological progress, accompanied by the freeing of the labor force and by its replacement with automatic machines, is not regarded by the Soviet worker as a monster capable of depriving him of his job. . . ."

Dvornikov does not explain how jobs are made available for so many, but according to the all omnipotent central statistical board the number of factory and office workers in all spheres of the national economy exceeds 90,000,000. Moreover, in the space of only a year 2,300,000 men went to work in industry, agriculture, transport, communications and construction.

It seems incredible. If the Russians can do this why can we not find work for a mere 750,000. We hope Mr. Trudeau does bring back some information on the Soviet achievement in putting people to work. That is, unless they are pulling the wool over our eyes.

Few Russians, incidentally, own cars, but according to the statistical board things are improving. In 1970, says the board, the sale of cars increased by 39 per cent, clothes and fabrics by 15 per cent, cameras 13 per cent, knitted wear 12 per cent and furniture 11 per cent. Also more television sets, radios, watches, motorcycles and that standby of most western households, the vacuum cleaner, were sold.

Not Forgotten

Advancing years can be a lonely time for our senior citizens and it is always encouraging to learn of the efforts of others to bring some cheer into their lives. Especially is this so when such interest is found among the young.

Mary Denholm, a 17-year-old Hamilton high school student, used to visit an elderly woman in a nursing home. She found it a depressing place and the people there were "so sad."

The young student wrote about the subject of old age generally, and about her friend in the nursing room, for a school project, and later submitted it in a television-wide competition conducted by Canada Permanent Trust. She won the Ontario section of the contest.

That was toward the end of last year. We had put the newspaper clipping aside then and as sometimes happens it was mislaid. But the story is timeless. We have heard of students in this area who visit old people's homes and nursing homes, and they entertain with music, and most of all make the elderly folk realise they are not forgotten.

Courage Rewarded

Going to the aid of the police is not much in vogue among the public these days. If it is not a bunch of demonstrators tossing missiles, staging sit-ins or shouting abuse at the representatives of the law then it is a crowd looking on while an officer takes on superior odds.

Happily, this is not always the case, as 20-year-old Paul Dietrich of Waterloo has proved. Dietrich was presented with an award by the Kitchener-Waterloo Optimist Club at its annual respect-for-law night. It recognized his action in going to the aid of auxiliary policeman James Bruder a year ago at the Waterloo arena.

The policeman was knocked to the ground by a youth while another youth began kicking the officer. Dietrich intervened, holding one of the youths while a crowd gathered to watch.

The Waterloo youth's action was commendable. We have too many crowd gatherers in such situations, even those who encourage anyone attacking the police. But here was a young man who knew where his duty lay and did it.

Pompidou's Tough Line Irks British

New Zealand, U.S, Keys to U.K. Membership in Europe

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

On the eve of Prime Minister Heath's possibly decisive meeting with French President Pompidou in Paris, controversy over the crucial issue of British membership in the European Common Market is reaching a new climax on both sides of the English Channel.

In Britain, much of the current argument concerns the fate of New Zealand in the event British entry becomes a reality.

Pompidou sounded tough on the New Zealand question in television remarks to the British people, terming the ties between Britain and its remote former possession a basically sentimental connection that would have to be broken to make way for London's market membership.

The reaction to this in some British circles was that it was bitter enough to cancel out whatever public-relations gains Pompidou made in other parts of his broadcast.

But feelings in France are running high, too. Gaullist sentiment there has traditionally opposed British entry on grounds that it would in fact mean giving the Americans a solid foothold in the Common Market.

This is the "Trojan horse" theory, based on the assumption that commercially the United States begins in London.

Since the death last year of ex-president de Gaulle, Paris sources have been careful to contend that this theory is a minority view in France's governing party and that Pompidou is all for British entry as one way of offsetting the growing power of West Germany in the Common Market.

Yet fears of membership of Britain still are widespread in France, especially among the country's politically powerful farmers.

This may account for Pompidou's rigidity on the question of New Zealand butter and lamb.

And nervousness in Paris extends even into the realm of language, since there is apprehension that British entry might undermine the prominence enjoyed by French as a medium for commercial dealings among European nations.

Meanwhile, at Westminster, British negotiator Geoffrey Rippon has been accused by angry critics of "selling out" the Commonwealth sugar producers at the entry talks in Brussels.

Morever, MP Enoch Powell and other opponents of British membership are on the war path, arguing that voter support for the projected entry falls far short of what Heath would need to justify joining the community.

Thus, to outflank their antagonists at home, the leaders of France and Britain will be sorely tempted to adopt a tough-sounding stand towards one another at times. But time comes to try settling the market issue as far as their two countries are concerned.

But excessive hardness may generate a renewal of old divisions separating the channel neighbors.

As the Guardian newspaper put it: "If either side tries to drive too hard a bargain, there will be no bargain."

Mergers and Staff Security

Wall Street Journal

Mergers, company moves, and business failures all produce dislocations for workers, and labor unions quite properly try to cushion members against the impact of change. In some cases, however, the unions may be overdoing the protection bit.

When the Burlington Northern railroad was formed by merger a year ago, the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks obtained a job - protection agreement. Under this pact, workers in the Chicago regional office were offered transfers to the line's St. Paul, Minn., headquarters.

A group of 41 clerical workers, however, refused to go. In their case the agreement specified that the workers nonetheless had to be kept on a full pay, even though there was no work for them to do.

In this situation the railroad tried to be kind and sent some of the non - working workers home, at full pay. But now the railroad is requiring everyone to put in a full, do-nothing day.

Dissatisfaction still is rife. Who wants to sit down all day?" complained one woman in the group. It's definitely more tiring sitting all day on those hard chairs."

This suggests that unions might try a little more realism in these worker-protection pacts. Reasonable severance pay, relocations and retraining will still be more appealing to many workers than the preservation of useless jobs.

St. John Ambulance Seeks Recruits

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The St. John Ambulance Brigade in Belleville has a problem. The problem is PEOPLE and our need for, them. Since last fall when our capability was greatly increased by addition of at Ambulance, snowmobile and other equipment, we have been called upon as never before to attend all types of functions where crowds gather and the chance of injury is present. Some 1,500 duty hours have been logged by our members in the first quarter of 1971 and an ever increasing number of activities-ensuring up this spring and summer.

Although we have a very active combined Division of some 30 men and women who are going full out, they need help if we are to continue to give the Belleville area the kind of service it expects and should have.

We appeal in particular to the hundreds of people who have been trained by St. John Ambulance, to put that training into practice. You will be updated in first aid, ambulance work, etc.

If you are untrained, 17 years old or over and want a useful, interesting hobby in which you render a real public service, join the Belleville Division of St. John Ambulance.

Our need is Great. Phone 962-7933.

Law Should Be Same for All

Rock Festivals and Country Fairs

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

To begin I want to say, I am not a hippie. Rock music or rock festivals don't interest me. I am 50 years old, but I do believe the young people should be able to let their hair grow if they want to and they should be able to play the music that they want.

I know that a rock music festival has to be controlled; I do not think that bylaws in street should be passed by municipalities in Hastings county. This bylaw actually prohibits rock music festivals; it has not written to control them. It seems the older folks who have to run everything and everybody did not have nerve enough to ban them, but just make an impossible law.

I wonder how many fairs can run in Hastings county this fall with the sanitary conditions at most small town fair grounds. I know some fair grounds have no water for thousands attending and some have antique toilets and cattle barns. I wonder how much the fairs pay for police on fair day?

All fair grounds in the county should be inspected by the health department so that the fair boards have the same conditions as the hippies . . . the fair grounds should be up to date or be condemned...what is fair for the goose should be fair for the gander.

Japanese Interests Involved In A Number of Soviet Projects

Canada-Japan Trade Council

Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister, Jean - Luc Pepin, recently signed in Moscow the agreement providing for technological and scientific exchanges between Canada and the Soviet Union. He explained the agreement had become necessary in part to open the door to private Canadian enterprise. In the past several Canadian businessmen had dished to sell to the Soviet Union but had been told that such operations could only be carried on under the umbrella of an inter-governmental agreement.

A similar arrangement has already allowed Japanese private business to establish dealings in Russia. In 1968 the Business Co-operation Committee was set up between Japan and the USSR. First fruits of the new co-operation are the massive development of Siberian timber. Most recent development was the announcement of construction of a new superport, Vrangel, adjacent to Vladivostok on the Sea of Japan. Katsumi Yamagata, president of Yamashita - Shinnihon Steamship Co., and chairman the sub-committee on Vrangel Construction of the Japan-USSR Business Co-operation Committee, signed for Japanese interests at Tokyo. Mr. Yamagata will also head a new company, composed of 14 Japanese trading houses including Mitsubishi and Mitsui, which will be concerned with port construction. Berths will be built to handle 3 million tons of coal and 700 ot 800 thousand tons of wood chips and 120 to 140 thousand containers annually.

The Soviet Union has earmarked a sum of $300 million for development of the project. Japanese private business will provide an initial investment of $80 million which the Russians will use to buy Japanese machinery, port facilities, materials and know-how.

The Intelligencer.

It has been prophesied that eventually industry will consist of executives, machines and sweepers. Will all society come a state analgous to industry? — No middle class?

One cause of the middle class is going to be victimized is by the prospect of thousands of unemployed over 18 years of age remaining dependent on their parents—who, under the present system of government costs. The cement and stone monuments to educational folly continue to grow, even though there is no market for their product. If the Finance Department allows a tax exemption for our unemployed youth they will simply attach the cost to some other area of our income.

However, one's integrity seems to be affirmed just a little if, at least, you recognize what is happening but "Where is the wisdom we have lost in knowledge? Where is the knowledge we have lost in information?"

Ottawa and Quebec Agree to Agree on Immigration Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — One-up manship between Ottawa and Quebec is banned under an immigration agreement — treaty, the opposition calls it —signed by the two governments Tuesday.

The agreement gives Quebec the right to set up two-room, two-person offices within federal immigration offices abroad so that the province's advantages can be presented to prospective immigrants by a Quebec orientation officer.

The 10-page entente at one point says:

"The furnishing and equipping of the space allocated to the Quebec party shall be its responsibility, but shall be neither inferior nor superior in quality to the standards established by the government of Canada, taking into account the rank of the occupant."

In short, all carpets will be equal.

In the agreement, Ottawa is known as the Federal party and the province as the Quebec party. The problem? as replete with hereinbefores and hereinafters as international pacts.

Some other points in the agreement:

—"The space placed at the disposal of the Quebec party shall comprise two rooms, preferably adjoining, and identified only by the inscription: 'Agent d'orientation du gouvernement du Quebec.'

—"Neither the personnel of the Federal party nor the personnel of the Quebec party shall have access to, or make use of, information or instructions intended for the exclusive use of the personnel of the other party."

—"Personnel of the Quebec department of immigration shall in their private conduct and in their professional or social activities conform to the standards governing the conduct and activities of the federal personnel of the mission."

—"If a member of the Quebec personnel fails to comply with these standards, the head of mission may intervene, and his decision, which can be appealed to the two parties to the agreement, will be enforced in the interim."

Immigration Minister Otto Lang told the Commons Wednesday that other provinces can get the same treatment as Quebec.

Which raises the possibility of 10 two-room provincial offices within federal immigration offices abroad.

The Ottawa-Quebec agreement sets out that after an applicant is accepted for entry to Canada by the federal visa officer he can be steered in the direction of the Quebec orientation officer.

But to which provincial orientation officer does the federal visa officer steer the would-be immigrant if all provinces have offices within the federal offices?

The opposition kept asking Commons questions this week about the necessity of any Ottawa-Quebec immigration agreement at all.

Surely, opposition MPs said, a federal officer was as well equipped to tell an immigrant about Quebec as about any other province.

There was no clear answer.

Mr. Lang said "the agreement, which was drawn, was simply that, an agreement."

He added that the agreement was necessary because Quebec officers are going to be housed in federal offices instead of in separate provincial offices.

Quebec has its own immigration office in Paris. But it wants space in federal immigration offices in, for a start, Athens, Beirut, Brussels, Lisbon and Rome.

A question on Parliament Hill now is: Will Quebec now ask for office space in federal trade offices abroad—and maybe for a desk in abroad—and maybe for a desk in external affairs branches?

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp denied the suggestion of Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) that the Ottawa-Quebec agreement implies sovereign status for the province and a departure from Ottawa's one-Canada attitude.

And Mr. Lang quickly rejected the proposal of Quebec Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer that Quebec be given jurisdiction over manpower in the province.

This jurisdiction is clearly federal, Mr. Lang said.

Lang Called Pregnant, PCs Are Dinosaurs

OTTAWA (CP) — Otto Lang, minister responsible for wheat, is half pregnant and the Conservatives belong back in the age of the dinosaur, a New Democrat MP charged in a double-barrelled Commons attack Thursday.

Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville) was one of the first to debate on a bill to bring flax, rye and rapeseed under the Canadian wheat board at the government's discretion.

Earlier, the House gave second reading to legislation that would create regional pilotage authorities.

Today the Conservatives choose the topic for debate. Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) said Thursday night the party will mount an attack on government defence policy.

Mr. Nystrom's first blast Thursday was at Mr. Lang. The 25-year-old New Democrat asked why the minister did not immediately bring the three grains under the wheat board.

"Why is he again at this time in the position of going half way and not all the way? Why is he just half pregnant? This is still all too typical of this government. . . .

The great majority of rye, flax and rapeseed producers favored having the wheat board market their grains.

The board now markets wheat, oats and barley.

Mr. Nystrom said farmers could not enjoy income stability without organizations for orderly marketing.

His second salvo was aimed at the Conservatives, where there is opposition to including the three grains under the board.

The Conservative stand, he said, "is nothing but an extreme right-wing attitude which fits back in the age of the dinosaur. . . .

Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) said the majority of rye, flax and rapeseed producers is opposed to their products being under the wheat board.

He said there was a choice free from marketing problems in the past, thanks to a lack of government interference, but "the prospect of inclusion has already had a detrimental effect on the markets."

The pilotage legislation passed second reading with little debate. There was a call for thorough study of the complex bill in committee.

The bill would create four regional pilotage authorities, quasi-autonomous organizations that would replace 29 pilotage districts now under the transport department.

Each authority would set qualifications for pilots and regulate navigation. The pilots would be hired by the authority unless a majority in one region voted otherwise.

In that case, the authority would contract for their services.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said the new authorities and pilotage regulations would bring present antiquated laws up to date. Safety would be increased and ships would pay more of the cost of pilotage.

Thomas M. Bell (PC—Saint John-Lancaster) and Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) supported the bill on second reading but said intensive committee examination is needed.

Mr. Barnett said it was surprising the legislation was presented before the final report of the royal commission on pilotage was finished.

Mr. Jamieson said the bill would put into effect 36 of the 39 major recommendations of the commission established in 1962 after a pilots' strike. Its final report will be on the Great Lakes.

Mackasey Sidesteps Commons Questions

OTTAWA (CP) — Quizzed again about the government's decision not to extend seasonal unemployment insurance benefits beyond May 15, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey told the Commons Thursday there would be no way of knowing whether extended benefits would go to those in need of them.

Replying to George Hees (PC-Prince Edward-Hastings) and Ed Broadbent (NDP-Oshawa-Whitby), the minister said the criteria under which seasonal benefits are paid are wider than those for non-seasonal benefits.

Both opposition MPs asked Mr. Mackasey to expand on remarks, which they said he made outside the House, to the effect that the $35 million involved in extending benefits for six weeks could better be spent on the unemployed. They asked him what other programs he had in mind.

June 1 is Census Day. What's new with you?

This is your chance to tell Canada who you are and how you're doing.

Census day is almost like voting day. It's your right and privilege. Your chance to let Canada know all about yourself and your family. How and where you live. It's as secret as the ballot. All these facts become statistics. And many organizations use them to plan for our future.

This is how governments know where to spend money for the most necessary things: hospitals, schools, housing projects, roads and highways, community centres, parks. For example, a high percentage of children under five in one section of your community may alert the board of education to the need for a new school. Or, districts with a high proportion of sub-standard housing may be identified and ear marked for urban renewal and development programs. Things like that.

It's a do-it-yourself census.

Any day now, you'll receive your census questionnaire. The idea is that everyone in Canada must fill in that form on June 1. If a pre-paid return envelope came with the population census form complete the questionnaire and mail it back. If there is no envelope, don't mail it but hold the form until it is picked up by a census representative.

This will probably be the first time you've ever had the chance to fill in your own census form. The old way of sending census takers around knocking on doors and asking you questions served a useful purpose in its day. But we've found, after many trial censuses, that people do a better job when they fill in their questionnaires themselves.

If you are a farm operator.

If you have a farm you will also be required to complete a Census of Agriculture form. The information you give is important for government farm programs and farm organizations in the years ahead.

What happens if somebody doesn't fill in his census form?

Everyone in Canada is required by law to be counted in the national census. If you don't bother, a census representative will have to come around and fill in your questionnaire with you. So, if you do it yourself, you'll save time and money for everyone.

We need facts about you . . . and your family. Otherwise we won't have the whole story.

Give a few minutes to the Census of Canada. And Canada will give you a better future.

It's your census. Everyone has the right to be counted. Everyone has the right to expect the information he gives to be treated in absolute confidence. And you can be sure that the information will be used for the good of all Canadians.

So, don't forget, June 1.

Tell us what's new.

Count yourself in.

MP's Move No Surprise

OTTAWA (CP) — The announcement by Philip Givens that he will quit Parliament to enter the next Ontario election campaign scarcely caused a ripple in Liberal circles here, largely because such a move had frequently been predicted.

Mr. Givens said as early as February, 1970, that he might quit politics. And party sources say he has often discussed the possibility of moving to an area where he could play a greater role in urban affairs.

When he came to Parliament in the 1968 general election as MP for York West, Mr. Givens made it clear that his main interest was in urban matters. The 49-year-old MP is a former mayor of Toronto.

Soon after his arrival in Ottawa, Mr. Givens began expressing frustration over the role of back-bench MPs, and the role of the federal government in urban problems. At one stage he said back-bench MPs were about as useless as an udder on a bull.

And he also said he might quit politics unless the federal government began paying more attention to the cities.

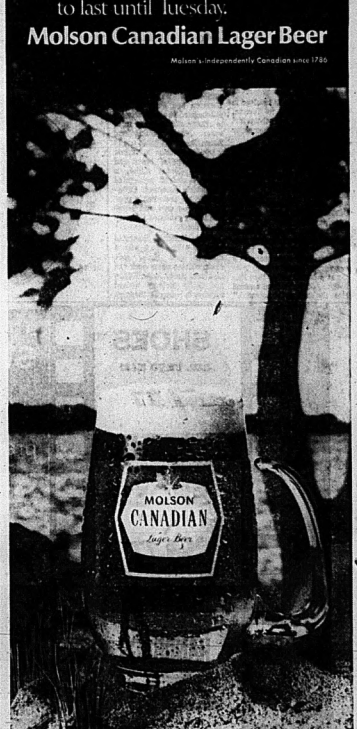
So his announcement that he would leave Parliament when the next Ontario election is called—to seek the Liberal nomination in the Toronto riding of York Forest—Hill—caused less reaction than the three earlier resignations accepted by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Former transport minister Paul Hellyer and former Communications Minister Eric Kierans quit the cabinet—but stayed in the party—in surprise moves because of sharp disagreements with government policies. Back-bencher Perry Ryan, now a Conservative MP for Toronto Spadina, also surprised the Liberals with his 1969 resignation over government policies.

Immigrants' Degrees Are Hard to Evaluate

OTTAWA (CP) — The problem of evaluating university degrees possessed by immigrants to Canada is large and is getting larger, the Commons was told Thursday.

Charles Caccia, parliamentary secretary to immigration Minister Otto Lang, said the department has found that possession of a degree is no guarantee that an immigrant's professional training meets Canadian standards.



The problem is likely to become worse, he said, as a large number of future immigrants will have social science and humanities degrees from universities in their former countries.

The issue is the subject of a special report commissioned by the manpower department and which the government has refused to make public.

Motion Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia Senate has rejected a motion by a student senator which would have all university faculties surveyed to determine how much of their studies are relevant to Canadian life. Art Smolensky, a graduate student in chemistry and one of four student senators, had called for the survey to ascertain how many studies were relevant to English or French Canada in the social, political, economic, historic, legal or scientific fields.

Art Program For Aged Successful

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) —Grey heads bent over their work as the students combine free-flowing lines and bright colors to produce imaginative abstracts.

"Their work is as vibrant as any teen-ager's," says art instructor Marguerite Miles.

Her pupils are about nine residents of the Linhaven home for the aged here who, with about 10 residents of Sunset Haven in nearby Welland, are participating in an experimental art program believed to be unique not only in Canada but in North America.

The Niagara region has been selected to pioneer a number of programs for the aged, explains Doug Rapelje, regional administrator of homes for senior citizens in this area.

And the art program, begun last year at the suggestion and with the co-operation of the Ontario Council for the Arts, is one of those programs.

It was intended to run for a year, but the potential shown by the residents has so exceeded expectations that Mr. Rapelje hopes the program can be extended indefinitely and introduced into Dorchester Manor in Niagara Falls and Northland Manor in Port Colborne.

Mrs. Miles, who comes from Toronto for the weekly art classes, explains that the emphasis is on developing the individual's own creative resources using a more contemporary idiom rather than simply having people copy pictures.

"This is where the program differs from the usual arts and crafts programs.

"There have been many, many art programs but none of such a spontaneous, creative manner," says Mrs. Miles.

"It's been tried nowhere else in Canada, as far as I'm aware. As far as I've heard, it may be the only one in North America."

Even the residents themselves were amazed at their results.

"Apart from a level of artistic expression, there appears to be a healing process. We hadn't an idea it would have this effect. There's a therapeutic value, a definite healing effect."

The behavior of the more withdrawn residents changes, reflected in the type of art work they are doing.

They are hoping to have a showing of their work, and much of it lines the halls of the home.

Mrs. Miles, who is involved in music and drama in Toronto, would like to see those art forms introduced into homes for the aged too.

New programs now under way at Linhaven include summer camping on the spacious grounds, a rifle shooting club and home-baking classes and bake sales.

It's all in keeping with new thinking about homes for the aged, says Mr. Rapelje.

"We have started relating recreation with what older people really want, and to recognize individual preferences. In a very general sense we are looking at potential rather than limitation. And we've been amazed since the start at the potential."

Active Red Cross Volunteers

Mrs. B. Varley and Miss A. Mantle are busy crocheting and knitting for the needy in various parts of the world. The project, undertaken by the women's work division of the Red Cross Society and involving several women is to make afghans, cotton dresse and other tems of clothing to be shipped in June to various countries. Mrs. Varley herself made 37 afghans from September to June.

Three Bay of Quinte Chapter members - Mrs. Gabrielle Watkins, Mrs. Lena Dearborn and Mrs. Fran Moon will attend the annual meeting of the Canadian Division of the National Secretaries Association (International) to be held in Windsor May 21-23.

The door prize was won by Cathy Ellis.

Science Fair at School

MARMORA — Students of the Marmora Senior School displayed their interests in a presentation of science projects held recently in the school gymnasium. While not as large as the past two science fairs, which were introduced and sponsored by the Marmora Chapter IODE, it was felt that the display was well worth attending.

Pollution was a popular subject and was illustrated in a number of ways. Michael Thomson and Jerry Mumby collaborated in an experiment to change salt water to fresh water. Marie Phillips and Karen Thompson made use of a wooden skeleton to explain the workings of bones and muscles. Gordon Miller, a grade 7 student constructed an electric generator. Cathy-Ann Fenton presented a poster story on cats and Meredith Goode exhibited a history of the horse.

Debbie Bateman illustrated ways of telling time with a sundial, sand glass, rope clock, chinese water clock and an alarm clock. Judith Killian and Cathy McInroy worked together to present a thorough study on water. Mark Thomson's plaster model gave an inside view of the volcano. Old and new ways of candle making was an exhibit prepared by Brenda Sanderson and Ann Hegadoren. Aquatic life in a pond was a favorite subject: Glen McGregor and Bart Bell having prepared specimens for microscopic examination.

U.E.L. Association Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Branch, United Empire Loyalists Association of Canada, was held at Adolphustown with the president, Donald Thompson, in the chair.

Mr. Thompson spoke briefly of the past year and expressed regret that he had missed several meetings through illnss. One new member was welcomed into the Branch, Mrs. James L. Rowland, 94 Glenbrook Drive, Richmond, B.C. (U.E.L. ancestor, Amos Pine).

Announcement was made that application blanks were available from the secretary for a weekend visit at Thanksgiving to places of historical interest in the Mohawk Valley, New York State which has been arranged by the Dominion Council. A visit to the home of Sir John Johnson would be included.

It was announced that the annual service at Deseronto, commemorating the landing of the Mohawks on the shore of the Bay of Quinte, would be held on May 23, 1971. The service would take place at the Cairn at 9 a.m., followed by a service of Holy Communion in Christ Church at 10.30 a.m. At this service the silver communion service would be used which had been presented to the Mohawks of New York State by Queen Anne in appreciation of their loyalty to the British Crown. The special speaker will be the Rev. Neville R. Clarke, Bishop of Eastern Bay and Suffragen Bishop of Moosonee.

The secretary reported that 19 new members had been accepted into the Branch, and one life member. Regret was expressed at the death of four members.

The following slate of officers was elected for the ensuing year: president, C. F. Young, Bath Ontario, 1st vice - pres., Miss Helen Pavlock, Belleville; 2nd vice - pres., Mrs. Harry Foster, Picton; 3rd vice - pres., Mrs. Bogart Trumpour, Kingston; 4th vice - pres., Mrs. Noxon Foster, Consecon; 5th vice - pres., Richard Daverne, Picton; treasurer, Mrs. Evelyn Drew, Picton; corres. secretary, Mrs. Morley Lovelace, Belleville; recording secretary, Mrs. John Roblin, Bath and genealogist Dr. H. C. Burleigh, Bath.

The president called attention to the annual meeting of the Dominion Council at St. Catharines on May 8, 1971, and urged all delegates to attend.

The meeting closed, after which refreshments were served.

Footwear Designer Given Award

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal footwear manufacturer leaves today for Italy to collect an international award for three boot designs — the first Canadian to be so honored.

Tony Lammatteo, owner of Christina Manufacturing Co., said in an interview before his departure he hopes the prize will prove to other Canadians, once and for all, that their work can compete on a world basis.

The award will be presented May 30 in Torino by the Accademia Internazionale della Calzatura — the International Academy of Footwear.

The academy is part of a much larger association which annually selects and honors the best in every category of clothing or accessory made of leather.

Mr. Lammatteo, 32, said his entries were judged on three points: Creation, workmanship and fitting.

The boots, all of sort brown leather, scored in the three divisions.

He said he decided to enter only the boot category because, with the spotlight on hot pants this year, boots or sandals are the real attention - grabbers.

Mothers' Shrine at Park

TWEED — A mothers' shrine will be erected in the Lester B. Pearson Peace Park (just north of Tweed, on Highway No. 7, towards Madoc), by Howard Dinnick, Toronto, one of the committee members administering the park, and his wife Earlene. This is being done on behalf of all mothers who have lost sons in previous wars, and for their own infant son, Kirk, in the hope that when he grows up he will not have to go to war.

The shrine will be in the form of four pillars with a bell tower at the top. The four pillars will be supported by a concrete apron which will provide shelter for those visiting the park.

Adjacent to the mothers' shrine, a children's peace park will be built. "Children are our hope for a better world free from the scourge of war," commented Roy Cadwell, chairman.

"A mothers' shrine in the park will emphasize the fact that it is the mothers of the world who have the most to lose by war".

Those who would like to contribute to this project may do so by writing the Peace Park, Tweed. All contributions are tax deductible.

Tailored Look

NEW YORK (AP) — Designer Jacques Tiffeau stuck to his own tailored look in his fall fashion show Thursday. He used solids and small patterns, in ginger and grey and white.

The hemlines were generally short, starting with tunics over shorts and body stocks. Tiffeau liked day dresses at Midknee, matched with stretch jersey stockings in the same pattern.

Bad Example Set in Borrowing

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I are undecided. Will you please help us come to grips with the problem? We live in a middle-class housing development. We mind our own business and have a pleasant relationship with everyone on the block. But our neighbors are not our social friends.

The family down the street has four children. Three times in the past six weeks they have sent one of their children over here to "borrow" a couple of cigarettes. My husband smokes. I do not. We have always given the cigarettes to the child and not thought too much about it, but after the third time we are beginning to wonder if we should continue this practice. There's a drug store three blocks from here which stays open until midnight. What is your opinion? — FREE CIGARETTE MACHINE

DEAR FREE: The worst part of this scene is the example the parents are setting for their children. It is unfortunate when children see their parents so enslaved by the tobacco habit that they must borrow a cigarette to get through the night. It is also a nuisance. I'd say three times is enough. From now on say "no."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am happy you reprinted your Twelve Rules For Raising Children. As a grandmother who did well with her own brood and is now watching her daughters and sons do even better, may I add a 13th rule?

If a mother or father lack the imagination or will not take the time to plan something interesting and instructive for their children to do, they have no right to object to whatever the kids think up themselves. — KANSAS GRANNY.

* * *

DEAR GRANNY: Right you are. "An idle mind is the devil's workshop. Idle hands are his tools." Let's make it a baker's dozen. Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 13-year-old girl who has a problem that is bothering me a lot. I have no idea what to do about it. I hope you will give me a solution.

Lois has been my best friend for seven years but recently she has developed a bad habit. She comes into my house, sits with me for about ten minutes, then off she goes to the kitchen and helps herself to whatever she sees. I wouldn't dream of doing such a thing — even in my aunt's house. I think it's colossal nerve.

This afternoon, Lois fixed herself a triple-decker sandwich and drank half a quart of milk. I kept my mouth shut because I didn't know what to say. After she left I was mad at myself for keeping quiet. Would I be a bad hostess if I told her I didn't like it? — CHICKEN FRIEND.

* * *

DEAR CHICK: Lois has no manners and I think you might teach her something. It is extremely rude to go into the kitchen of a friend and help oneself to food. The next time Lois head that way, stop her and explain that you plan to serve cookies and milk a little later and that she should wait.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter is 23. She married a lazy, no-good rat who is already cheating on her. She is six months pregnant. Should we encourage her to get a divorce? We don't think it makes any sense for a young girl to live with a mistake forever. Please rush your advice. — MOTHER WHO SAW IT COMING.

* * *

DEAR MOTHER: Keep quiet. It is her mistake and her no-good, lazy rat. It should also be her decision, since she will have to abide by the consequences.

Successful Living

Interesting Points Revealed in Counsellor's Interview

By DORIS CLARK

A school counsellor was being interviewed:

What is different about counselling girls from counselling boys? Answer: Life patterns are different. The girls mature faster both physically and psychologically. We are concerned, early with what their future status is going to be. They want help with preparing for marriage. More and more, the girl are realizing that you can make a career and a marriage mix.

Is it true that women are discriminated against? Yes, but the girls' attitude is at fault. They don't even aim as high as the boys. A girl does not try to become a doctor.

One counsellor was interviewing both a boy and a girl. The boy said, "I want to be a doctor." Then the counsellor turned to the girl and said "I suppose you want to be his nurse."

The girl's indignant response was: "Then you go programming us!"

So you see, the girls do get brainwashed, and then it is a protest about it. At the same time, they are anxious about such questions as, "Will I be liked by the boys?"

For both boys and girls the counsellor felt that there were many careers from which to choose. Why not find out what it means to be an oceanographer, or a aerospace engineer or a textile technologist?

Dear Doris: I was inspired by yours article about imagining in your mind's eye four chairs in front of you — in the first chair is a man who was tongue-tied at work — etc. You will remember. That was an article to keep for reading over and over. . . .

It states at the bottom of your column, "Let a Canadian Family Counselor in on your difficulty — Doris will be able to save the day for you." Well, I am letting you in on my appreciation and praise for your always wise and helpful answers to people's difficulties.

Especially do I think of the many women who have raised families and worked hard day in and day out to do it, and yet have to live on a meagre little pittance that some man hands out to them, described by the woman as a big lord out in society, as so many women have written to you about. — Petunia

Dear Petunia! Goodness! Do we make it sound like we operate a branch of Women's Lib? Wasn't my intention.

It is true that women who raise families do work hard, and sometimes have to scrimp to do it. And that misunderstandings abound between spouses.

Yet living together is a two-way process. Men work hard too. And the disputes about things like money are usually just a symptom of a clash more basic. Needs communication; needs a reaction and a chance for a better deal all round.

Dear Doris: My parents and sisters don't seem to like my boy friend, although I think he is groovy. He is 17 and I am 14.

You see, my parents are country folk and don't think I am old enough to go out and this is causing a lot of fights with my boy friend. — Heartbroken

Dear Heartbroken: Who is doing the fighting? You or the family?

Since he is practically grown up, compared with you, I can't say I blame them for objecting. Maybe if you picked somebody in your own league, they might take him on without going up in smoke.

Hearts don't break, at 14; though it may feel that way. Listen to Pop and Mom.

Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem. And remember that stamped envelope.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Children get into the habit of doing their homework beside a blaring TV or Hi-Fi set. They are likely to insist they can concentrate better with the noise in the background.

It's hard for anyone, even a genius, to concentrate with distracting noise nearby, especially noise that diminishes and surges in volume as TV sounds do.

Make definite rules about television and homework. Have a quiet time for study after dinner each night with no TV, unless there's something very special you want the children to see.

A Repeat for Pecan Coffee Rolls

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I would like a recipe for pecan roll coffee cake ? . Susan H.

ANSWER: We have not given this since 1965 so it deserves a repeat.

STICKY PECAN ROLLS

NOTE: These quantities made 2 large pans of pecan rolls and one muffin pan full of clover leaf rolls.

2¼ cups milk
¾ cup butter or margarine or shortening
1 pkge. granular yeast
1 tsp. sugar
½ cup lukewarm water
¼ cup sugar
2 eggs
7 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
2½ tsps. salt
Cinnamon

GLAZE:

1 cup light brown sugar
¼ cup soft butter
2½ tsps. light corn syrup
6 oz. whole pecans

Heat the milk to scalding. In a very large mixing bowl measure the ½ cup butter or margarine and the ½ cup sugar and the salt. Pour scalded milk over them and let cool to lukewarm. Add the 1 tsp. sugar and ¼ cup lukewarm water to the yeast in a measuring cup and give it one stir and let stand 10 min. When milk mixture is lukewarm add yeast liquid. Beat the egg a little and add it and the flour. Mix with wooden spoon, then turn out on floured board and knead 100 times, adding more flour to board as needed. Shape into ball, return to greased bowl, turn dough over (to have a greased top), cover and let rise in warm place until doubled and light.

Punch down dough on floured board and knead 200 times. Cut off a piece of the dough that amount to about one-fifth of it. Cut remaining dough in halves. With rolling pin roll out one of these large pieces into an oblong ¼" thick. Spread it with remaining ¼ cup butter (melted) and sprinkle liberally with cinnamon. Roll up like jelly roll, starting at long side. Stretch this roll to lengthen it and slice into 1¼" thick pinwheels. Place these close together in pans prepared with Glaze (for two 8 x 2" round pans): Mix together over low heat, barely enough to blend, 1 cup light brown sugar, ¼ cup soft butter and 2½ tbsps. corn syrup. As soon as blended remove from heat. Cover bottoms of 2 pans with whole pecans, each pan requires ½ oz. Drizzle glaze over nuts and make sure glaze and nuts are evenly distributed. Arrange cut out pinwheels, cut side down, on top of glaze. Repeat with second large piece of dough the rolling out, spreading, etc. and place in second pan. Cover and let rise about 1½ hrs. in warm place. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. rather high in oven for 10 min., then reduce heat to 375 deg. Fahr. for another 15 min. or until done.

NOTES: The small piece of leftover dough may be made up into cloverleaf rolls (using a 12-cup muffin pan) or into 12 Parkerhouse or Poppy Seed Rolls.

Secrecy Surrounds Short-lived Revolt at Dorchester Prison

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) — The federal maximum-security penitentiary here is back to normal following a 14-hour disturbance Wednesday night and early Thursday in which more than 230 men barricaded themselves in the gymnasium.

Federal officials have said an investigation into the incident will not be made public and secrecy still surrounds what happened in the 95-year-old institution.

But it appears that security guards prevented a more serious situation from developing by getting out of the gym before they could be taken hostage.

The trouble began Wednesday night when the prisoners started milling about in the recreation room in the gym after a movie scheduled to be shown was not presented.

The security officers quickly left the gym and took up positions in security booths—which face the floor.

The officers' escape was facilitated by a tear gas pellet fired into the crowd of prisoners.

Without hostages, the prisoners' attempts to gain concessions from officials appeared to be doomed.

A list of prisoner demands was presented to Dorchester penitentiary officials Thursday morning and discussions were held with Warden Ulrich Belanger.

The men left the gym in an orderly manner shortly after the talks and were back in their cells by mid-morning.

Their demands included: A general change in menu, more classification officers, higher pay for prison jobs, new procedures in issuing prison clothes and a variety of clothes rather than a uniform, treatment of medical ailments by outside specialists, a return to the old parole system and presence of a reporter and a lawyer for discussions between prisoners and officials.

Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said in Ottawa Thursday the question of prison uniforms already is being looked into.

He warned that he would not reform Canada's penal system if prisoner's don't behave responsibly.

The only damage at the penitentiary here was a few broken windows in the gym.

Two prisoners were treated at the infirmary for minor injuries after they were hit by buckshot during the disturbance when they attempted to escape through an exit.

One other prisoner was in hospital with injuries received in a disturbance with other prisoners.

Much of the information regarding the incident was released in Ottawa. Dorchester officials said they did not have the authority to provide details of what went on during the short-lived rebellion.

Penitentiaries Commissioner Paul Faguy ordered an investigation into the rebellion.

Inco Postpones Expansion Due Pollution Control Costs

SUDBURY (CP) — International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. Thursday blamed the high cost of pollution control as it announced cancellation of a multi-million-dollar expansion program.

Although high construction costs and prospective operating costs also were cited, the cost of meeting government anti-pollution standards was given as the main reason for dropping plans for a new sulphuric acid plant and expansion of an iron ore plant.

The company's decision halts current or planned construction worth more than $48 million but will not result in any layoffs. About 150 construction workers now employed on the iron ore plant project will be absorbed into other projects.

An estimated 750 men would have been needed at the peak of construction on the two projects.

Policeman Beaten

WATERLOO (CP) — Three men were charged following an incident Thursday during which a policeman was kicked and beaten by a group of motorcyclists in a hotel.

Constable Patrick O'Kane, 35, escaped serious injuries after an attack by a group of eight men who witnesses said wore jackets bearing the emblem the Henchmen. His walkie-talkie was kicked out of his hand when he attempted to call for help.

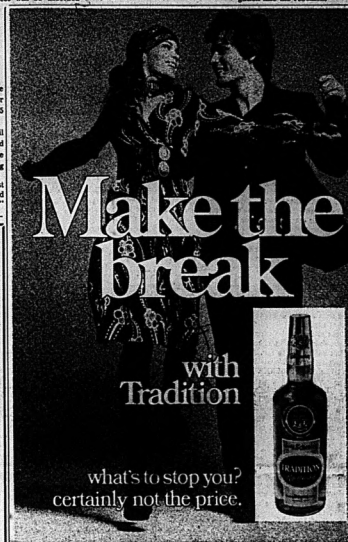
Weight-paring Diet Gives Woman Mercury Poisoning

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New York state health official said Thursday he discovered what he believes to be the first American afflicted with mercury poisoning from eating fish purchased at a fish market.

Dr. Roger C. Herdman said the victim is a 44-year-old mother of three who ate excessive amounts of swordfish to reduce weight. He added he is sure there are other "fish fadists," as he called them.

Herman said the woman chose swordfish because "she didn't like fish . . . she wanted a nonfishy-tasting fish." He said tuna fish fits that category and unwary dieters could fall victim to mercury poisoning under the same circumstances.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has recommended that Americans not eat swordfish, but says all tuna fish on the market have been cleared for dangerous amounts of mercury.



In testimony before a Senate commerce subcommittee, Herdman said the woman, a resident of Long Island, called on the health department for help in March, 1971.

Among her symptoms he said were dizziness, loss of memory, trembling hands, a quivering tongue, extra-sensitive eyes, trouble deciding which foot to put before the other when walking, jerky handwriting and problems in speaking and hearing.

Herdman said the woman ate 10 ounces of swordfish daily for nine months in 1964 and 1965 and lost 45 pounds.

Since 1966, he said, and until November, 1970, she resumed the swordfish diet two or three times a year for periods as long as a month.

Humane Society Animal Shelter Is Fast Becoming Our Local Zoo

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

A storybook farm, by any other name, is still a magic land for youngsters and if all the plans being considered by the Quinte branch of the Ontario Humane Society come to pass, their Avonlough Road facilities will be transformed into a small visitors' park, with picnic tables, duck ponds rabbit warrens, a cat hotel and landscaped gardens.

This long-range plan, outlined by superintendent Harry Brown during a walk through the Humane Society's grounds, would add to the present pound and animal care facilities' a zoo-like quality.

Visitors would be invited to stroll through the grounds and mingle with a varied assortment of goats, lambs, ponies, a donkey, domestic and wild ducks and an expanded variety of society pets.

"I'm still trying to get hold of a couple of swans and some chimpanzees," said Mr. Brown, pointing to portions of the small, babbling creek that divides the property.

"Just beyond those ducks, there," he said, indicating several domestic birds preening themselves on the shore, together with four wild ones. "I hope to get in a small dam and improve the flow for more birds."

Mr. Brown said he missed getting hold of a pair of swans by a day or so. Another society branch in southern Ontario had received the birds but had turned them over to a private source before the Quinte branch superintendent had time to notify them of his plans.

A pet cemetery, the first in this region, has been started on a small plot to the west of the property. In the planning stages for some time, this idea was put into effect when an elderly lady brought her dog to the society.

Her farm was being landscaped and because of this work, the grave of her faithful pet, dead for the past five years, was being disturbed. She asked Mr. Brown if a pet cemetery was available and with that, the first plot was prepared.

"That dog was really important to her, and even after five years, its memory was still with her . . . you really get attached," he said.

Mr. Brown, himself a breeder of champion Labradors, together with seven staff members, has taken great pains to develop the Humane Society quarters for the Belleville district. Workmen have transformed the former Eastern Breeders Association quarters into an airy, well-lit home for strays and boarders.

Kittens, puppies, goats, pigeons, doves, bantam chickens, Easter chickens (remember those fluffy yellow chicks that get abandoned after Easter) . . . oh yes, and Bernard the fox, a recent arrival, share the large barn in separate quarters.

Outside, dog runs, a rabbit warren, sometimes shared by the ducks, and paddocks for the goats, horses and pony, have been constructed, with plans for a large cat hotel on the offing.

At present, an isolation ward is being prepared to provide quarantine facilities, and upgrading of the outdoor exercise pastures are under way.

The humane society has played landlord to some unusual animals in the past, from hawks to doves, weasels, raccoons, and muskrats. In fact, almost anything on four legs has found its way to the adoption centre.

Adoption! This is a key word for the humane society. Although to obtain a dog can cost between $8 and $12, or $2 for a cat, the humane society does not fix a price, rather, they ask for a set donation for adoption of a pet.

However, because of the new Animals for Research Act, opposed by the Ontario Humane Society, strays and unclaimed pets become subject to use for medical or scientific experiments.

"This new act does give them (laboratories) the power to seize animals from us that are marked as impounded dogs. It only affects animals apprehended by the animal control officers, it doesn't affect dogs brought to us," said Mr. Brown.

Although the local humane society will continue with its policy of keeping animals up for adoption as long as possible, the seizure of animals can come any time. Pounds have to keep animals five days, to give the owners a chance to claim them. After this period, "we can keep them for adoption as long as we like."

Under the new act, pounds are prohibited from destroying animals that are tagged for research by medical laboratories.

Mr. Brown said there has not yet been any approach from labs but he urges the purchase of dog tags and concerned control of animals to prevent their apprehension by local animal patrols and subsequent exposure to experiment demands.

In Toronto, an organization has taken it upon itself to deal with the demands on pounds for research animals by purchasing them before they can be seized by the labs.

Funds for the Quinte branch come from the city of Belleville, the towns of Napanee, Newburg, Deseronto and Marmora, for animal control and from donations, legacies and society rummage sales.

"It's going to take a long time to complete our plans, but we're moving slowly ahead . . . the infirmary is nearing completion, the cat hotel is in its early stages and the pet cemetery, with access over a small bridge, has been started.

"Eventually we want to convert our upper barn loft into a small theatre for service clubs and church groups, but this is a bit long-range," the superintendent said.

At the end of the tour of the building, the humane society officer stopped for feeding time at the baby goat pen. With bottle in hand, Earl Wagar and Mr. Brown were overwhelmed by tail-wagging, bleating goats, who eagerly jumped all over them, much like puppies.

And with all the careful diet prepared for the animals by the humane society, one little fellow wasn't interested in the warm milk.

Standing on his hind legs, he had managed to stretch his neck through the bars of the pen.

No goat fare for him . . . it was the molasses-soaked oats in the pony bin he was after.

Trenton Main Question Settled

TRENTON (Staff) — How to put water into Dufferin Developments — that final question in the town's biggest controversy of the year was answered here last night.

Ruling out proposals to service the west end subdivision from Dufferin Avenue around and through Sunrise Developments, Trenton's Public Utilities Commission accepted the more costly of two ways to extend water mains to the new housing area from Dundas Street West.

Meeting in the PUC's Elgin Street headquarters, commissioners swiftly approved a servicing package that will cost $109,000. This sum includes the expense of about $83,000 for new mains along Dundas to Tripp Blvd. and $20,000 for a new substation.

The two possibilities of servicing the subdivision from Dufferin were ruled out because of topography along the routes, plans to designate much of the path from Dufferin as parkland and the "possibility of land disputes" in trying to secure easements across certain properties.

As reported earlier this week, the commission's consultants, Gore and Storrie, were strongly recommending acceptance of the Dundas option.

"We do not have any choice in this," asserted Commissioner Charles Hilton, "unless we use a skyhook to dump water in there."

With the Dundas choices eliminated, the only matter to be decided was whether to extend mains on Dundas to Fourth Avenue or on out to Tripp Blvd. for an additional cost of $27,000.

"We should go just as far as we have to for now (Fourth Ave.)," Commissioner Hilton urged, while PUC Chairman D. James MacDonald pressed for an extension all the way to Tripp Blvd.

The commission accepted the more expensive course, with PUC manager, Doug Manlow, explaining that some of this cost could be retrieved when developers start building north of Dundas.

Madoc Swim Project Begun

MADOC (Special) — The Madoc Recreation Committee which has been considering proposals to establish a suitable swimming site in the village for the past three years, has finally set its sight on an ideal location. The only drawback is the availability of funds, in the vicinity of $1,000 to $2,500.

A creek which runs through the park proposed by the Moira River Conservation Authority, extending from Livingstone Street to the old Marmora Road, has been chosen as the site for the new swimming area because the natural contours of the creek bed run along the same lines as those of an actual swimming pool.

The bottom of the creek would require a great deal of accumulated debris, according to a committee spokesman. It was suggested that members of the Madoc community might volunteer their services in a cleanup program.

The Recreation Committee is hoping that local businesses service clubs and organizations will come forward with offers of donations or special money-making projects to meet the cost. The possibility of a government grant is also open.

Fireworks Monday At Zwick's Island

Zwick's Island will be the site of the only public fireworks display in Belleville this coming holiday weekend.

Completely sponsored by the Kinsman club of Belleville, there will be no charge either for admission or for parking facilities.

Starting at 8:45 on Monday evening, the $750 package of fireworks will be ignited by members of the Belleville Fire Department.

Last year, said Paul Stephenson, fire inspector, the event was held in town and the fireworks were shooting over the Cashway Lumber yards. "It was fortunate that there were no incidents of damage and this year precautions will be taken including discharging the fireworks over the bay adjacent to the soccer fields at the island."

The ignition area is fenced off in the shape of a square with one side of the square being the water's edge. The crowd (last year about 300) which will be standing, will be able to watch the display from three sides." If the ground is dry enough, said Mr. Stephenson, the display can be watched while sitting, from the nearby hills."

"A permit must be obtained from the fire department before a public fireworks display can be held, and to the best of my knowledge, said Mr. Stephenson, the Kinsmen are the only group who have asked for such authorization.

"As an added safety measure," he added, "there will be a fire truck at the island and the city police are expected to help with the parking."

"I couldn't say for sure how long the display will last because we haven't unpacked the cartons yet, but I would imagine that there are enough pieces to last for about two hours."

Loot Still Pouring in for Ken Dryden

NEW YORK (CP) — Ken Dryden, who collected $1,500 and a new car along with the Conn Smythe Trophy as the most valuable player in the Stanley Cup playoffs, picks up another award today.

The tall rookie goaltender for the champion Montreal Canadiens is guest of honor at a luncheon as the recipient of a trophy and color-television set that goes with a monthly award voted by 30 United States sports writers.

He is also eligible for another automobile, which goes to the top monthly winner at the end of the year.

The latest award was not for Dryden's heroics in the final round against Chicago Black Hawks but for a first-round performance against Boston Bruins in which he made 46 saves as Montreal won 4-2.

OAKLAND (AP) — Garry Young is the new general manager of California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League.

Young, 39, former head scout of Boston Bruins, has signed a three-year contract with the Seals, owner Charles O. Finley announced Thursday. Seals coach Fred Glover had been serving as general manager temporarily since early in the 1970-71 season.

The Seals were last in the Western Division of the NHL last season and lost a record 53 games.

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran defenceman Bobby Baun has won the J. P. Bickell Memorial Cup as the most valuable member of Toronto Maple Leafs in the 1970-71 season, directors at Maple Leaf Gardens announced Thursday.

BOB BAUN

Baun spent 11 seasons with the Leafs before being drafted by Oakland Seals in 1967. The Leafs got him back last November and his presence lifted the stumbling Toronto team to a fourth-place finish in the National Hockey League's East Division.

Tim Horton, now with New York Rangers, was the last Leaf to win the trophy, presented only in years Toronto makes the Stanley Cup playoffs, in 1969.

OTTAWA (CP) — Gilbert Perreault has been named the best French-Canadian professional athlete of the year.

The high-scoring rookie with Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League was selected for the annual Gil O. Julien award over Jean Beliveau, captain of the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens, and Pierre Desjardins of the Canadian Football League Montreal Alouettes.

The J. C. Daoust trophy for the best amateur sportsman in the Ottawa-Hull region went to Guy Lafleur, high-scoring centre with Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Amateur Hockey League.

TORONTO (CP) — Billy Harris, a National Hockey League veteran of 12 years, said Thursday he still is negotiating for the job as coach of the Swedish national hockey team.

Harris was commenting on a report out of Sweden that he had accepted the job in principal.

In an interview, Harris said that "as far as I'm concerned we're still negotiating."

"I'm still waiting to hear from them. I haven't talked to anybody since last Monday."

Harris, who coached Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series last season, said he received an invitation from the Swedish Hockey Federation about a month ago to visit Stockholm for discussions about the coaching position.

Weekend No Holiday for City Athletes

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

While most city residents will be enjoying a holiday on the long Victoria Day weekend, Belleville's sporting fraternity will be hard at work with a number of leagues beginning action for the summer season.

The Apollo Barbell Club will be carying the local colors to Woodstock, where five of the team members will be competing Saturday in the Canadian Senior Weightlifting championships.

Middleweight Paul Barrett will be competing in the 165-pound class, while Art Wall will represent the Belleville club in the light-heavy section.

The remaining two - thirds of the Walt brothers combination, Gary and Bob, will both be lifting in the 198-pound, mid-heavy grouping.

In the 242-pound category, Price Morris will be ready to renew his heavy-weight duel with Commonwealth Games gold medalist Russ Prior of Hamilton.

The nine lifters who excede the Pan - American Games qualifying standards by the greatest amount will win a place on the Canadian team for this summer's games in Colombia.

Closer to home, stock car racing fans will have plenty of action with both Riverview and Shannonville Speedways open for business.

Riverview, located just north of Highway 401 at Trenton will open the season Saturday night with a full card of races.

The new diamond class of cars with engines ranging up to 324 cubic inches are expected to bypo the already Saturday night.

The Shannonville Speedway parkland, located on Highway 2 will mix horses with horsepower this weekend.

Ponies and horses are invited to make use of the 200 acres of trails and pony rides and horse rentals will supplement the regular stock car racing action.

Another added attraction will be the auto thrill show.

The Parkway will open Saturday at 10 a.m. and Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

Baseball fans will get their chance to view the first regularly - scheduled games of the season Saturday when the South Hastings league begins play.

The oldest organized baseball league in the area will have two games in progress beginning at 6.45 Saturday night with Latta travelling to Cannifton to take on the defending champion Plaxo's Concrete squad and Shannonville visiting Read.

Softball swings into action Monday with the Commercial League opening its 36-game schedule at the Alemite.

Rollins Construction will face Howard and Robert Printing in a 7 p.m. contest with the defending champion Ellis Juniors taking on Point Anne in the second half of the double header.

The 12 - team Industrial Softball League will also begin play Monday. The league squad will fac The Intelligencer at Prince Charles, while Deloro Stellite and Mead Johnson hook up at the CNRA diamond and Brooks-Bond gets its initial start against CNR at Prince of Wales.

On the minor sports scene both baseball and softball will open their regular schedules Monday.

The official Belleville Minor Baseball Opening is slated for 1 p.m. Monday at Parkdale with a number of local dignitaries scheduled to be on hand.

The minor softball group will begin play with three tyke games slated for 6.30 Monday evening.

Harness Racing Delayed Week

Despite worries that repairs at the Quinte exhibition grounds would not be completed in time for the proposed Saturday night harness racing opener, the fairgrounds track will be ready for the event — unfortunately the horses will not.

As fair board director Ev Gowsell explains it, "There are plenty of horses around, but we just haven't been able to qualify them because of the track being repaired. We're going to qualify a number of them Saturday afternoon and we'll be ready to start next week."

Other factors limiting the number of entries that would be available for Saturday are the outbreak of swamp fever across the province that has reduced the number of horses in general and the Victoria Day races in Kingston which would have prevented any horses from that area competing in Belleville this Saturday.

"It might be just as well that the opening was postponed a week," says Gowsell.

There is no question that we could have been ready to race, but the delay will give us a chance to do some painting and be able to present our best picture to the public."

Shriners Know Score

Although the Ottawa 'Ws wrapped up the Belleville Shrine Peewee Tournament championship in March, it wasn't until this week that the final score was known.

The most important "scoring statistic" of the tournament was finalized Wednesday night at an inter-club meeting of the Belleville Shrine Club, when the Shriners received a cheque of $1,600 from the three-day hockey competition to utilize towards furthering their work with crippled children.

The money came from the sale of tickets and programs at the tournament and was the largest sum collected in the ten-year history of the event, totalling over $200, more than the 1970 donation.

Noble Jim Mathews was head of this year's tournament committee, which is chosen each year from members of the Belleville Shrince Club and involves a total of about 50 shriners from the local chapter.

One of the major reasons for the success of this year's event was the fact that the home town Rollins Construction peewees were able to make it all the way to the finals of the tournament, before bowing out to Ottawa.

Shriners Jim Mathews and Harry Birkenshaw along with Bobby Crawford and his Rollins peewee all-star teammates all had a hand in raising $1,600 for crippled children in the annual Belleville Shrine Peewee Hockey Tournament this winter. Matthews was the chairman of the tournament committee, while Birkenshaw is head of the crippled children's activities committee. The amount was the largest raised in the ten-year history of the event.

Police Locked Out

The Police Association peewees were locked out of the scoring column as RCAF's Joe Bourette posted the only shutout of the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association action last night.

The T - Bird peewees got goals from Doug Rainboth and Tyler Walker to post a 2-0 win over the Police.

Garth Scully led the winners with a pair of tallies with the other going to Joe Guthrie. For Dairy Queen it was Bob Isaac and Shawn McDonnell counting the only goals.

The Dairy Queen peewees suffered a similar fate to their novice counterparts as they bowed 4-1 to Y's Men's Club.

Jim Walsh scored twice for the Y's Men with other scores going to Laurie Wilson and Dave McBride. The only goaltender for Dairy Queen was Jeff Runciman.

Kerry Reid fired two goals and Bob Wallbridge and Rick Bell one each as Sun Luck Gardens midgets shut downed the Belleville Auto Dealers 4-1. Andy Ricketts tallied the only goal for the automen.

Reward Time

The village's top minor league hockey players received the rewards of a season's effort at the Point Anne District Sports Association banquet this week.

A total of 60 people were on hand for the presentations which were made by sport's association president Fred Deveau and vice - president Harris Hull.

The awards were voted by teammates from the OMHA entries in peewee, bantam and midget. The top peewee was Brian Masterson, with the bantam MVP going to Edward Grills and Calvin Lane copping the midget award.

High Gear

Quinte Transport was in high gear for their Bay of Quinte Soccer League opener last night clubbing the Bata Braves into 11-0 submission.

The transport team piled up a 5-0 lead at half time and then added six more in the final half as Ed Hartnick connected for four consecutive tallies.

Harnick was the scoring star for the winners counting five goals with single markers going to Phil Harvey, Brian Smith, Robin Findlay, Rob Evans, Dave Stephen and Allan Brown.

Like Clock-Work

Doug Jones Jewellers were working with watch - like precision last night taking a 3-2 Belleville Minor Softball exhibition decision from Ernie Tuck Appliances.

The game was a pitching duel as Danny Vance and Andy Rosati combined for the win, while Tim Soule was tagged with the loss.

Horton Says 'When'

By THE ASSOCIATE PRESS

Detroit outfielder Willie Horton slugged a two-run homer in the 11th inning Thursday night, giving the Tigers a 5-3 victory over Cleveland Indians.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston Red Sox whipped New York Yankees 9-7, Oakland Athletics trounced Milwaukee Brewers 7-3, and California Angels shaded Minnesota Twins 1-0. Baltimore Orioles and Washington Senators were rained out after three innings with the Orioles leading 1-0. Chicago White Sox and Kansas City Royals were not scheduled.

Horton, a right-handed hitter, drilled an outside pitch from lefty Steve Mingori over the right-centre field fence following a leadoff walk to Jim Northrup.

Earlier, Norm Cash homered for Detroit and Vada Pinson for Cleveland and the Tigers held a 3-2 lead with two out in the ninth and unbeaten Joe Coleman shooting for his fifth triumph. But Coleman walked Fred Stanley and Chuck Hinton and reliever Tom Timmerman gave up a run-scoring single to Ted Ford.

"I would have liked to see Coleman win the game," said manager Billy Martin. "He's such a good competitor. But he was getting tired and I thought he lost his control."

Still, Coleman's 4-0 record represents the best start in the majors for the plucky right-hander, who suffered a fractured skull when struck by a line drive during spring training.

The Red Sox exploded against New York's Stan Bahnsen with one out in the first inning on a walk, Carl Yastrzemski's run-scoring double and Rico Petrocelli's third home run in four games. George Scott cracked a two-run homer in the eighth and nail down Boston's 19th victory in 24 games and increase the Red Sox' lead in the East Division to three games over the Orioles.

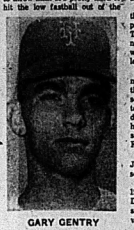
Gentry's Lone Mistake Costly

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Philadelphia Phillies silenced New York 1-0 on six hits Thursday night, handing the Mets their fifth consecutive loss.



"We've just hit a snag," said Mets manager Gil Hodges. "Fortunately, we're in a position to overcome it."

In Thursday's other National League games, San Francisco Giants whipped Chicago Cubs 8-7, St. Louis Cardinals turned back Los Angeles Dodgers 5-0, Cincinnati Reds beat Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4, San Diego Padres dropped Houston Astros 4-2 and Montreal Expos cooled off Atlanta Braves 4-3 in 14 innings.

Mets pitcher Gary Gentry made one mistake — a gopher ball to Deron Johnson in the only run in the second inning.

"One pitch, one swing," said Hodges, signifying the difference in the game.

"It was a low fastball," said Gentry, "which is where I like to throw him. It's pretty hard to hit the low fastball out of the park (Veterans Stadium), especially in centre field."

GARY GENTRY

Willie McCovey walloped a three-run homer in the ninth to pull San Francisco from behind. The Giants used three-run innings in the eighth and ninth to wipe out a four-run Chicago lead.

The Cubs, who had two homers by Ron Santo, led 6-2 in the eighth when the Giants scored three times. Chris Speier fan Frank Healy's bases-filled double. McCovey slammed his ninth delicate shot of the season following walks to Tito Fuentes and Willie Mays.

Steve Carlton's five-hitter and Joe Hague's home run and run-scoring single led St. Louis.

The tall left-hander, who just 18 games in 1970, struck out five Dodgers in recording his third shutout of the year and seventh victory in nine decisions.

Bernie Carbo singled in the tie-breaking run in a three-run seventh that carried Cincinnati over Pittsburgh. Carbo drove in Tony Perez, who had singled, with the run that snapped a 3-3 tie before Tommy Helms produced what proved to be the winning tally with a double.

Nate Colbert delivered three hits, scored two runs and knocked in another as San Diego beat Houston for the second night in a row. Reverser sen bailed San Diego starter Clay Kirby out of ninth-inning bad water by preserve Kirby's second victory in seven decisions.

John Boccabella's leadoff home run snapped a 3-3 tie in the 14th to give Montreal the victory over Atlanta, which had won five of six games. Ralph Garr, the National League's leading hitter, had tied the game with a run-scoring double in the fifth.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Horse trainer Budd Lepman said Thursday the $1.5 million he's offered owner Pedro Baptista for Canonero II is far shy of the Venezuelan's asking price, despite several increased offers.

"We didn't reach an agreement," Lepman said after another meeting with Baptista and Venezuelan stud trainer Miguel Torrealba. "Their price is much more than I believe my group intends to pay."

Lepman refused to disclose the asking price for the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, but Baptista is reported to be seeking $4 million for the horse which has taken the first two parts of racing's triple crown.

LONDON (Reuter) — Both wings of the Irish Republican Army have denied responsibility for an anonymous threat to kill British golfer Tom Jacklin if he takes part in a tournament in Belfast, Northern Ireland.

Jacklin said at his London home he has still not decided whether to withdraw from next month's Ulster open golf championship.

The threat to shoot him was made last week in a telephone call to a London evening newspaper. The caller also warned the family of Jacklin's wife Vivien in Belfast that their home would be bombed.

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — George Knudson of Toronto and Homero Blancas shared the first-round lead in the Colonial National invitational golf tournament but much of the attention focused on a young amateur just two shots off the pace.

Ben Crenshaw, 19, a University of Texas freshman, recorded the second-lowest amateur score in the 26-year history of this tournament, firing a 69 Thursday.

Knudson and Blancas, the defending champion, matched three-under-par 67s on the 7,142-yard Colonial course, playing on an ideal scoring day.

Davis Says He Cannot Yet Comment on Escarpment Land Deals

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis told the Ontario legislature Thursday he cannot make a statement on controversial Niagara Escarpment land deals because he has not had time to study the information he has gathered on the issue.

He said he is treating the question "as one of highest priority" and expects to make a statement "within the next few days."

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, said the delay was an attempt to cool off the issue and "sweep it under the carpet over the long weekend."

The controversy surrounds 506 acres purchased by the government in 1969 from Caledon Mountain Estates for $1,450 an acre.

Caledon, which has a number of Progressive Conservative Party members on its board of directors, bought the property for $726 an acre before selling it to the government 22 months later.

The parcel is part of a 1,070-acre tract the government was urged to purchase for public use by a Niagara Escarpment study.

Caledon owns another 146 acres in the area and opposition members have charged that the company sold the recreational land to the government as a "trade-off" to gain approval to subdivide its remaining property.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales told the house Tuesday that Caledon had applied to subdivide about 250 acres within the 1,070-acre parcel but the application is still before his department.

Mr. Davis said his statement was delayed because "the scope of the area involved, the number of properties affected and the complexity of the transactions are very great indeed."

He said the most impressive part of his investigation so far was "the magnitude of the government's effort" to preserve the escarpment for public use.

Mr. Davis's statement was expected by opposition members to give an indication whether the land deals would be referred to a legislature committee for study.

In other business Thursday:

—Attorney-General Allan Laurence told Opposition Leader Robert Nixon he considers political experience a valuable asset for a provincial judge. Published reports earlier in the day said nine of the 13 judges appointed since last November are or have been members of the Progressive Conservative party.

—The legislature gave second and third readings to a bill amalgamating the departments of highways and transport to form the new department of transportation and communications. Amendments to the Mining Tax Act, the Succession Duties Act and the Wages Act also received second and third readings.

—Mr. Lawrence said a fire Feb. 23 at St. Daniel's School in Ottawa was caused when a burner flame ignited soot in the school's boiler, which had not been cleaned since it was installed in 1962.

—Premier Davis told the house the government still has not made up its mind whether to approve Toronto's controversial Spadina Expressway.

—Mr. Lawrence told Mr. Nixon he knows of no threats that charges would be laid against prisoners who participated in the riot at Kingston penitentiary last month.

Major Drive Against VD Planned

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario health department plans a major campaign using posters, films, books, radio, television and recorded messages to inform everyone in the province about venereal disease, a legislature committee was told Thursday.

As a first step, the department is printing tens of thousands of pamphlets to be distributed to service clubs, schools, doctors and parent-teacher associations early next month.

By June 15, persons in Metropolitan Toronto will be able to dial a telephone number and be told by recording where to find their nearest clinic for examination and treatment. Depending on the response, the telephone message may be extended to Hamilton, London, Ont., Windsor and Ottawa.

Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence asked Jim Bain, director of communications, to make the announcement during a meeting of the committee on human resources which is studying the $900 million health department estimates for 1971-72.

Mr. Bain said the full program is expected to be ready by Sept. 1, including a campaign for high schools. He said some school boards have asked for material for Grades 7 and 8 and this may be ready later this year.

Six Nations Indian College Urged

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government should encourage establishment of an Indian-run community college on the Six Nations Reserve near Brantford, Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon said Thursday.

Mr. Nixon said the college, which should have a "board of that is totally Indian," could occupy vacant buildings on the reserve which once housed the federally-run Mohawk Institute, a former residential school for Indian children.

The college could become a North American centre of Indian studies, he suggested.

Final decisions on operation of the college should be left to the Indians, he told a legislature committee studying the estimates of the department of the provincial secretary.

"If they ask us we'd be happy to lend them resources to see what can be done," said Provincial Secretary John Yaremko.

Disclosure Required

TORONTO (CP) — Financial and Commercial Affairs Minister Arthur Wishart introduced in the legislation Thursday amendments to the Ontario Securities Act.

The amendments, including requirements for more complete disclosure on takeover bids and clarification of the rights and obligations of parties involved in such bids, implement short-term recommendations of the Ontario Securities Commission merger study committee.

Other changes establish date of ownership for purposes of insider trading as the date of the trade instead of the date of delivery. Further amendments bring the act into line with the British Corporations Act.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Cause Not Known For Crib Deaths

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My closest friend's first baby just died. She is almost out of her mind blaming herself for it. I suppose she'll get over it eventually as her doctor keeps telling her she's suffering from unnecessary guilt feelings. Is there any known cause for crib death? She's afraid to have a baby again. — Mrs. R.

• • •

Comment: Whether it is called crib death, sudden death syndrome or smothering syndrome — it's all the same: a tragedy for the parents.

I can add only one more small voice to that of her own doctor when I say it is invariably true that mothers are blameless when such a devastating event occurs. We doctors don't yet know (although we're looking hard for the cause) why an apparently healthy baby becomes involved in a crib accident. One estimate is that from 10,000 to 20,000 babies die every year in this mysterious manner.

It's not a pleasant subject to write or talk about; nevertheless mothers should know it is unlikely they are guilty (as your friend seems to believe). We have no way of preventing these catastrophes.

Sometimes it appears that a lung infection like pneumonia is the cause. At other times, a sudden overwhelming infection of the upper breathing apparatus occurs. Recently, there has been some evidence that brain or spinal cord injury is involved. But nothing definite is yet known.

As I said, doctors are carefully investigating. Until we find the specific reason for these sudden fatalities all we can tell mothers is to be careful in managing a young child with a cold. Whenever in doubt, call your baby doctor.

Another theory is that an enlarged thymus gland (under the upper chest) may suddenly interfere with the child's breathing. We are looking into that, too.

• • •

Meanwhile, I suggest that mothers who have lived through such a terrible experience stop blaming themselves. Neglect is not the cause of crib death. I also want to add that other young mothers should not go into panic about

Sydney J. Harris Says

Charity Affairs Useless

As everyone knows, it takes a long time for great ideas to be accepted and adopted. And in the end the original mind is vindicated by history. This is my hour of vindication.

Some 20 years ago, I proposed in this very column that the whole idea of the "charity affair" be abandoned, and that, instead, the prospective donors be asked to contribute to a "nothing benefit."

It was my idea that the receptions and cocktail parties and dinners and banquets and recitals people attend for the sake of charity could be abolished with no loss of revenues—most contributors would gladly forgo the privilege of staying home.

For $25 a couple it is cheap to avoid the traffic crush, the donning of evening clothes, the interminable speeches, the desiccated chicken, the cold mashed potatoes, the impermeable peas, the wilting lettuce, the peppermint parfait and the arsenical coffee.

Who would not happily shell out this sum, or even a larger one, to escape these horrendous public occasions which do nothing but inflate egos of banquet speakers, inflame the ulcers of banquet chairmen, and diminish the conjugal felicity of the exhausted couples attending these tedious rites?

Well, finally, after two decades of lying fallow, the brilliant simplicity of my conception has borne fruit — and 200,000 words of fruit, at that. In New York last month, a lady who for 14 years has been chairman of an annual charity affair in Philharmonic Hall, decided for this year not to have a benefit, but to ask the people who usually bought tickets to contribute anyway.

As the New York Times reported it: "To her surprise and delight, she found, when all the figures were added up, that she had collected $90,-000. This was only a few thousand dollars less than last year, when she and her committee wore themselves out selling tickets and planning a buffet to be followed by a musical revue.

The group incurred no expenses except mailing, so virtually all the proceeds went directly to the charity. The women didn't have to buy new gowns for the event (which no doubt prompted their husbands to send in more generous checques). No feuds and enmities were precipitated by the difficult protocol of seating arrangements. And everyone woke up happy and refreshed the next morning.

What could be more sensible, more civilized, and more truly philanthropic? There was no jockeying for position and publicity, no enormous budget for entertainment, no profits for the booze-vendors, beauty salons or boutiques. Uniquely enough, it all really went for charity.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For May 22

Your birthday today: Spiritual enlightenment comes your way all through the year ahead so that even the dullest routines take on a different quality. Many habits and chores fade out of your daily living as you native and happily self-starters with original ideas.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Leave unpleasant topics alone; stay in good humor for a fairly easy day. News can go unspoken, unnoticed. Be alert and diligent.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your good fortune also brings relief to somebody else. Seek no selfish advantage — there's enough of everything for all.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Expect contradictory comment from unthinking people; leave them plenty of room and time to turn about. Comedy saves the day.

CANCER (June 21 — July 21): You can put on a good show but try not to lead yourself off the beaten path. Rely on experience and proven skills rather than opportunism.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Declare a holiday — or, if you can't take off, see what a picnic even steady routines become when viewed in a humorous light.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You resolve an annoyance by an expedient for the moment. Change things around to remove cause for recurrence — the liberation is worth seeking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The more youthful your spirit the brighter is this curious consistency in day. Great energy is asleep under surface calm, available on subtle triggering.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Studies, both past and present, can be applied advantageously. Strive for more accurate details.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Take a bold luck tactful criticism — few will hear it in the spirit intended anyway. Care in exposing your own activity to general view is important.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Elusive objects and ideas come to ready use or get completely lost, according to how you direct your energy and how realistic the goals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Give your deeper unconscious mind a chance to digest recent experience. It won't rest, as does your intellect when you sleep.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Old habits, family customs fail or are forgotten in the swift rush of emotional experience. If you can avoid action, be thankful and relax.

Francis Simard Is Second Man Convicted as Laporte Killer

MONTREAL (CP) — Francis Simard, a 23-year-old Quebec student, Thursday became the second man to be convicted in the October strangulation murder of Pierre Laporte.

A three-week Court of Queen's Bench trial, during which the slim accused made little effort to defend himself, climaxed suddenly Thursday afternoon when a 12-man jury returned a verdict of guilty after about three hours deliberation.

Simard, slouching in the prisoner's box, heard Mr. Justice Alphonse Barbeau immediately pronounce a sentence of life imprisonment, mandatory on conviction of non-capital murder.

In an exit resembling that of Paul Rose, 27-year-old school teacher convicted of the Laporte killing in March, Simard shouted, "Nous vaincrons—We will win" and "Vive le FLQ—Long live the FLQ," as he left.

Two others remain to be tried for the killing of Mr. Laporte, Quebec's labor minister when his strangled body was found stuffed in a car trunk Oct. 18, eight days after he had been kidnapped from his suburban St. Lambert home.

Bernard Lortie, 19, and Paul Rose's younger brother, 23-year-old Jacques, are scheduled to appear on non-capital murder charges next Tuesday.

Through most of his trial, Simard made few objections to Crown procedures and conducted little cross-examination.

He was not represented by a lawyer but three counsel stood by to advise him. One, Pierre Cloutier, only grinned when asked Thursday whether Simard would appeal, saying, "Not worth it."

One of the accused's few attempts to take part in the trial resulted in four contempt citations because of comments he made in exchanges with Mr. Justice Barbeau. For these, he received a four-month sentence.

One citation resulted from his observation that "this is godam fine justice" when he was refused an attempt to quash charges on the basis that he had not been given sufficient time to prepare for the trial.

The contempt citations came during the early days of the trial and for about two weeks afterwards the accused remained quiet throughout.

PCs in Quebec Strive for Unity

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Progressive Conservatives meet here this weekend to try to reunite themselves and find a position in the debate on Quebec's status in Confederation.

The three-day convention, which follows more than a month of controversy over the party's stand on Quebec, begins today.

The highlight of the convention will probably be a speech Saturday afternoon by federal leader Robert Stanfield, who has been struggling to keep control of the Quebec party.

Mr. Stanfield is being challenged by a faction which wants the party to acknowledge the existence in Canada of two nations, one French-speaking and one English-speaking, and to support greater Quebec autonomy.

The dissidents are led by Fernand Alie, who recently resigned as president of the Quebec party, and Roch LaSalle, member of the House of Commons for Joliette riding who left the party recently to sit as an independent.

The party's attitude to Quebec's place in Confederation will be discussed at the convention workshop on the Canadian identity.

Resolutions from that workshop and the other two on economic affairs and society and the individual will be voted upon at the closing plenary session Sunday.

A paper which Mr. Alie presented to the party earlier this year will serve as the basis for much of the discussion in the workshop on the Canadian identity.

Mr. Alie sparked the controversy when he criticized Mr. Stanfield's position on Quebec in an open letter to the federal leader published in Montreal Le Devoir.

In the letter, Mr. Alie said Mr. Stanfield had to take a clear stand on the constitution or lose "credibility" in Quebec.

He said the existence of two nations in Canada is "an unavoidable reality" and called for a "decentralizing federal system".

Mr. Alie also called for equal numerical representation of English- and French-speaking Canadians in official positions within the party.

Heath Faces Fight

PARIS (AP)—The leaders of France and Britain face some fierce opposition at home to their hard-won agreement paving the way for British entry into the European Common Market.

But after demonstrating solid friendship in their two-day summit parley, President Georges Pompidou and Prime Minister Edward Heath were reported confident today they would override domestic criticism of their pledge to work together for a united Western Europe.

Among Britain's governing Conservative and opposition Labor parties, there are scores of legislators sworn to block their country's entry into the European Economic Community.

They reason joining the Market would cost Britain much more than it would earn. And if the findings of pollsters are significant, the weight of popular opinion also seems to be against membership.

Tweed Fire Risk High

TWEED (Special) — Lack of rain has created an extremely high fire hazard in the Tweed forest area, it was reported today by the Tweed lands and forests office.

The fire fires are now burining in the area — one of approximately 10 acres in extent in Marmora township and 4 or 5 small ones in Brougham township near Dacre.

Lands and Forests officials at Tweed said that new growth in the north is three weeks later than normal with the lack of rain resulting in a high to extreme fire hazard.

Due to the high hazard, burning permits are not being issued in the Bancroft area, while in the south co-operation of the public is being asked.

'Jewel of Toronto' Opens on Schedule

TORONTO (CP) — Officials expected a flood of visitors today as the provincial government officially opened its $19-million exhibition and entertainment showcase in Lake Ontario.

Ontario Place, dubbed by the designers as the jewel of Toronto's harborside, finally became a reality after two years of work, worry and scramble by its designers to meet the opening deadline.

And although the excitement is all there: gaiety, music and the tone of an Expo, provincial-style, the jewel needed some last-minute polishing.

Construction workers and technicians, who usually call it a day after eight or 10 hours on the job, were working around the clock Friday night to have things in at least partial readiness.

"We'll be going out the back door when the premier comes in the front," one worker said in the midst of Friday night's flurry of activity.

Premier William Davis was to open Ontario Place officially at 2 p.m. EDT.

Among the headliners: Veronica Tennant and the National Ballet, singers Catherine McKinnon and Wally Koster, Tranquility Base rock group, ethnic dancers, bands ranging from Trump Davidson's jazz ensemble to the Governor-General's Horse Guards and scores of elementary and secondary school singers.

Ontario Place, the dream and brainchild of former premier John Robarts, is set down solidly in what once was an open spread of Lake Ontario. Its man-made islands—basically two of them—and its curious architectural designs have caught the public eye for two years.

It started from scratch in May, 1969, when two old freighter hulls loaded with rock were sunk off the waterfront. From there, with the addition of 2.5 million cubic feet of land fill, all taken from demolished building sites in Toronto, has emerged what officials hope will evolve into the biggest provincial showplace in Canada.

"There's a lot of history buried out there," says James Ramsay, a driving force behind the idea and the man who designed Ontario's pavilion at Expo 67 in Montreal.

"There's the old Telegram building, the Prince George Hotel and other structural relics of the past. And we're using them to build something for the future."

There's little about Ontario Place today to remind the visitor of the original shoreline. Instead of the open water chosen for its commercial potential in the 1800s by the pioneers of this Upper Canada capital, there are 96 acres of tourist extravaganza.

Ship Afire Off Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Search and rescue officials reported today a Norwegian cruise ship with 89 persons aboard is on fire in the Strait of Georgia about 60 miles northwest of Vancouver. The vessel, Meteor, sent a distress signal when the fire broke out. A number of vessels responded immediately. Passengers aboard the burning ship were put aboard lifeboats and were being picked up by other ships.

Street Sweeper Traps Boy, 5

WINNIPEG (CP) — Five-year-old Darryl Fahlman, who was trapped for 25 minutes inside a street-sweeping machine Thursday, was reported in good condition in hospital Friday with a broken arm and broken leg.

A police spokesman said Darryl "was pushed between the two front brushes on the machine, then came in contact with the back roller brush which drew him in to a conveyor belt where he became lodged."

Had he not stuck on the belt, he would have gone into a dust bin and "that would have been the end."

The machine operator continued about 200 feet down the street before realizing the boy was in the machine.

News Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal ruled Friday that the Canadian Bill of Rights does not prohibit penalizing drivers for refusing to give breath samples to police The ruling came in the case of John Leonard Curr, of nearby Locust Hill, acquitted last Sept. 1 by provincial judge Maurice Charles, who said the breath sample requirement conflicted with the Bill of Rights.

NEW YORK (AP) — Two patrolment were shot from ambush and killed Friday night in the third armed attack on city policemen in three days. The two slain patrolmen, Waverly Janes and Joseph Piagentini, were "gunned down from behind".

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A generally clear cool night will give way to a mainly sunny day throughout most of Ontario today. Overnight temperatures in most northern and even some southern localities hovered near the freezing mark and these areas will barely manage afternoon temperatures near 60. However maximum temperatures in many southern communities are expected to climb into the high 60s or low 70s. A storm will begin to spread cloud into western regions Saturday night and Sunday, accompanied by showers and some thunderstorms.

Davis Appoints Judge To Probe Land Deals

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis has ordered a judicial inquiry into land purchased by the Ontario government on the Niagara Escarpment, although investigations have uncovered no "wrongdoing."

Mr. Davis announced Friday the commission of inquiry will be headed by Judge Colin E. Bennett, chief judge of county and district courts in the province.

He said Judge Bennett has been empowered to summon any person he deems necessary, including all government departments, boards, agencies and commissions.

It will be up to Judge Bennett to decide whether the inquiry will be public and also the date for its start.

Mr. Davis said the precise purpose of the inquiry is to investigate any "improper disclosure of the report on the escarpment by Prof. Leonard Gertler of June, 1968."

Prof. Gertler of the University of Waterloo urged in the report that the provincial government purchase 55,000 acres of escarpment land for recreational purposes within four years at a cost of $18.5 million.

Opposition members in the legislature have been criticizing the government for the past two weeks about purchase of escarpment land.

Centre of the controversy is the purchase by the province in 1969 of 506 acres of escarpment property for $1,450 an acre from Caledon Estates Ltd.

It has been reported that Caledon Estates bought the land in question for $726 an acre just 22 months before selling it to the government.

Opposition members, charging several prominent Progressive Conservatives were directors of Caledon Estates, demanded an inquiry.

Officials of Caledon Estates deny the land cost them so little, and also say they had no prior knowledge that the Gertler report would recommend that the government purchase the property.

Opposition party members have charged that prices for the land parcels were listed in an "unedited" version of the Gertler report before it was made public. They also note that land purchases by private companies were made before the report became public.

In announcing the inquiry in the legislature, Mr. Davis said investigations by his government "substantiate none of these allegations of wrongdoing, but I see no way of assuring all concerned that this is indeed so, except for the course of action . . . which I am announcing."

NO PAPER MONDAY

Monday, May 24, being Victoria Day, The Intelligencer will not be published.

Hellyer: At War With The System

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Hellyer announced Friday he will sit in Parliament as an Independent Liberal, giving himself more leeway to assail government economic policy.

"It's really the system," he explained. "You might say I'm at war with the system."

A silent, brooding figure on the cabinet front since he quit as transport minister in 1969, he said he and some associates would launch a "new-impact" movement.

He would not deny that the movement might become a political party. He said details would be announced at a news conference Tuesday.

He described the movement as an outlet for the dissent he said is rankling in all political parties and throughout the nation.

A "massive reversal of economic policy" was needed to cure growing national "frustration."

Earlier this spring, Eric Kierans resigned from the cabinet as communications minister, also disenchanted with economic policy. A year ago Perry Ryan, member for Toronto Spadina, crossed the floor to sit as a Conservative.

Philip Givens, Liberal MP for York West, announced Thursday he is leaving federal politics for the provincial field. He has been a government critic as well.

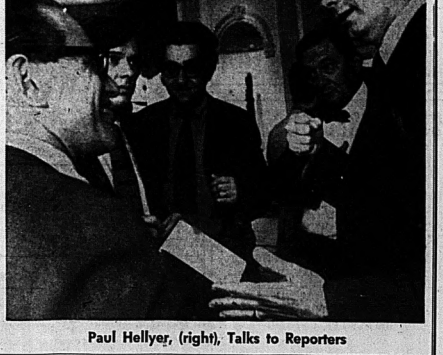
Mr. Hellyer, 47, member for Toronto Trinity, was a candidate for the Liberal leadership in 1968.

His decision Friday will bar him from the Liberal caucus but as an Independent Liberal he will be freer to blast away at the government from the outside.

He planned to run again but as an Independent Liberal.

With Prime Minister Trudeau away in Russia, acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp withheld official comment until Mr. Hellyer reveals his plans Tuesday.

Mr. Hellyer told reporters he does not blame Mr. Trudeau personally for unemployment, inflation and the "frustration, helplessness and hopelessness" in the country.



The fault was the "system"—which he defined as a small group of cabinet ministers and civil servants who made government policy. Their decisions were "rubber stamped all the way down the line."

A new grouping which would have "a new impact" on government policy was needed. He and some associates would launch a movement next week.

The Ottawa Citizen reported that brochures for a movement called Action Canada have been printed in Washington.

The brochures describe Action Canada as "a new political force" and Mr. Hellyer as "founding chairman."

Paul Hellyer, (right), Talks to Reporters

Tough Row to Hoe

OTTAWA (CP) — If Paul Hellyer leads a new political party in Canada, history indicates that he faces a formidable fight on the road to power.

Canadian political history books are studded with new movements and parties, launched amid fanfare for the purpose of eventually replacing the Liberals or Conservatives. But since Confederation, Canada has been governed by either of the two major parties—and the battle has never been close.

In 1921 the newly - formed Progressive Party elected 64 MPs—five more than the Conservatives—and became the official opposition. But in 1925, this party fell back to 24 seats. The following year it elected only 13, and in 1930, prior to its disintegration, it elected only two.

Since then, only the Canadian Commonwealth Federation, and later the New Democratic Party, has been a consistent third party in the challenge against the Liberals and Conservatives.

Engineering Tests Fail to Support Ice Control Dam Theory

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The Moira River Conservation Authority is having dam planning problems.

Since the authority was organized more than 20 years ago, executive officials have blown warm and cool over the construction of an ice control dam on the river in North Belleville, the purpose of which would be to help alleviate the possibility of spring floods in the downtown section of the city.

The site originally proposed for the dam by conservation branch engineers was at the old rock quarry area immediately to the north of the College Street Bridge. But another engineering study done two years ago indicated a site further downstream would be more suitable.

The thinking was that the downstream site would offer more ice storage capabilities and that the amount of suspended frazil ice would be reduced.

A scale model of the dam structure proposed for the Reid Street site was constructed at Queen's University but tests late last winter didn't support the expected increased ice storage capacity and the engineers have gone back to their drawing boards.

The proposal now is to utilize both the College Street and Reid Street sites for the construction of not one but two dams.

Under the proposal an ice storage dam would be built north of College Street utilizing the old rock quarry for ice storage, while a low weir dam is proposed for the Reid Street area to control the suspended frazil ice which plays a part in spring flooding.

Consulting engineers Crysler, Davis and Jorgensen of Toronto are now trying to determine whether the two dam concept is feasible or holds any advantage over the single site plan.

The authority had planned to go ahead this year with detailed engineering for the ice control dam but with the latest design proposal this is now ruled out and provincial subsidy money has as a result been cut from this year's budget.

And the authority's request for the conservation branch to do engineering studies on the proposed Big Bend Bay dam upstream from Moira Lake has also run into problems.

The authority has been advised by the conservation branch chief engineer that due to staff limitations the branch would be unable to undertake the work.

The Big Bend Bay dam would be a costly project with estimates running from $2½ million up.

Grant Funds Reduced

The reduction of provincial grants could curtail work planned this year by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

The Moira authority has been informed that grants on its administration budget will be reduced by 12 per cent or $6,720, and that its grant on capital works will be reduced from $80,000 to $30,000.

Included in the grant slash were funds for the preparation of engineering plans for the proposed ice control dam in north Belleville.

The cut in grant money for this item was made by the province when it was learned preliminary studies were still incomplete and there was no likelihood of the project going ahead this year.

Two other items in this year's authority program could also be affected.

One of these is the construction of a picnic shelter at the Vandervaeter Conservation area and the other the purchase of two trailers for the purpose of hauling authority equipment.

The authority executive at its last meeting voted to construct the picnic shelter at a cost not to exceed $1,500 and also to purchase the two trailers — subject to the grants.

School Support Varies Sidney Mill Rate

Thanks mainly to a credited surplus from the old public school board, public school supporters in Sidney township will face only a small tax hike this year.

But it will be a different story for separate school supporters who will see their tax levies jump by sizeable amounts.

Sidney township council this week announced an over-all mill rate increase for residential and farm public school supporters of 1.2 mills with a 1.1 mill increase for commercial and industrial ratepayers in the same category.

But the increase for separate school supporters with an average residential and farm assessment of $2,000 will be $45.40 for ratepayers in the Belleville zone; for the Trenton zone an increase of $15 and in the Batawa area an additional $20.40.

The over-all mill rate for county, township and school purposes this year will be 107.2 mills for farm and residential public school supporters and 120.1 mills for commercial and industrial ratepayers in the same category.

But for farm and residential separate school supporters the rate for the Belleville zone will be 132.2 mills; in the Trenton zone 115 mills and in Batawa 117.7 mills.

Not included in these rates are special charges for services such as sewers, tile drainage and street lighting.

With the new waste disposal site on Alkens Road, township ratepayers subscribing to the service will be charged a flat rate of $8.

Last year all township public school supporters with an average assessment of $2,000 paid $212 and separate school ratepayers $215.

The township rate this year is 68.4 mills residential and farm and 26.6 mills commercial and industrial.

A partial breakdown of the additional $72,123 to be collected on the tax roll this year will see an additional $21,000 going to Hastings county, $17,000 to the township; $6,000 to the Hasings-Prince Edward Separate School Board.

Township clerk J. Byron Harder said that the public school board levy was down $8,000 this year because of the credited surplus from the old Sidney township public school board.

Come, everyone who thirsts,
Come to the waters:
And he who has no money,
Come, buy, and eat!
Come, buy wine and milk
Without money and without price.
Why do you spend your money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which does not satisfy?
Harken diligently to me, and eat what is good, and delight yourself in fatness.
Incline your ear and come to me;
hear that your soul may live . . .

Bookstore in Picton School To Remain Another Year

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Students at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute will continue to patronize a school bookstore next year while board of education trustees consider methods for paring its operating costs.

Finance chairman Edward (Ted) Burd told a board of education meeting here Thursday "an area of real unrest" could result if the bookstore does not remain open. He said his opinion was based on general comments made by the students' council and PECI principal, Paul Burd. Two senior students from PECI asked with board members during a meeting earlier this month urging the bookstore remain in the school. Dennis Bond, a member of the student's council predicted "mass confusion" in obtaining supplies would be caused by closing the bookstore. Mr. Burd told trustees he supports the book store because students find it more expensive to buy supplies in downtown stores.

Also, other retail outlets often cannot fill orders as readily and students, consequently, are forced to wait for needed items.

Board chairman George Flower told trustees the bookstore now receives a $4,000 subsidy from the Prince Edward County board of education. When an increased mark-up was suggested by several trustees as one method of combating the store's operating deficit, business administrator E. A. Shortt become deductable from a government grant. He said, however, should board members agree to permit the students council to run the book store, a mark-up could be profitable since the pupils would not be involved with a grant system.

Principal Paul Burd replied "flatly, no," when asked if the students' council would operate the store. He said there is a new council each year and also the possibility of new financial advisers in future years. This constant change of personnel would destroy the continuity of book store operations he thought.

Trustee James Plomer termed the book store "a very great facility and noted it is difficult to assess its value to the school. It was his suggestion to retain it for another year while considering an alternative. He mentioned it it could be perhaps rented as a concession. "To try and get this out at present would be school in a state of uncertainty," he commented.

Dianne Gunning Night

Members of the Hastings County Mink Committee next week will pay tribute to this year's Ontario Dairy Princess at a special night in Madoc.

All county milk producers and farm operators with their families are invited to attend The Dianne Gunning Nite at the Centre Hastings Secondary School on Friday evening, May 28.

Following tangible recognition to the dairy princess there will be entertainment including Billy Meek, Scottish comedy star of CTV's Pig and Whistle show, the Madoc Quintette's and trick violinist Fred Stone of Belleville.

Miss Gunning of Tweed, who is also this year's Hastings county dairy princess, will her provincial honors at the Canadian National Exhibition and since has promoted the dairy industry across the province.

Lights Costly Service

Street lighting costs come high for residents of the hamlets of Wallbridge in Sidney township.

This year's tab to have some light on the road outside their homes comes to just over 10 percent of their total tax levy.

The street lighting rate this year for the hamlet is a whopping 13 mills.

Clerk J. Byron Harder said the reason for the high street lighting tab was because of the relatively few household ers. Originally the Wallbridge United Church and the public school paid part of the costs.

But the church bowed a year ago and the Wallbridge school has been closed.

School Expansion Plans Submitted

TRENTON (Staff) — Plans for a large addition to Murray Centennial School on Wooler Road have been forwarded to the department of education for approval by the Northumberland and Durham counties board of education.

The addition to the school, located just west of here, will comprise facilities for science, art, home economics, industrial arts as well as a new library, guidance counselling centre and lunchroom.

Six new classrooms in the addition will be located in pods of three rooms in an open concept design. Moveable partitions will give classrooms flexibility by which a cluster of three may be opened up into one large, open space.

It is expected that three area schools will close with the expansion of Murray Centenial. The two - room schools at Bethel, York Road and Mount Carmel are designated to be replaced by the pending expansion of the larger public school facility.

West End Recreation Area Work to Start Next Month

Expenditure of $50,000 as the next phase in a west end recreation complex in the area of the Centennial Secondary School will get under way next month as a joint project of the City parks board, the Hastings County Board of Education and the City Recreation Department.

An amount of $25,000 had been included in this year's city budget as the parks board share of the cost, while the school board has approved an expenditure of $21,000. The Recreation Department has $3,000 budgeted for, the start of a tennis court area adjacent to the new Dick Ellis rink.

The over-all development of the area calls for road construction and street lighting, provision of a parking area, senior baseball diamond, soccer pitch and an additional softball diamond.

Development work this year however, will consist mainly of grading the entire area and seeding to grass.

Parks director Lloyd Syer said that the development of the Centennial school park site would be the board's major project for this year.

About the middle of June, big earth movers will be moved in to scrape off the topsoil to allow grading of the entire area to required levels.

Then the top soil will be put back and the entire area seeded to grass.

The intention is to eventually move the present ball diamond from the fairgrounds to the Centennial school site. However, the new diamond will not be ready for use until some time in the summer of 1972.

Plans call for construction of portable bleachers, back stop and lighting for night use.

East Zwick's Island

Garbage and Fill Creating New Play Hill

Some time in the future — possibly as early as next winter — local tobogganing enthusiasts are going to have a new site for their winter fun.

The site will be at East Zwick's Island where the city parks board will soon complete plans for a costly long-term parks development program.

But the man-made tobogganing hill is already beginning to take shape — on a base formed by the discarded garbage of Belleville citizens.

Disposal of garbage at the East Zwick's site was discontinued May 1 in favor of a Sidney township site. During the last few weeks the city site was used, bulldozers formed the nucleus of what eventually will be the locale for year-round activity.

Since the city dump was closed the public works department has been accepting rock and other rock fill to increase the height of the "fill" and the tobogganing run will eventually be finished off at about 30 feet with a cover of clean fill.

The slope of the toboggan hill will be to the north to take advantage of all available snow cover.

In the meantime the entire East Zwick's land fill site will be rough graded to cover up the garbage dump appearance.

Last fall the city parks board invited comments from citizens as to the facilities they would like to see provided at East Zwick's and while the general response was not too encouraging a number of high school students did advance proposals as a class project.

These proposals, along with others received from interested citizens, were forwarded to the board's parks planning consultants who have prepared a proposed over-all plan for the area.

The consultants' proposed plan has now been received and parks board members will probably meet next week to make a decision on what will be included in the new park.

Sewage Plant Tag $2.2 Million

TRENTON (Staff) — Cost of the planned sewage treatment plant extension for Trenton will carry a price tag of about $2.2 million, council learned here Friday night.

In a four - hour meeting with Ontario Water Resources Commission representative Len Pitura, explanation of cost projections and various repayment schedules were examined for the plant expansion that will boost daily sewage flow capacity from one to 3.5 million gallons.

One possibility mentioned as a means to pay the OWRC for doing the job would be a sewer surcharge for 40 years on the water rate of about 25 cents per thousand gallons of water consumed.

Trenton is already carrying a $264,000 debt for its primary treatment plant being paid for at the average annual cost of $25 per ratepayer. This is collected through the general tax rate and an existing surcharge on water rates.

If the town allows OWRC to take over the plant's operation and handle the expansion, Trenton may instead be called on to pay by this general tax plus surcharge formula.

The meeting with OWRC was called to explain to councillors the mechanics of financing the large - scale expansion that will include not only primary but secondary and tertiary treatment.

Mayor Duncan McDonald told The Intelligencer one aspect of the financing scheme was not discussed — that of the Town of Trenton doing the work itself through debentures.

He said that the OWRC had not prepared statistics for this and council would still like to know what the difference in cost would be if the municipality rather than OWRC did the work.

Last night's discussions were based solely on the assumption that the OWRC would assume the town's existing debt of $264,000 for its existing sewage plant and manage the whole operation during and after expansion.

The mayor said the OWRC management has the advantage that taxpayers would have 40 years to pay off the expansion cost. Whereas if the town did the work it would have to be done in 20 years, the maximum period for debentures.

He explained that, if a comparative study is not available by Wednesday on the two modes of operation (town or OWRC) he will ask that the study be made when the water resources commission holds a public meeting on the planned treatment plant expansion here Wednesday.

The entertainers will accompany Picton Kiwanians and their wives to an interclub luncheon meeting at Toronto's Royal York Hotel Wednesday, May 26.

Among the local singers and musicians travelling to Toronto for this special event are The Post Family of Amelasburg, Kathy Oden, Mark Beatty, Shirley Collicer and Mr. and Mrs. B. Pickering, all of Picton. Salvation Army officer in charge of the Danforth Citadel Corps is Capt. L. Pero, a former Picton resident.

Flexible Youth Program Approved for Summer

The first Belleville group to with approval for a summer employment scheme under the federal government's Opportunities for Youth program has been promised $13,000.

The money will go to a committee devoted to using youth to serve the community. It is headed by Hugh Pepper.

The directors of the Belleville Youth Centre, initially responsible for the scheme, will act as advisors. The offices of United Community Services will administer the funds.

About 1,600 persons will benefit directly from the work and recreational programs of the project, said Mr. Pepper. About 10 people will be employed.

Under the sponsorship of UCS and Belleville Family Y, a centre will be opened in the lower level of Bridge Street United Church for recreational activity. Two young people will be employed on this project, and applicants are advised to contact the offices of UCS for interviews.

Eight people, said Mr. Pepper, will be responsible for carrying out smaller projects including conducting educational trips, heading pollution clean-up campaigns, surveying community needs, and running leadership training forums and an odd job service.

"Our plans had originally been geared to the old drop-in centre," said Mr. Pepper, "but because of the loss of this location, we are starting a survey that will cover the history of previous centres in Belleville and those in surrounding localities to determine the need for a service of this kind.

"If our findings show we need a drop-in, we will try to take action in late summer or early fall."

The person responsible for the survey will probably conduct and supervise two one-day - a - week centres in a church or other available building.

The idea of the committee is to keep its program flexible and satisfy as many community needs as possible in the available 11 weeks.

The project will get under way June 21.

"We expect that because our project is flexible and difficult to define, it will be equally difficult to approach at the close of the summer," said Mr. Pepper. "We plan to hold a community meeting when the project ends so that the people we serve during the summer months can evaluate it."

Penal Developments

The new regional detention centre at Napanee, replacing the jail there as well as those in Belleville, Kingston and Picton is one major step in prison reform, but such reform still seems a long way off from final completion.

The recent Kingston penitentiary riot, with word now of unrest in another maximum security establishment in New Brunswick, and the fact that the inquiry into the Kingston affair is largely private, are indicators that all is not well.

Meanwhile there is even criticism of the new maximum security institution at Millhaven. It has been voiced by Professor J. D. Morton of the University of Toronto law faculty in an article in The Globe and Mail. One of five members of a citizens' committee which negotiated with the Kingston penitentiary inmates, Prof. Morton suggests that Millhaven, still uncompleted, does not satisfy the recommendations of the Oulmet Commission to the then Solicitor-General in 1968. These, in part, were to the effect that the design for the new maximum security institution should be such as not to appear to be conducive to repression, and that staff and inmates should not be so separated through screening as would prevent social interaction between the two groups.

Yet at Millhaven reception area, according to Prof. Morton, the guards "are completely separated from inmates and visitors by what appears to be bullet-proof glass, in remote electronic control of exits and entrances, and, most unusually, carry massive revolvers."

Should we expect anything less? After all, Millhaven is a maximum security place, for detention of those who are regarded as a menace to society. But Prof. Morton may be on stronger ground in drawing attention to the transfer (where to is not stated) of 21 Millhaven inmates after a riot threat. He quoted a report which said the men moved out of Millhaven "or placed in solitary confinement" were believed to have been ringleaders in the (earlier) Kingston riot."

Prof. Morton describes solitary as "punishment of an extreme nature," but again, we may ask, is this not what maximum security inmates may expect for misdemeanors while in jail? Where the learned professor seems on surer ground lies in asking whether the men got a trial, even a warden's court, to determine the nature of their wrongdoing. Or is it that once inside prison walls a man may be dealt with according to the whim of the staff.

These questions and the fact that the public is being kept in the dark at the Kingston inquiry are matters for concern. The first responsibility, to be sure, is the protection of society from men of dubious character and stability. At the same time these men have rights too, and they should be observed.

Agreement Near?

If Britain and France are close to complete accord over British entry into the European common market, it must mean that they have reached some agreement over the entry to the U.K. of New Zealand meat and dairy products.

This has long been one of the stumbling blocks to British membership: the preservation of an assured market for New Zealand which if lost, would have serious economic consequences in that country. An indication of this concern were the talks in London in April between Prime Minister Heath and New Zealand Prime Minister Sir Keith Holyoake.

Also in London at that time was New Zealand Opposition leader Norman Kirk. He stressed that not only would the farmers suffer, but the entire community if arrangements were not made for N.Z. trade. Unemployment and loss of income, including overtime benefits, he said, could result.

Students Excel

Belleville students Jane Douglas and Michael Barrett of Centennial Secondary School and BCI respectively have brought honor to their schools and to the community with their performances in the Canada-wide Science Fair in Edmonton.

Miss Douglas, 17, placed second in the national senior life division and also received a cash award for the best research project and for scientific merit while Michael Barrett, 16, won third place in the senior physical division with his computer simulator exhibit.

It was a fine effort by the two Belleville students and an encouragement to their fellow students, as well as to the Rotary Club which annually sponsors the local Science Fair and Hobby Show.

More Competition for Stanfield

Election Talk and Trudeau the Potential Family Man

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Hey, man, get the scene that could be . . . or, to put it another way, is not impossible . . .

. . . It is next spring, a soft, scented night in May, and Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has announced the scheduling of the expected federal election.

But that is not the news.

For there is something more. Much more.

And it is out at 24 Sussex Drive, the Prime Minister's official National Capital residence, a hugely rambling, cut Nepean sandstone mansion brooding on the brow of the Ottawa River escarpment high above the dark swirling waters.

Everything is set up . . .

. . . the floodlights are on and bathing the mansion in a whitewash of multi-wattage . . . the directional microphones are zeroed in on target.

And out onto the portico, beneath the green canopy strides the Prime Minister, proudly, bearing the Dauphin in swaddling clothes in his arms.

It is the public presentation of the first-born of the first man and his first lady of the land in the unseen but not unseeing multitudes "out there 'in TV land."

What a setting for an election!

In a stable.

In Saskatchewan . . .

With a single bright star overhead . . .

What par earth could Conservative Leader Robert Lorne Stanfield possibly do in competition . . .

It was bad enough for him when the glamorous, athletic, trendy, globe-trotting bachelor Prime Minister wedded a beautiful British Columbia hellion, Margaret Sinclair, gorgeous daughter of a wealthy, worldly, handsome politician - turned-industrialist.

Margs (pronounce it with a hard "g"), being only a dewey 22, seemed in some magic way to deduct from those 56 often world-weary years of her bridegroom.

He never had looked — much less acted — his age. But now love and marriage had made him look younger than he had ever looked before which, belying those 18 years, was altogether far too young for his Conservative and New Democratic competition's liking.

What could Bob Stanfield do?

In all fairness, there was not too much he could have done under the circumstances.

First of all, he happens to be happily married. And it is extremely doubtful whether a quick divorce and a secret, sudden marriage to a beautiful 22 - year - old daughter of a prominent Canadian would have been either a panacea for Trudeau's triumph, or much help to the Conservative cause or, more to the point, ever be even remotely considered by the solid, steady Stanfield.

So Bob Stanfield did about the only thing he could in that kind of crunch. He gave a nice, witty little speech in the House of Commons about how delighted he and everyone else had been to hear of the marriage.

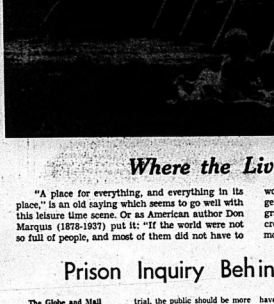
Small chance, though, when you think of what could happen to Bob Stanfield next spring on the very eve of an election.

Pierre - a poppa.

The infant the child of a mostly French mother, a scion of Irish father and a gloriously amazing all-Canadian girl from the east English of all the English-speaking provinces Beautiful British Columbia.

What if, each of all Bob Stanfield do to even begin to cope, such less counter - that killing kind of election dont'



Again, the best and only thing immediately under the circumstances. Make happy sounds first and then make like mad, in an entirely different way, all being even better a family man than the first-time father Pierre.

Make a pitch at the women's vote. Fire it in on the family's nerve-centre, Momma's purse. Remember the Status of Women Report and all those recommendations to give Miss and Mrs. Canada a fairer, squarer break?

Go for broke on it. For the lot, day-care centres — some 40 percent of married women are working wives, aren't they? — better family health-care, allowances, ready acceptance, even welcome into the until-now male oriented professions, full and equal rights here, there and everywhere.

Remember the night before his wedding when Pierre, in a speech in Toronto, praised women, using that public platform, as it turned out, to tell Margaret by radio and TV: "How do I love thee, let me count the ways . . ."

Bob Stanfield who, until now, has seemed indifferent to the Status of Women issues and could show more than half the voting population a record that is 51 per cent of it — that in the Ladies Man field; Pierre has real competition.

Where the Living Is Easy

"A place for everything, and everything in its place," is an old saying which seems to go well with this leisure time scene. Or as American author Don Marquis (1878-1937) put it: "If the world were not so full of people, and most of them did not have to work so hard, there would be more time for them to get out and lie on the grass, and there would be more grass to lie on." Well, Zwick's Island is seldom that crowded and there is plenty of room for restful moments like this. (Picture by Ian Robertson.)

Prison Inquiry Behind Closed Doors

The Globe and Mail

What is supposed to be occurring at Royal Military College in Kingston is an inquiry into last month's riot at Kingston Penitentiary, not an inquisition. Yet every new detail disclosed is more descriptive of an inquisitorial procedure than it is of a fair and balanced investigation into the causes of the riot.

Prisoners have been told they are charged; yet there is no record of charges having been laid. If charges were laid, of course, prisoners should, have the immediate right to see their counsel and to refuse to testify before the inquiry. If they have not been told that the prisoners being submitted to a psychological rack? If not, why are they being treated differently than other people suspected of a crime?

Professor Desmond Morton reports more details of prisoners removed from the Millhaven prison and kept in isolation if they are going to testify at the inquiry? Is this a softening-up process? Are they being disciplined for their part in events at Kingston before the inquiry has even heard the evidence?

On Monday inquiry chairman William Swackhamer announced that the inquiry would be held in secret. Public disclosure of evidence might lead to punitive action against witnesses, destroy reputations of guards or inmates and prejudice fair trials if charges are laid, he said.

Those are among the sickest excuses possible for holding secret hearings. One of the functions of our prisons is to protect prisoners from each other. Mr. Swackhamer could use the same argument to say that all criminal trials should be held in secret because a person, once convicted, would be at the mercy of prison inmates who took a dislike to him because of reports of the trial they had read.

As for prejudicing a fair trial, the public should be more concerned that the secret hearings should not unfairly prejudice the chances of an accused at trial. There have been a multitude of public inquiries following riots; charges have been laid and the trials have been fair. When has the Canadian public demonstrated itself to be so irresponsible as to prejudice a fair trial in such circumstances? What judges drawn and the discipline recommended.

This is a situation where lawyers, both privately and through their Canadian and provincial bar associations, should come forward to protect the prisoners' rights and to impress on Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, who is responsible for what's going on, that penal despotism has no place in our system.

Education—or What the Kids Do Not Know These Days!

Hamilton Spectator

Results of a mathematics test of Grade 9 students in a Toronto collegiate institute have produced some disturbing reactions. There were 275 students in the test. Only 21 per cent knew the number of feet in a mile; only 40 per cent could calculate 15 per cent of 30; only 47 per cent knew how many pints there were in a gallon, while that hoary old problem of finding the circumference of a circle stumped only 18 per cent.

There were other questions of similar type and the results were about the same.

These are the "bread and butter" of arithmetic, and are, or should be, disposed of in Grade 7. Now there is a call for a trustee investigation of a math teaching in Toronto.

Perhaps we should have similar tests of mathematical and other basic skills in Hamilton. The defects in our educational system will not be discovered if we continue in complacent acceptance of things as they are.

Parents expect that their children will receive the best education possible to equip them for future life.

The old ways have been discarded and scorned. True, there were some ugly teaching methods, but the fundamentals were hammered in. Is there, for example, a substitute for "memory work"? What is so terrible about learning the alphabet, if the kids that do, know vocabulary and how to spell properly? And what is wrong with competition . . . isn't that what life is about anyway?

Perhaps if we had more of this kind of thing we would all have fewer kids yawning, lolling, talking, totally bored in class, and saying that school is "a farce because we learn nothing" . . .

Don't blame the teachers. They are expected to be combinations of Mesmer and Svengarte and are at much victims of the theorists as their students.

Sometimes it's a game of ping-pong, facts being served by the teacher and whipped back by the students before they have even settled.

And in this business of examining our highly expensive of living.

Traditional Earthquake Signal Has Scientific Explanation

BBC London Letter

In some parts of Japan the phenomenon of lightning has a clear sky is a traditional signal for flight, for fear of an impending earthquake. Seismologists now believe this is no empty superstition but has a basis in fact. They suggest that such lightning could be caused by piezo - electricity in the earth's crust.

A BBC science broadcast explains this type of electricity is generated by some rocks, including certain types of quartz, if they are squeezed or stretched. It can be a very high voltage. The researchers have shown that even for weak piezo-electric rocks the squeezing of an earthquake is sufficient to build up electric potentials of hundreds of millions of volts, the sort of voltages that produce lightning during thunderstorms.

The scientists suggest this property could be turned to good use. Earthquake shock generally have a low frequency or periodicity. By using some detectors like a pendulum of low-frequency radio set it should be possible to detect electric field variations of this sort, which would give advance warning of earth movements.

Likely Presbyterian Moderator Sees Return to Old Teachings

CALGARY (CP) — Prophets of impending doom for North American churches get little support from the man who is expected to speak for the Presbyterian Church in Canada during the next year.

Rev. Murdo Nicolson, the official nominee for moderator at the 97th general assembly which opens in Toronto June 6, concedes that congregations are declining. But the 60-year-old pastor of Grace Presbyterian church in Calgary foresees a reversal of the trend and a return to basic teachings.

Weakening interest is shown in dwindling membership, he said in an interview before leaving for Toronto, but "much more alarmingly there has been a substantial drop in the attendance of children in Sunday school and . . . an almost corresponding drop in the number of baptisms."

"These would seem to augur very badly for the church because the fruits of all this will not emerge for a few years. Now this looks very dark, but I believe in the principle that for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction.

"I think we are beginning to see the start of this kind of reaction against what we call our permissive society and so on. . . .

"There are some astonishing developments within the high schools. . . . So many of these kids, who are nobody's fools . . . have begun to realize the importance of religious moral principles within any society, and therefore the numbers and activities within high schools are increasing by leaps and bounds."

Dr. Nicolson said the revival will come because the "new theology—in its most notorious form, the radical theology of 'God is dead'—has been bandied about for so long."

"I would forecast, if not quite confidently at least very hopefully, a significant return to biblical theology . . . (which) would create a return to the recognition of the unique authority of the Holy Scripture and the acceptance of Christianity as a revealed religion and this, of course, is one of the foundations of the reform churches."

Dr. Nicolson, who declined the opportunity to be nominated for moderator last year, said his nomination this year is a "treasuring" development.

The bulk of the church's membership is in Ontario and "I think there was a very real fear that . . . men from either the Maritimes or the West wouldn't stand much of a chance."

(A church spokesman said in Toronto that while any minister who is a commissioner to the general assembly is eligible for nomination from the floor, such a motion would be unusual.)

Dr. Nicolson, married with four grown children, spent nine years in Peru with the Free Church of Scotland before he came to Canada. If wished, he can speak his boyhood in the Scottish Highlands, where his first language was Gaelic, and studied theology at Edinburgh.

Although the church has always been "heavily committed to various forms of social service" in its overseas operation, there have been changes.

Recently a hydraulic engineer was sent to India "because we felt this had something to do with the physical well-being and therefore the total well-being of these people."

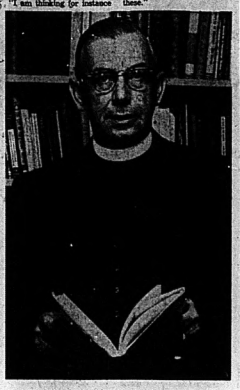
"Now, I can't see that happening before. . . . We have wakened up to the importance of that."

He described as a "caricature" the sometimes-presented image of the missionary as paternalistic, although "regrettably it may have been so or may have appeared to be so."

The church's social commitment at home has also been changing and Dr. Nicolson's congregation operates a day care centre out of the basement of the southwest Calgary church.

"I think it would be fair to say that what is today an urgent need is itself a comparatively recent development. The idea of women going out to work (after marriage) is . . . fairly recent so the need has just arisen."

The Presbyterian Church had been fortunate to avoid the financial difficulties caused by shrinking memberships, but this had forced "some denominations to retrench and seriously curtail some of their programs."



On the matter of church unions, he said it "did seem that at one time one could, with a fair degree of confidence, forecast a union between the United Church of Canada and the Anglican Church."

"But I would say this is in a far more uncertain stage today than it was three years ago. . . . In the meantime, very real differences have come to the surface and will have to be dealt with."

But there was an outside possibility of a "merger between some Presbyterian denominations within Canada."

"I am thinking for instance of the Reformed Church of America, the Christian Reformed Church and the Dutch Reformed Church; all of these are Presbyterian in doctrine and in government.

"Some initial steps have been taken, in a very, very preliminary way, with a view to setting up conversations between ourselves and some of these."

May Be Moderator

Rev. Murdo Nicolson, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church in Calgary and nominee for moderator of the 97th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, says there is a re-awakening of interest in basic teachings.

Secretary on Oceanography Ship

HALIFAX(CP) — When Barbara Scott was asked if she would like to go to sea for two months this summer on a ship with about 100 men and one other woman, the attractive 22-year-old secretary laughed.

"I thought it was all a big joke, but the more I thought about it the more exciting the idea seemed," said Barb, speaking of her trip this June and July on board the oceanography ship CSS Hudson.

Barb, whose regular work keeps her at a desk in the department of geology at Dalhousie University, will handle secretarial duties for the scientific team exploring and charting the ocean floor between Halifax and the Azores, 1,000 miles west of Portugal.

"They asked me to make a secretary on this trip because of the number of men on board, but they are hard to come by.

"And it sounded rather more exciting than the typical sitting at your desk typing and filing which can become boring after a while."

Besides secretarial duties, Barb will help with watchkeeping "in the operations room, doing satellite navigation and watching to see that all the research machinery is working."

"If something goes wrong, you fix it or call for help."

Barb's boss for the trip is Dr. F. Aumento, senior Killam fellow and chief scientist for the Dalhousie University-sponsored expedition. The main purpose is to experiment with acoustic navigation in conjunction with satellite navigation, heat flow studies and plankton investigations.

Member of the expedition include the crew from Bedford Institute of Oceanography, scientists, graduate students and two draughtsmen, one of whom is the other female member of the trip, Betty Ann Milligan of Halifax.

Barb is planning a casual wardrobe for the two-month cruise, "including a bikini bathing suit."

"Sunbathing will depend on the weather and my duties— and whether they'll let me wear a bathing suit on board ship," Barb added with a grin.

She plans on catching up on reading, plus movies and use of the ship's washroom for after-work relaxing.

The idea of spending two months in confined quarters with so many men doesn't bother the young secretary. "You want my honest opinion? I think it'll be much easier living on a ship with men than with a group of women, being one myself and knowing what we can be like in a group.

"I'm sure I'll have some interesting stories to tell when I get back. I'm not a women's lib but the sea is a man's world—just to prove to myself that I can make it too would be great."

The two female sailors will share a cabin, and Barb said they both expect to get along well together.

The only thing about the trip bothering her is the banishment of all landlubbers—seasickness.

Barb hasn't been to sea before to know whether or not the curse of the sea will affect her. "Everybody has a different story about getting seasick, and a different remedy as well. Maybe I'll be one of those who won't need them."

If she does get sick, Barb can end the cruise when the Hudson stops at the Azores midway in the voyage, and fly back to Halifax after relaxing in the islands' hot weather.

This cruise also affords a reversal of roles for Barb and her former navy lieutenant friend. He was aboard the one at sea for months with Barb waiting for his return but the tables will be turned and Barb doesn't mind the situation one bit.

Canada's First Female Movie Producer

TORONTO (CP) — Sylvia Spring could give lessons to aspiring film-makers on how to make a feature-length film cheaply.

She had to learn them all for herself while making Madeleine Is . . . on a $100,000 budget.

Raising even that much was a formidable task for a woman, Miss Spring—at 28, Canada's first female movie producer-director—found.

"It was hard to be taken seriously by a lot of men in the business," she says.

"To get through to the men who have money, to convince them that you have the ability, you have to get through their hangups about women."

Some businessmen she approached pinched her on the cheek and told her she should be in front of the cameras, not behind: others patted her on the head and said, "Isn't that cute."

"It was hard to tell if the reaction was to my sex or to my youth. Still, I got in a lot of doors simply because I was a female."

While she hesitates to call herself a feminist—"I'm a female, but that's not my concern in life"—and says she didn't set out to make a movie "to make a dint for women," she admits that she has become "a lot more militant through becoming a director."

A Canadian Film Development Corp. grant of $15,000 kicked off her financing, most of the rest of which she eventually obtained from Glen-Warren Productions Ltd., the producing arm of Toronto television station CFTO.

She provided her services, as co-author and director, for free. Cast and crew, however, were paid union scale.

She avoided wardrobe expenses by having her leading lady, Vancouver actress, Nicola Ligman, wear "some of her own clothes and some of mine, and we both get our clothes from Sally Ann (Salvation Army) thrift shops."

She didn't use makeup "because that would have meant having to hire a makeup artist, and besides we wanted to be realistic, and real people have blemishes and pimples."

She didn't rent studio space for interior shots but used friends' homes, "my house, my bedroom, my bed and my cat."

"We had to dope the cat to keep it from scratching every body."

Other scenes of the movie, which was made entirely in Vancouver, utilized city streets, parks, the beach and downtown stores.

Filming—in 16-millimetre color, later blown up to 35 millimetres for commercial distribution—took 30 days. She was another four months editing it.

She didn't use up valuable time with rehearsals, but covered her shots by taking the same scene from several angles. . . .

"A more experienced director would likely know right off what angle they wanted to shoot a scene from, but I didn't want to finish shooting and find a scene would have worked better shot from a different angle and then have to call everybody back to reshoot it."

She recorded the dialogue simultaneously with the action and didn't re-record.

Looking back to the days of actually shooting the movie, Miss Spring says:

"I could make another movie about this period alone and the kinds of hassles we ran into—the highs and the lows . . . hugging everybody when a shot works well, screaming and crying when it doesn't.

"And the great discovery of what my role as 'director' really means—multifaceted juggler of a hundred different and often conflicting elements, personality conflicts . . . being an actor-technician-audience all in one."

Madeleine Is . . . opened in Toronto in late April, in Montreal a week later and in Vancouver in early May. The film also will be seen at this year's Cannes film festival.

Miss Spring, a native of Galt, Ont., started off her career with the CBC as a writer-researcher for Harry J. Boyle, now vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

She turned to films because "my ideas are a lot more visual than linear."

Madeleine Is . . . is an expanded version of a short film she made about two years ago and which won an award of merit in the 1969 Vancouver International Film Festival. It was on the basis of this film the feature-length version.

Miss Spring says there are two kinds of movies she would like to make in the future:

"Super, super realistic political films, like Z—relevant, real, candid, the kind that say something.

that the CFDC awarded her the $15,000 to make a start on

Ann Landers

Romeo Admits His Own Failings

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Almost everyone has heard the song, "If I Can't Be Near The One I Love I Love The One I'm Near." It describes me perfectly.

ANN LANDERS

The girl I really like lives a long way from here. I get to see her only during summer vacation. So this is my problem. Whenever I'm with a chick, it doesn't matter that she is the worst looking dog in the lake of Michigan — in three minutes I've got my arm around her, telling her she's the greatest thing since sliced bread.

I'm ashamed of myself because some of these girls are very decent and sincere and I get them to like me. If I don't call them back they feel hurt. It's sort of a dirty trick on my part.

Do you have a word of advice? — PORT HURON ROMEO.

DEAR ROMEO: I have no advice for you, Bub, but I have a word for the chicks: Somewhere in Michigan is a guy who by his own admission is a heel. Beware.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your column highlights the commonplace and often gives information that doesn't appear elsewhere. Please perform a service for families who are going through an illness crisis or are in mourning.

An act of kindness sometimes turns out to be a headache. Thoughtful friends and neighbors sometimes bring food in beautiful casseroles, granite crocks, on heirloom platters, covered cake plates, etc. The bereaved are often too exhausted and confused to remember who brought what. After a week or so, the pantry is filled with other people's china and silver — overwhelmingly.

Here are three suggestions for those who bring food to the home of distraught friends: (1) Use inexpensive plastic containers or paper plates. (2) If you want to bring food in a Spode bowl or on a sterling tray, tape your name on the back. (3) Don't wait for the bereaved to return the container. Go get it. — GRATEFUL BUT TIRED.

DEAR G.: In the 16 years I've been writing this column I cannot recall that these suggestions have ever been offered. Thank you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter has always been precocious. Beverly could read before she started to school and her memory was extraordinary at a very early age. She skipped the first grade and went directly into the second. That was three years ago. Now the teacher wants Bev to skip the sixth grade and go from the fifth to the seventh. I am against it. The girl would find herself in high school with students who are 2½ and 3 years older than she. (I forgot to mention that Bev was permitted to start school at age 4½.)

My husband feels I am depriving her of an opportunity — that she will be bored if she isn't challenged to learn. He also insists it would be an honor to graduate from high school at 14½. What is your opinion? — SUPER SMART CAN BE TROUBLE.

DEAR SU: This is an honor your daughter can live without. The social pressures on a girl who is three years younger than her classmates can produce serious problems.

Brilliance can be a curse if it is not properly channeled. Go to school and talk with the principal. Ask him if he can suggest ways to keep the girl intellectually stimulated without advancing her another grade.

Successful Living

An Item in Farmer's Almanac Suggests 'Live for Today'

By DORIS CLARK

Today is here. I will start with a smile, and resolve to be agreeable. I will not criticize. I refuse to waste my valuable time.

Today has one thing in which I know I am equal with others — time. All of us draw the same salary in seconds, minutes, hours.

Today I refuse to spend time worrying about what might happen. I am going to spend my time making things happen.

Today I begin by doing, and not wasting my time. In one week I will be miles beyond the person I am today.

Today I will not imagine what I would do if things were different. They are not. Different, I will make success with what material I have.

Today I will act toward other people as though this might be my last day on earth. I will not wait for tomorrow. To-morrow never comes. — Anon in Farmer's Almanac

* * *

Dear Doris: I am a widow, 58, and I would like to take vacationing families into my home, city people who would like a peaceful spot where they could fish or do nothing; sit in the shade and watch the beavers build their dams.

I am a good cook, and I would like to board young people or elderly folks, or couples with children. No sex-minded men friends.

Would I be getting into a lot of trouble? Where could I find out more? — Just Jo

Dear Jo: The whole idea is getting more popular. There is a Candian Farm Vacation Association which right now lists some 27 farms across Canada who will take in holiday visitors. Last year they had more than 600 guests.

The Association is looking for more farm holiday homes.

There is another project, operated by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, along the same lines. Write me for more details, enclosing a self - addressed envelope for reply.

* * *

Dear Doris: I'm 15 years old, medium height, brown hair and brown eyes. I'm a little shy, not that people notice much.

My problem is boys.

Sometimes I go to dances and I don't really enjoy myself. Nobody seems to want to talk to me. Sometimes boys ask to take me home, and I go out with them a couple of times, but that's it. I can't seem to hold them.

My girl friend seems to get all the boys she wants. So please could you tell me what I do wrong? — Boy Troubled.

Dear Troubled: Your time will come. The girl who gets and holds a boy, at 15, may find later that she has settled down too soon. One or two dates per boy — that's not so bad.

Keep looking nice, acting friendly, being a good listener, being helpful. You can't beat it for drawing the crowds eventually.

SPRING CLEANING SURPRISES

". . . where loveliness keeps house . . ." — Madison J. Cawein, (1865-1914).

* * *

"I'm old-fashioned, I might as well admit, in that, like Mother Nature, I wait 'til Spring to do my house-cleaning," says a housewife of our acquaintance.

"Of course," she continues, "we, Mother Nature and I, go about it differently; I use mops and dust cloths, while she relies on scavengers such as beetles, rats, skunks, crows (without which the earth would soon rot and reek.)

"But, I figure M.N. is far too thorough, knowing full-well where to find every leaf, bud and unfolding tulip, daffodil, crocus, apple and cherry blossom. She doesn't miss a thing, not a petal — and for that reason, I feel she misses a lot of fun — in the form of surprises. Look what turns up when I housecleam: the heirloom brooch I had thought I had lost — still on a dress I'd forgotten I had worn: the skirt I couldn't find — hidden under a worn-out coat. And my reading glasses! When else would I have moved the sofa where they were? Is that the springtime? Spring cleaning is like a treasure hunt. . ."

Do you agree?

We think of her words this morning and how comforting they are — we come upon a lost clipping (well hidden beath some papers). A spring cleaning surprise, indeed!

It was as if repossessing a precious gem . . . a poem written by an unknown Confederate soldier, which friends down through the years have shared with friends, finding comfort and healing in the simple words. We are told it is translated and distributed in many nations.

Because, for many, the past winter brought hardship and difficulties which will be long remembered, we feel, along with the new season we may present "A Creed for Those Who Have Suffered."

I asked God for strength, that I might achieve. . .
I was made weak, that I might be wise. . .
I asked for health, that I might do greater things. . .
I was given infirmity, that I might do better things.
I asked for riches, that I might be happy. . .
I was given poverty, that I might be wise.
I asked for power, that I might have the praise of men. . .
I was given weakness, that I might feel the need of God.
I asked for all things, that I might enjoy life. . .
I was given life, that I might enjoy all things.
I got nothing that I asked for — but everything I had hoped for.
Almost despite myself, my unspoken prayers were answered.
I am among all men, most richly blessed!

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Don't you dare sass me. I'll slap you if you talk back again. I'm sick of this arguing about everything I ask you to do. You act like a 2-year-old."

Mother: (calmly) "There's no point in talking until we both feel less angry. I've explained why the yard has to be raked, so let's not discuss it any further."

Don't let your child's actions trap you into acting immature. Children need quiet, firm discipline, not frantic, frustrated arguments. If you want them to achieve self-control, you must exercise it when they confront you.

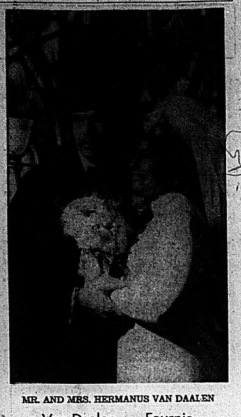
Reader Appreciates 'Fancy' Meat Recipes

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: Am faithfully giving your recipes in several scrapbooks. I was most interested in your Pork Hock recipe as I have used, through the years, my homemade sauerkraut, in a similar recipe. Also, I was intrigued with the recipe for tongue. Had not, over the years, realized what a delectable dish the tongue produce. Thank you, so much, for reviving this tasty dish. — Harriet I. P.



ANSWER: The word H.I.P that your initials spell bears out your savvy. Thanks for letting me know that the so-called "fancy" meats I have and will continue to test are welcome.

I have another recipe using chicken livers the way the Italians prepare them. I am hoping optimistically that this recipe will convert a good number of Canadians to the liver camp. Liver is good for you and you should serve and eat it once per week according to Canada's Food Rules. Mine were 49 cents per pound.

LIVERS ITALIENNE
(Breaded Chicken Livers)

1 lb. fresh chicken livers
¼ cup grated Parmesan or old Cheddar cheese or other hard cheese
½ cup fine bread or cracker crumbs
1½ tbsps. parsley flakes
½ to ¾ tsps. salt
Shake of pepper
1 cup spirit (clear) vinegar (or dry wine)
3 tbsps. margarine (or butter or bacon fat)

Pat livers dry with paper towels. Into shallow dish measure cheese, bread or cracker crumbs, parsley flakes, salt and pepper and mix well. Into another shallow dish measure vinegar (or wine). Dip the livers first in the vinegar then coat with crumb mixture and sauté quickly in bubbling margarine or butter or bacon fat until liver is just "set". Do not overcook. Sauté until barely cooked through. Serve at once. Lovely on top of fluffy boiled rice or moist mashed potatoes or buttered noodles. The latter is the Italian choice. H.I.P — I hope you try Livers Italienne.

Dish Rings Used For Serving Potatoes

The inscrutable looking gentleman with his hands in his kimona sleeves is part of the decoration on a dish ring, a set of evergreen napkin ring which was made in Dublin in 1770.

Dish rings have nothing to do with napkins, neither were they used by Irish families to serve potatoes. They were used, as the name implies, to support a dish.

The particular ring illustrated weighs about a pound although it is only about 4" high and about 8" in diameter. The current price in Dublin is close to $1,000.

It is hard to understand why the price should be that high, other than the astuteness of each dealer and the gullibility of the public. The ring is an excellent example of the silversmith's work, particularly as this one is pierced. The design is worked by a silversmith, then the blank portions are carefully sawn out and the edges finished.

The ring was used to hold a bowl, in this case probably Waterford crystal as a centrepiece for fruit or deserts. The ring was sometimes used with a burner for entree dishes, although this was uncommon.

Folk-lore about using it filled with mashed potatoes seems unlikely, particularly if the lady of the house had to clean it afterwards.

Dish rings are decorative and expensive. The market for them declined mid 19th century and they were replaced by silver plated casserole dishes in similar designs.

Dish rings were imitated in Sheffield fused plate; a very difficult operation as each cut section had to have the raw copper core coated with silver.

Dish rings are not common. They turn up at sales and either go for a fortune to a dealer or are remaindered because no one knows what they are for.

If the prices in Ireland remain constant, and dish rings seem to have originated there, the value of original Sheffield or even nickel silver copy will be astronomical. They represent an excellent investment and are usually just the right size to take a crystal bowl.

If selling, you should try a dealer in a major city who specializes in silver. Hallmarks are important. A harp will appear in most Irish hallmarks and is one clue to its origin.

Lawrence Does Not See Day When Drugs Control Children

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said Friday he cannot see the day when hyperactive children will be given tranquilizers by Ontario school teachers to keep them in line.

He made the comment to an Ontario legislature committee debating his department's estimates after fears concerning use of the drugs were expressed by Fred Burr (NDP—Sandwich-Riverdale) and George Bell (L—Toronto Humber).

Mr. Burr said there is a high incidence of the use of tranquilizers or amphetamines to control children in United States schools.

Mr. Lawrence said in dealing with hyperactive children in Ontario "the trend is to move diagnostic and medical services down the age scale to such areas as two or three so you do not get fixed characteristics."

Dr. N. I. Rae Grant, head of the government's special children's services branch, said amphetamines probably have been over-used but they do improve a child's concentration and ability to learn.

Mr. Burr said the New York Institute for Child Development has found that use of vitamins instead of the drugs has produced "very good results."

In other business:

—An acute shortage of psychiatrists has resulted because of controls over them by the medical profession, George Ben (L—Toronto Humber) said;

—Dr. N. I. Rae Grant told a legislature committee that some groups of emotionally disturbed children in the province are not being taken care of properly with present facilities;

—Education Minister Robert Welch said he would investigate a statement by Ray Haggerty (L—Welland South) that liquor licences had been granted to two schools in Caledonia and Hagersville;

—Dante De Monte (L—Toronto Dovercourt) said both sides in labor-management negotiations must have full authority to act and bargain or the whole process will fail;

—Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence denied charges that dental services available for mentally-retarded children in Ontario institutions;

—Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) said maintenance personnel at the government's Queen St. Mental health centre in Toronto are paid "literally starving" wages;

—Ontario Treasurer Danny McKeough said federal fiscal policies have left the provinces and municipalities little room to obtain capital on the Canadian market;

—Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, said Toronto nursing homes probably will continue to accept welfare patients despite a dispute over fees;

—Progressive Conservative backbencher John Smith, member for Hamilton Mountain, accused his own party of not doing enough to find summer jobs for Ontario students;

East Pakistan Border Villages Are Deserted

SOBROOM, India (AP) — On the western side of the Dani River, the villages in East Pakistan are destroyed and deserted.

On the eastern side of India, hundreds of thousands of refugees driven from their homes by the civil war in East Pakistan are packed into makeshift camps.

Sobroom and Ramgarh, just 100 yards across the river, both had populations of 5,000 until two months ago. Now Sobroom has about 20,000 residents, most of them refugees, and Ramgarh has almost no one left.

From March 25, when civil war broke out in East Pakistan, until May 2 Ramgarh was controlled by the followers of secessionist leader Sheik Mujibur Rahman. Then the Pakistani army moved in and, witnesses said, shelled the city and machine-gunned anyone who had not fled across the river.

Today, visitors to Sobroom see no sign of life in Ramgarh except for a few stray dogs and an occasional soldier on patrol.

Indian and foreign reporters taken on a three-day tour of refugee camps saw similar overcrowding at Petrapole on the other side of East Pakistan about 60 miles northwest of Calcutta.

By official Indian estimates, which a visiting United Nations team said it would accept, about 2.6 million East Pakistanis have entered four Indian border states in the last seven weeks, causing social and economic problems that appear to defy solution at the moment.

Officials have expressed concern that communal violence might erupt between Hindu and Moslems within the 300 relief camps.

Friction also is developing between local Indians and the refugees.

The Indian government has expressed deep disappointment with what it describes as "totally inadequate" assistance from other countries for caring for the refugees.

"No prosperous country has come to the aid of the refugees," Prime Minister Indira Gandhi told a public meeting this week.

"The whole burden has fallen on India, which is already overburdened with her own problems."

The best solution, both the Indian government and a UN team that toured the refugee camps say, would be the repatriation of the East Pakistanis.

But there is no way India can force the refugees back, officials concede, and there is no sign that East Pakistan will take them back.

NDP Candidate Sacrifices Beard

BRANTFORD (CP) — Derek Blackburn, New Democratic Party candidate in the May 31 Brant riding federal byelection, tends to rationalize the beard he shaved off in terms of votes he's salvaged.

"You can lose 30 per cent of your votes with a beard in this district," the clean-shaven 36-year-old history teacher said in lamenting the recent loss of his chin whiskers.

It's just another indication that the NDP — traditionally strong in byelection fights — has pulled out all stops in efforts to score its first-ever electoral triumph in the south western Ontario constituency.

Fischer Three Up

VANCOUVER (CP) Bobby Fischer of the United States took a 3-0 lead Friday against Mark Taimanov of the Soviet Union in their quarter-final elimination round to determine a challenger for the world chess champion.

Harkness Believes Russians Using Canada Against NATO

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Donald Macdonald exchanged salvos with a Conservative predecessor in Commons debate Friday about the wisdom of Canada's friendly overtures towards the Soviet Union.

Douglas Harkness, defence minister between 1960 and early 1963 during the Diefenbaker government, said he believes that the Russians are using Canada to weaken the NATO alliance.

The Soviet Union, he said, still wants to spread communism throughout the world and is the only real threat to the security of Canada and the Western bloc.

Canada's "cozying up" to the Russians could have far-reaching effects on defence arrangements and Canada's national security.

"This whole business of the agreement with the Russians and so on causes one to believe that what Russia is doing is using this as a means of weakening NATO, which has always been one of her long-term objectives."

Mr. Macdonald, debating defence policy in the Commons for the first time since he was appointed minister last September, mockingly called Mr. Harkness's speech "a first-class flashback to vintage 1950 cold-war days."

While Mr. Harkness obviously didn't think the West had anything to gain from opening negotiations with the Soviet Union, others did.

They included: U.S. President Richard Nixon, West German Chancellor Willy Brant, and the command of NATO itself.

Mr. Macdonald told Mr. Harkness that not everybody had stuck to his cold-war position.

"Flashing back to the honorable member's vintage 1950s speech, it will be recalled that Richard Nixon at that time was exactly a flaming left-winger."

Mr. Nixon announced Thursday what he called a "significant development" in breaking the deadlock in nuclear arms talks between the U.S. and the Soviet Union—the negotiation over both offensive and defensive weapons.

The Russians had been insisting on limiting the SALT talks to defensive weapons systems.

The day before Prime Minister Trudeau had signed an agreement on his tour of the Soviet Union that is designed to tighten relations between the two countries.

Mr. Harkness said Canada didn't have much to learn from a country that was "keeping the Middle East conflict alive" and "holding down the population of Eastern Europe."

The indications were that the Soviet Union was less interested in detente than in expanding its power and influence.

The exchange was the highlight of the opposition day debate based on a motion by Conservative Defence Critic Michael Forrestall. The motion said the government is downgrading the armed forces and prompting Canada's allies to question its credibility.

The basic consideration that the government must keep in mind when preparing its defence white paper, he said, is that a threat still exists.

It would be dangerous to develop a defence policy on the basis of what enemies it felt it could set aside for defence, rather than on the realization that Canada needed the strength to counter such a threat.

Although Mr. Forrestall made several references to the threat, he didn't define its nature.

He said Canada's per capita expenditure on defence is $88, compared to the U.S. per capita cost of $300.

This showed "the contribution being made by the United States military forces to world peace. . . ."

While there might be "ample wisdom" in the white paper reflecting "what appears to be the clear national will against expanding defence forces at this time," he hoped that the forces would not be so restricted as to lessen their credibility in the eyes of Canadians and their allies.

"I hope the government fully understands that reductions and continuation of the budget freeze . . . erode even further the shaky morale of the armed forces."

Ed Schreyer Favors Wage, Price Controls

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One provincial premier, Ed Schreyer of Manitoba, has come out for price and wage regulation as a means of fighting unemployment.

Discussions of the plight of the jobless were heard in the three legislatures Friday. Ontario and Quebec members concentrated on summer jobs for students.

Mr. Schreyer said the west decade will bring public acceptance in Canada of wage and price control, away from a "boom or bust" economy marked by inflation or unemployment.

To try to fight inflation by creating unemployment is "the only cruel but ineffective" the NDP premier told the Manitoba house.

Grieving Horse Jumps to Death

CAIRO (Reuter) — A desert horse grieving at the death of his Bedouin master committed suicide by climbing a hill and leaping to his death on the rocks below, the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said, today.

The horse's mother died shortly after he was born four years ago, and he developed a especially affectionate relationship with his nomad owner, the newspaper said.

When his master, Kaliyya El-Zastary, fell ill, the horse stood continually outside his owner's tent, and after El-Zastary died he climbed the hill and jumped off, Al Ahram said.

KILLING YOURSELF

STOP

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Age 40 Is Often Too Late For Complete Examination

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Am I inviting trouble by having a check up at the age of 33? I'm doing so to please my wife. I feel fine. I thought that wailing until 40 would be time enough. — Mr. B.

• • •

Traditionally, age 40 has been considered the dividing line between youth and age. Many will admit that the 40th birthday has a psychological impact on most people. Suddenly they feel ancient.

However, I believe age 40 is too late in many instances for having a complete physical. Examinations beginning at age 30 make better sense in preventing disease from taking a strong grip on the unsuspecting.

Why wait until 40 or later, when diabetes may already have been present for years? Or, for gradually increasing hypertension? Or for emphysema or lung cancer? Or for the silent and insidious inroads of atherosclerosis which thickens and weakens the blood vessels of heart and brain?

Not forgetting kidneys, liver, eyes and all the rest. So many believe that coronary disease, for example, doesn't begin until after 40, but in some persons it may take hold in their 20s.

And so with many other killers. They come on padded feet. The time to handcuff them is in the beginning.

Another reason why early and periodic examinations are important is this: The doctor may influence you to give up harmful habits, like smoking, overdrinking, over-eating, over- or under-exercising, overworking, undersleeping.

People are funny. We may know we are doing wrong, but won't quit 'Until the doctor convinces us to give up what we already know is bad for us. You will not be inviting trouble, Mr. B. You'll be preventing it.

• • •

For Mrs. O.: I wish I knew what actually causes cold sores. They are due to some elusive virus infection, and produce what is commonly known to the medical profession as "herpes simplex".

Since your own outbreaks of sores commonly occur on exposed lips in the summertime — and you admit to being a "sun-bug" — why not try protecting your lips from direct sunlight by wearing a wide hat and using protective ointments?

Sometimes there are other contributing causes like fever, foods, drugs, physical or emotional stress. Meanwhile, concentrate on getting less of the sun's rays.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My wife had a gallbladder operation about three years a go. She is still having the same symptoms of bloating and gas that she had before surgery. The doctors tell her it is "nerves". Any suggestions? — Mr. U.

Comment: I have a friend who is a fine general surgeon. He always warns his gallbladder patients that operation will not "guarantee" the removal of all symptoms of indigestion. He does so because he recognizes that some people have emotional problems which produce symptoms.

Removing a gallbladder filled with stones is not always comfort. Most people feel wonderful after operation; but only postoperative results will tell which is which.

I suggest that your wife be under the care of a sympathetic family doctor or internist who understands these things.

• • •

For Miss N.: Every woman over 18 should if possible have a yearly examination of the uterine cervix, including a Pap test.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscopes

For May 23

Your birthday today: Today begins a campaign in which you strive to gather resources for later major projects yet to be determined. Aside from this, the year promises normal growth and development. Today's natives are resourceful, fond of very precise work with all data and figures in order.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Take part in your community's weekend customs. Make a credit to renew acquaintances, return favors.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): There's a new idea in some of the neighborhood discussions. Willingly do your share. Perhaps a collector or hobbyist appears who fancies something which, for you, is a white elephant.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Enjoy yourself observing differences in opinions rather than get into squabbles. Then you help smooth over matters for others. If you must attend to any serious business, get done early.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Come to the point, say what you will do and what you will not do. Then make a full day of social amenities, renewing old connections, visiting or inviting.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): News of distant events is incomplete, possibly misleading from lack of content. Leave idleness for very late hours.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Children, younger people in general, claim your attention as you follow Sunday customs. Make notes of any changes in your surroundings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Finally a long wanted travel or change may come to reality. Shared nostalgia of itself offers something special.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your thinking on money and its management comes in sharp and clear. Guided by inner wisdom, the goal is not to pile up excess but to make progress at an efficient rate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Avoid formal or legal maneuvers for the moment, wherever you can. Home situations due to monthly withdrawal demands or sudden changes of ideas—tact and forbearance are needed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): It's an excellent Sunday for putting scattered people and things into reasonable contact with each other.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): This is a specialists' day—do your best in your technical field and stay active for a full mental workout.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Local history is apt to override individual plans; factors you cannot control turn out strongly.

For May 24

Your birthday today: You explore the ins and outs of success in an unbraver new world neither you nor your elders intended to build. New problems abound and your destiny is to find at least some small part of a workable solution, through personal experience and examples, right in your own neighborhood. Today's natives tend toward generosity and keen intuitive faculties. Many have latent gifts as magnetic healers.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): It's troubleshooting day on nearly all jobs; incidents of the weekend must be reviewed, smoothed out. New business has to wait until you clear things up.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You can't hold back the tides of growth. Go along with them, make the most of flowing energy, get a better perspective.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): No single skill is enough to get you by in a confusing, but exciting day. Employ what you are sure of, guess where you must, and go ahead.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): To get this lively week started you will need materials, information beyond what is usual. Search for better tools.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): The most natural thing is to expand, improve on traditional customs, so long as what you do remains within the bounds of good taste and common sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): If you have done your homework, have a thorough grasp of your subject with facts and figures ready, though you may not use them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Take the centre of the stage gracefully; use every minute to attract attention o your goals. An expansive soft sell works better than a narrow, specific demand.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Nothing worth having is gained without hard work, responsibility, persistence — and luck, which sometimes seems to be destiny. Open your mind to fresh outlook.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Sales talk goes well; be sure it's yours rather than somebody selling you more than you need. First, start earlier than most; next keep going.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): No issue can be forced with any success, either in your favor or against you. Let things drift while factors reshape, then act where your persuasive talents find their best use.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your work needs deeper emotional thrust to make it convincing. Give, for later rewards. Tonight your unconscious mind adds today's lessons to previous experience for tomorrow's insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Plans turn aside from the intended goals. When you are sure of how things are going, switch directions.

For May 25

Your birthday today: You begin what can be a "fun" year of excitement and unsettled conditions for which you seldom find an answer that works for more than a short period. A youthful spigot and the choices you have already made count. Intellectual and communication arts and techniques are heavily featured. Today's natives are nearly always swift and decisive in their movements, versatile in artistic talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Much with little to recommend it has to be done in order to get at the important things. Modest, unfinished business turns out to be of value.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Where you have a complaint, seek the appropriate place and make it formal. Get matters straightened out as soon as you can. Routines of daily living are put aside for the moment but regained shortly.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Everybody needs considerations, a chance to be heard; answers to questions. Pooling forces offers facility to clear up complications.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): True feelings have to show somewhere if you are to fulfill your highest expression. Find a symbolic way of letting loved ones know what they are in your life.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): The temptation is to spend money to create favorable impressions; be sure to buy things that look fancy at first. Every friend who uses or distributes money has a different idea.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Somewhere along the line, you have left behind people who need to convince. Get back to them with basic questions and answers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Discussions, rumors, news fly from all quarters. In the midst of all this you have something to do that is important, at least to you, probably to others as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Let your intuition guide you away from needless complexities, time-wasting people. Those sound more desperate than those who want and can use help.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Co-operation offered to those who need it but are not sure of how to ask for it can be an achievement. Where it is accepted, deal yourself in for a share of their program.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Bring positive thoughts to bear on today's moods and tensions. You may have to turn not only your own wheels but, for a while, those of others near you, just to get things moving again.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): New information needs to be taken into account — look and listen. Test theories against reality before going on to project them as settled fact.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Personal concerns, relatives the needs of vocational associates slow progress, hinder any travel effort. Take your time even when starting late, avoid carelessness and thus be sure of reasonable achievement.

City, School Trade Proposed

Conditional on city council approval, the Belleville Parks Board and the Hastings County Board of Education will enter into a land swap deal.

The proposal is for Parks board to exchange 6.1 acres of park land in the north West Park Village area for the East Belleville Playgrounds on East Bridge Street now owned by the school board.

The West Park Village property would be intended as a future school site in the fast-developing area west of Sidney Street in the northwest section of the city.

At the same time, the exchange would assure continued use of the East Hill site at the corner of Bridge Street and Bleecker Ave., as a playground and greenbelt area. The playground site comprises about 3.7 acres.

Board discussions on the proposal have been going on for some months with the parks board giving its approval at last week's meeting.

The parks board recommendation passes the proposal along to city council for approval.

Oldest Jail Future Cloudy

TWEED (Special)—Tweed's tourist information booth, housed in North America's Smallest Jailhouse, may be a victim of last winter's unusually heavy snowfall.

One of the worst snowstorms of the season all but put an end to the 1971 Winter Carnival in Tweed, and proceeds of the carnival have been used in the past to cover operating costs of the information booth. Land O'Lakes and the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Regions have also assisted.

Last year the operation of the booth cost more than $1,000 and provided part-time work for three local girls.

A meeting will be held next week to discuss operating the booth on a reduced schedule from past years, employing two girls instead of three. It is proposed to open the booth during weekday afternoons and all day on Fridays and Saturdays. It would be closed Sundays.

48th Highlanders Plan Reunion

The 48th Highlanders of Canada are looking for names of members of the regiment to join them in celebrating the 80th anniversary of the unit.

All those who served in wartime or with the militia unit are invited to a reunion on May 28, 29 and 30. One of the highlights will be a full-scale military tattoo May 28 in Maple Leaf Gardens. The 48th staged the first military tattoo ever attempted by a Canadian militia unit two years ago.

A regimental dinner will take place May 29 and a memorial service May 30.

Inquiries should be directed to Sgt. Jimmy Brannan at the 48th Highlanders of Canada Association, 519 Church St., Toronto.

Heart Fund Gets Cheque

Proceeds from the Four Seasons Hotel's opening night, April 14, were officially presented yesterday.

At a luncheon ceremony, Christopher Cornwall, manager of the Four Seasons, presented Archie Lewis, chairman of the Belleville chapter, with a cheque in the amount of $1,257.

Favorable Position

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — Nova Scotia marketed 107,000 hogs in 1970 with 68.4 per cent leaning 102, a ratio that is 24.2 per cent above the Canadian average, Don Cox, livestock specialist with the Nova Scotia department of agriculture, says it is for such high-quality reasons that the province's hog producers are in a favorable position to make profits on a low market price as compared with other areas.

Knudson Finds Putting Mark

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — George Knudson found the mark with a new putter Friday to take a one-stroke lead after two rounds in the $125,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tournament.

The Toronto golfer shaved a stroke from par for a 69 and a 36-hole total of 136, one better than Jack Montgomery, a Fort Worth native seeking his first professional victory in six years on the tour.

Lee Trevino was two strokes back with a 68 and 138, followed by Dave Stockton and Jerry McGee, each with 139. McGee stroked a 68 and Stockton a 70.

Defending champion Homero Blancas, who led with Knudson after the first round, dropped back to a 73 for 140.

South African Gary Player was par Thursday for 140, one stroke ahead of WSF Homemuik of Winnipeg who shot a 74.

Billy Casper ballooned to a 75 for 148, the cutoff figure for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

"There's a sight-line on it and that helps me line it up much better," said Knudson, who has won only a little more than $9,000 in 12 tournaments this year.

"I've been using it for two weeks now and I've had a lot of practice with it — like 49 times a day every round last week."

Knudson, winner of seven United States tour titles plus four more in the Caribbean, said improved health has contributed to his strong showing. He said he had been bothered with back problems "until about three weeks ago."

While Trevino and other players complained about the wind that gusted to 25 miles an hour at Colonial Country Club course, a 7,142-yard, par-70 layout, Knudson said it didn't bother him.

"Naw," said Knudson. "It wasn't really all that bad. . . . I played much better than yesterday. The only bad shot was my tee shot at 10."

At the 10th hole, Knudson went over par, driving "into the jungle on the right" and coming up short of the green.

That put him two over for the day but he rolled in a 35-foot putt on the 12th, then got back par with an eight-foot putt on the 15th and grabbed the lead when he lashed a nine-iron 10 feet from the flag on the final hole and made the putt.

Stargell Stymies Montreal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

John O'Donoghue came out of the Montreal bullpen throwing strikes to Willie Stargell.

He should have quit while he was ahead.

Stargell, batting against O'Donoghue with two on in the 13th inning Friday night, fouled off eight consecutive pitches, then struck back with his 14th home run of the season, sending Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-2 victory over the Expos.

The victory, fifth for the Pirates in their last six games, kept them one jump ahead of New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals in the National League East.

The Mets trimmed Atlanta Braves 6-2 behind fireballer Nolan Ryan and the Cardinals bounced back from an 8-3 deficit to bomb San Diego Padres 15-8.

Houston Astros ambushed San Francisco Giants 4-1; Cincinnati Reds topped Philadelphia Phillies 7-3 and Los Angeles Dodgers swamped Chicago Cubs 8-1 in other NL games.

Stargell, who had been out of the starting lineup since last Saturday with an injured right hand, singled in the seventh inning before Bob Robertson's home run gave Pittsburgh a 2-1 lead.

But the Expos tied it in the ninth on Boots Day's run-scoring single. The deadlock stood until the 13th, when Vic Davalillo and Roberto Clemente stroked one-out singles off Howie Reed. O'Donoghue, a left-hander, then was brought in to face the lefthand-hitting Stargell.

Their duel ended with Stargell pounding an 0-2 pitch over the centre field fence for a 5-2 Pittsburgh lead. The Pirates added a wrapup run on an error, a walk and Manny Sanguillen's single.

For Stargell, who set an all-time record with 11 homers in April, the swat was his first since May 7, when he connected at Los Angeles. He sat out six of the Pirates' previous 11 games and appeared only as a pinch-hitter in another.

Despite the layoff, the brawny outfielder leads the majors with 36 runs batted in, shares the home-run lead with Atlanta slugger Hank Aaron and has a .320 batting average—10th highest in the National League.

Aaron drilled his 16th homer and two singles, but the Braves managed only one other hit off fireballer Nolan Ryan, who ended a five-game Met tailspin despite a typical streak of wildness.

Ryan struck out seven batters, but walked five, hit three and threw two wild pitches before departing with two out and the bases loaded in the ninth. Danny Frisella retired Orlando Cepeda on a fly to the mound for the final out, saving Ryan's first career victory over Atlanta.

Jose Cardenal, Joe Torre and Matty Alou divided nine of St. Louis' 15 hits, Cardenal and Torre each smacking a three-run homer and Alou tagging two run-producing doubles, as the Cardinals roared from behind against San Diego.

Dave Concepcion cracked his first home run and first double of the season, good for three RBIs, and sent another run home with a sacrifice fly to lead the Reds past Philadelphia.

Jim Bunning was tagged with his seventh loss in nine decisions, but struck out two Reds to move within two of Cy Young's lifetime total of 2,819, second on the all-time list to Walter Johnson's 3,508.

Larry Dierker stopped the Giants with ninth-inning relief help from Fred Gladding for his seventh victory against one loss and Norm Miller keyed the Astros' attack with a tie-breaking two-run double in the fourth.

Willie Davis and Jim Lefebvre smacked two-run singles for the Dodgers in the third inning and Wes Parker's two-run double keyed a three-run seventh, enabling southpaw Claude Osteen to breeze to his sixth win in eight decisions.

Angel Wears Halo

Tom Bradley turned on his former California Angels teammates Friday night with a five-hit shutout and pitched Chicago White Sox to a 3-0 victory.

The 23-year-old right-hander spent the first two years of his professional career in the Angels' organization, including a goodly portion of 1970 at Hawaii, where he came under the Juan Pizarro-Jim Coates-Dennis Bennes tutoring triumvirate.

"I've learned something from all three," Bradley said of the ex-major league hurlers. "Pizarro taught me composure on the mound and how to avoid getting upset when the going gets rough. Coates taught me an aggressive mental outlook—how to get up mentally for a game. And Bennett helped me on pooping batters, how to pitch to them and get them out."

It was old home week at Anaheim Stadium and a crew of ex-Angels came back to haunt the Californians. Besides Bradley's strong pitching, Tom Egan cracked a home run, Rick Reichardt rapped two singles and Chuck Tanner, who skippered Hawaii last season, managed it all.

Bill Melton, who never played for the Angels but who lives in California, belied a two-run homer for Chicago's first tallies.

It was the third shutout of the season for Bradley, 3-2, and lowered his earned-run average to 1.27.

The Red Sox blew a two-run lead in the ninth but erupted for four in the 10th to beat Baltimore and take a four-game lead over the defending world champion Orioles in the AL East.

Two homers by Duane Josephson and one each by Carl Yastrzemski and Billy Conigliaro gave the Red Sox a 4-2 lead and Jim Lonborg, just back from the minors, was one out away from the first complete game in almost two years.

But with two out in the ninth, Brooks Robinson, who homered for Baltimore's first two runs, singled and scored on Dave Johnson's double. Two walks and a wild pitch tied the score.

An error by shortstop Chico Salmon put Boston in business in the 10th. Reggie Smith singled and, after Yastrzemski fouled out, Rico Petrocelli doubled the lead run across. Josephson lashed a two-run single and Doug Griffin's single accounted for the final run.

Bert Blyleven hurled a four-hitter and batterymate George Mitterwald slammed two homers to pace the Twins over the Athletics. Rookie Steve Braun also homered for Minnesota while a sixth-inning shot by Bert Campaneris cost Blyleven his shutout.

Dean Chance, who had lost his first six decisions, hurled three-hit ball for 7 2-3 innings before giving way to Fred Scherman, who protected the slim lead as the Tigers made it three straight wins for the first time this season. Fifth-inning doubles by Dalton Jones and Eddie Brinkman off Jerry Janeski produced the game's only run.

'He Ain't Heavy'

Toronto Argonauts Peter Palmer who weighs in at 220 pounds carries a lot of weight on his back as he carries 225-pound Bob Grimm up the stands of the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium in Toronto Wednesday. This was one of the exercises performed by players at an Argo workout.

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Stormy Dave Hill purposely signed an incorrect scorecard and was disqualified from the Colonial National Invitational golf tournament Friday. Hill, centre of several major controversies in recent years, faces a possible fine of $150 for his actions. He had no chance of making the cut for the final two rounds today and Sunday. He had an opening-round 77, then his scorer, Dick Lotz, marked down a six for Hill's score on the final hole. Hill changed it to a two and signed for it, giving him a second-round 81 when his score should have been 85.

Controversy Dominates Weekend Junior A Hockey Meeting

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian Amateur Hockey Association meetings in recent years have been dominated by controversy and this year's annual session shouldn't be any different.

Delegates to the week-long meetings in Thunder Bay, which begin with closed sessions this weekend, will have problems from every level of hockey from minor to international.

Several of the subjects on the agenda have been discussed openly during the past month.

Some junior leagues dislike the tier system; the western seniors are opposed to the tournament idea; the midgets may propose a national tournament; the colleges want to compete in the Lake Placid N.Y. competition, and above it all is the international situation.

But the most controversial discussion could centre around the Memorial Cup, won this year by Quebec Remparts in a best-of-three playoff with Edmonton Oil Kings.

Members of the Ontario Hockey Association, one of the three tier One leagues in Canada, plan to voice their opinion concerning the playing of the series at a special session of the tier one executives Sunday night.

OHA president Clarence Tillsbury said last week the Memorial Cup question "is sure as hell going to be an interesting question to bring up at Thunder Bay."And I'm going to bring it up."

Earl Dawson, president of the CAHA, said in Winnipeg Friday the representatives of the OAH the Quebec Junior Hockey League and the Western Canada Hockey League will meet at a special session Sunday and "we hope to settle some of the problems then."

The OHA and the QJHL had agreed during the season not to play against teams in the WCHL because the western clubs received a $10,000 travel allowance, $5,000 more than the eastern teams, and were allowed to use four over-age juniors each.

But when St. Catharines Black Hawks refused to complete the Ontario-Quebec series against Quebec City, the QJHL said they'd play the western champions. Remparts won the series in two straight games.

Dawson said the subject of St. Catharines' withdrawal from the series after five games will also be a major topic of discussion.

The Hawks refused to go back to Quebec City, saying they feared for their lives after the coach and one player apparently received threatening phone calls.

If he=CAHA didn't have enough problems with junior hockey, the Tier Two league in Alberta and Manitoba have said they'll propose the tier system introduced just one year ago, be eliminated and all junior clubs be eligible for the Memorial Cup.

There's also the touchy subject of junior drafts, a ruling that sent the CAHA into the court rooms this season.

With the introduction of the two tiers, the Tier One teams were made eligible to draft from Tier Two clubs two players, with no team losing more than two in the draft.

Eastern Canada was quiet but in the West trouble arose on at least two fronts with Dauphin Kings of the MJHL taking the CAHA into court over the drafting by Brandon Wheat Kings of Ron Chipperfield. The Wheat Kings ended up with Chipperfield.

Red Deer Rustlers of the AJHL complained bitterly over the loss of three players, but in the end they still came out the best Tier Two club in the country.

The senior hockey clubs of Western Canada are expected to push for the abandonment of the tournament which this year declared the western representatives in the Allan Cup.

Other subjects coming up will be the question of budgets, rule changes, the Canada Winter Games at Saskatoon which left CAHA officials not entirely happy, the 1972 playoffs and the coaches and referees development program.

Then there's Hockey Canada, the defunct nationals and the international situation.

Dawson says there's an application calling for a complete review of the CAHA policy of boycotting all international competition.

"In some ways part of the policy is a negative policy," Dawson said, "because we may be hurting some countries who aren't competing in international hockey.

"I think we're winning the battle," he said. "I don't think Canadian people are really demanding international competition in Canada but are asking that we consider that we're not hurting our friends overseas. By friends I mean those countries we know support our stand and have voted in our favor."

Dawson said it's important Canadians stand together on the policy but in the same time realize that some exceptions should be made.

"How does keeping nine-year-olds out of Finland help us?" Dawson asks, explaining that the CAHA did not suspend the Ontario team that went against the ruling of the Toronto Minor Hockey Association and played in Finland anyway.

For the first time in three years the CAHA "will have to elect a new president, with Dawson rejecting an offer to retain his position for a fourth term.

"It's a healthy situation at present," he said, "we have a lot of bright, young men waiting and it's not healthy to keep them down.

"There should be a change every two or three years. The president runs out of ideas."

Canonero Knocks on Triple Crown Door

BALTIMORE (AP) — Canonero —, knocking on the door of thoroughbred racing's elusive Triple Crown, is in his owner's eyes "truly a horse of the people."

While this Kentucky-bred colt came by way of another continent to capture the Kentucky Derby and Preakness and earn a chance at the Belmont on June 5, there is another dimension to the story that owner Don Pedro Batista is savoring.

"We have come up here—two Indians and a black—with a horse that nobody believed in and we're destroying 300 years of American racing tradition dominated by the flower and the cream of your society," said the slightly overweight 44-year-old Venezuelan industrialist.

"This is a monumental event for international relations. You can't imagine the impact this has had in Venezuela. Canonero II is truly a horse of the people, something the people can identify with."

To sell Canonero II—and the owner reports the offers are as high as $5 million—could bring the ill will of many fans in Venezuela.

Lacrosse Grows Fastest

TORONTO (CP) — Bryan Davies, registrar for the Ontario Minor Lacrosse Association, says his game is the province's fastest-growing sport.

"There are house leagues in just about every town in Ontario from Kapuskasing in the north to Windsor in the southwest.

"About the only area where there isn't any lacrosse is in the Thunder Bay area and that will soon change as we plan to hold clinics there."

Lacrosse, an outgrowth of an old Indian game, has become a popular Canadian sport in that it provides a summer replacement for hockey.

Marshall Spence of Port Credit, an association director, said:

"There isn't any doubt that lacrosse is prospering.

"I'm still connected with baseball and softball and I have been a umpire in semi-pro," said Spence, who conducts lacrosse clinics across the province.

"The thing I find out with lacrosse is this: if sad is not a good athlete, in baseball or softball, he comes up to bat maybe once. Then he sits on the bench. We have rules in lacrosse that he has to play five minutes of every period.

"The phobia of win-at-all-cost that has come over hockey has not touched lacrosse. I know because I'm still connected with hockey."

Spence said roughness in lacrosse was as common place as in hockey.

However, he added:

"I've been a referee in the Ontario Rugby Football Union, the Ontario Hockey Association and the OLA.

"Football, in my mind, is the roughest. It leads to the most injuries. Lacrosse is no rougher than hockey.

"In my experience, I have never seen as bad an injury in lacrosse as in hockey.

"A great deal of roughness has been taken out of the game through th education of referees. Actually, although lacrosse is a tough, virile game, it is not as rough as it looks. Those stick-checks you see which seem to be landing on arms and backs are really hitting players on their padding."

Spence says players seldom receive shin, knee or hip injuries.

Clinics to instruct Ontario players are partially financed by the Ontario government.

Some observers have said that the popularity of the sport shows a determination by parents to keep their children in a competitive, physical sport during the summer months.

Spence, optimistic about the outcome of the game, said:

"One thing I have learned, the better the players the cleaner the game.

"When four or five players try to scoop up the ball and can't, they show their lack of skill by doing something illegal. This we will stop."

TORONTO (CP) — In a sweeping move aimed at wiping out incurable swamp fever, the Canadian Trotting Association ruled Friday that standardbred preercises must be tested by federal authorities every six months.

Those testing positive must be destroyed or quarantined indefinitely.

The CTA has jurisdiction over all Canadian raceways except those in the Atlantic Provinces.

"Standardbred racehorses showing positive reaction to the swamp fever—equine infectious anemia—tests being done by the federal department of agriculture laboratory, will not be stabled on the grounds, or permitted to race at any member track after Aug. 1," the CTA announced in a news release.

By June 1, all tracks under CTA jurisdiction must withhold all money intended for the claiming of horses until such time as the claimed animal has tested negative. For animals tested positive the claim action is void.

Dr. Roland Armitage of Dunrobin, Ont., president of the Standardbred Horse Society which conducts annual sales in Toronto, said earlier no animals tested positive would be offered for sale.

Dr. Robert Avery of the federal laboratory in Hull, Que., in tests on 4,244 standardbred race and breeding horses conducted up to two weeks ago, found 415 animals testing positive.

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — George Knudson of Toronto, using a new-style flying saucer putter, rallied for a 69 and sole control of the second round lead in the $125,000 Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament Friday.

The 33-year-old tour regular for 11 years had a 36-hole total of 136, four under par after two rounds over the tough Colonial Country Club course, a 7,142-yard, par-70 layout.

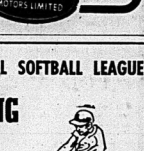
Knudson held a one-stroke lead over Jack Montgomery, a Fort Worth native seeking his first professional victory in six years on the PGA tour.

Montgomery, in the last group to tee off under cloudy, threatening skies, had a 68 for 137.

Lee Trevino was just two strokes back at 138.

Tied at 139 were former PGA champion Dave Stockton and Jerry McGee.

Defending champion Homero Blancas, co-leader with Knudson at the end of 18 holes, slipped to a 73 for 140.



He was tied with Ron Cerrudo, Gene Littler and Fred Marti at 72.

South African Gary player matched par 70 for 143. Masters back with a 72 for 146 and Billy Casper took a flat 75 for 148, the cutoff figure for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Dancer Carries Albatross

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Anything can happen in a horse race, they say, but if Albatross doesn't win the $114,907 Messenger Stakes at Roosevelt Raceway tonight it will be an upset as startling as the defeat of Native Dancer in the 1953 Kentucky Derby.

In fact the Messenger is being billed as the Kentucky Derby of pacing since it is the first event this year of the 1971 pacing triple crown.

Stanley Dancer, who won the triple crown last year with Most Happy Fella, will drive the 3-year-old Albatross out of post No. 5 for the mile race.

A son of Meadow Skipper-Voodoo Hanover, Albatross is owned by Bert James of Pittsburgh and has been syndicated for $1,250,000.

Nansemond, with Herve Filion of Angers, Que., in the sulky, again will test Albatross and is the 4-1 second choice out of the No. 7 post.

Rounding out the field are Tarport Skipper, beaten favorite in the other Messenger Trial, Seton Hanover, Springfield, Jake Jackson, Local Time and Jolly Roger, an entry with Albatross.

Trackster Sweeps Clean

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — A 14-year-old athlete from Toronto swept six of the seven senior lower-school events Friday at the 81st annual Ridley College sports day to finish with 33 of a possible 35 points.

Michael Fox won the 100-, 220-, 440, 120-yard hurdles, high jump and long jump and was second to Don McKeheny of Grand Island, N.Y., in the 880.

The upper-school senior title went to John Frederick of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., who edged Ian Rountkwatie of Sarnia, 17 points to 16.

Bob McClelland of King City won the intermediate championship with 26 points followed by Charlie Christie of Burlington, Vt., with 24 while Larry Cooper of Toronto won the junior championship with 25 points, including victories in the 220-, 440, half-mile and mile events.

Jim Greenshields of Toronto took the junior lower-school title with 11 points over Graham Fowle of Bermuda and Eric Shaw of Toronto who each had 10.

Brian Turner and Rick Culkin are two of the sluggers who will carry the CJBQ Expo colors into the Belleville Minor Baseball Association wars this season. Culkin and Turner along with bantam house league teammates George Bongard and Brian Hamilton (top left) and bat boy Mark Pearson (bottom left) will sport sweaters and caps supplied by the Belleville radio station courtesy of the Montreal Expos, Canada's only major league baseball team supplied 15 of the red, white and blue jerseys while CJBQ contributed the Expo baseball caps.

Chevelle

Wondering when to test-drive mid-size Chevelle? There are lots of reasons to do it right away.

Chevelle lets you feel good when you're driving. The mid-size wheelbase (116-in. for sedans, 112-in. for coupes) handles nicely whether you're downtown or on the highway. Chevelle is styled with the fresh, young design that has made it so popular in the past. The new rear bumper has built-in taillights. And there's a restyled front grille and bumper, too.

Some of the holdovers from last year bear repeating, too. Rubber bushings on the engine mounts cut down on vibration and noise. The Full Coil suspension system features computer selected springs that are matched to the weight and equipment of the car. Flush-and-dry rocker panels let water flow through to clean dirt and corrosion-causing salt out, then air comes through to dry the water up and prevent rust. All in all, your Chevelle will last longer. And drive better.

But none of this is possible without your Chevrolet dealer. He's the one with the cars. There's the Sporty Malibu series, including a convertible for summer fun. The economical Chevelle series. And there are four mid-size wagons to choose from. Chevelle gives you more for your money. And your Chevy dealer is going to go a long way towards giving you the deal you want. Go see him about it. And take Chevelle out for a drive. You'll see what we mean.

Chevrolet. Putting you first keeps us first.

Some of the equipment illustrated is optional at extra cost.

You cut down on air pollution, too.

About a decade ago, we made a promise to remove our cars from the air pollution problem.

Today we're making good. We're almost there.

1971 Chevrolets emit 80% less hydrocarbons than typical cars of roughly ten years ago. And about 2/3 less carbon monoxide.

Best of all, we're testing devices that can reach control levels as high as 95%.

But it hasn't been easy. We've had to develop devices that muzzle and reburn exhaust fumes.

Devices that check wayward gases around the crankcase vent.

Devices that prevent the escape of raw gasoline vapors.

We've even had to invent instruments sophisticated enough to measure the effectiveness of these devices.

The goal and reward have been one and the same: cleaner air.

Estimates are that if all Mosh American motor cars were made similar control, and all cars on the road today were emission controlled like '71 Chevrolets, we'd be breathing 1940 air.

You might call that a great step backward. A step we've been proud to take.

Top Field For 'Plate'

TORONTO (CP) — The Queen's Plate, oldest continuously-run stakes race in North America, may have one of its finest fields and perhaps the richest purse ever for the 112th running at Woodbine racetrack June 19.

Following the May 1 nomination date, there were still 81 Canadian-bred three-year-olds eligible and the purse stood at $74,525. That figure is made up of The Jockey Club's $50,000 contribution and nomination fees.

Orginally, 221 thoroughbreds were nominated to this year's premier thoroughbred race. The first nomination payment of $25 was made in December, 1969, the second of $50 each last December and the third May 1 at $100 each.

Two days before the race, owners must pay another $1,000 each to enter their contenders, and a field of 14 or more could produce another record purse.

Last year's record purse of $88,300, with a field of 15, also had a record winner's share of $57,295 which went to Almoner, owned by Malcolm Smith of Toronto.

"I think this will be one of the best fields ever to contest the Queen's Plate," says Dave Stevenson, director of thoroughbred racing for The Jockey Club.

"I can't remember ever seeing so many outstanding contenders for the Plate."

Most prominent among the contenders so far is Kennedy Road, owned by Mrs. Art Stollery of Toronto.

The Jockey Club's oddsmakers, Joe Holmes and Don Stansfield, made Kennedy Road the 3-to-1 favorite when they drew up their winter book odds in January.

They made the big colt the favorite despite the fact he was still recovering from an operation to remove a bone chip from his left hind ankle.

The top two-year-old in Canada during 1970 has had impressive workouts, and trainer Jim Bentley is confident.

"I wasn't really convinced last year that this was a good horse," Bentley says. "I am convinced now. He just keeps getting better, too."

Bentley saddles the colt for his first start this year in the Marine Stakes on Saturday, May 22.

Coco la Terreur, trained for the Montreal financier by veteran Yonnie Starr, has had two excellent runs at Fort Erie this spring. He won the Queenston Stakes with Chatty Cavalier the runner-up.

Canadians Get High

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — Canadians took the first nine out of 10 places in the green jumper and open jumper competitions at the Buffalo International Horse Show Friday.

Brian Callahan of Toronto won the open class Thursday and tied first place in puissance Friday. Canadian equestrian team member Jim Elder and Jim Day of Oakville have dominated the show.

In the puissance, four horses won ribbons, including those ridden by Callahan and Day. Shuman, ridden and owned by Douglas Cudney of Toronto, was fifth.

In the preliminary jumper class, Elder was placed first on Calistro, owned by Len Besler, of Toronto. Day was second on Sundancer and Gord Curtain of Kitchener was third on Tawco. Day and Elder took fourth and fifth places riding Canadian Veer and Coup d'Etat, respectively.

The show continues until Sunday.

Poor Reports Cut Stock Prices

By PETER LEICHNITZ
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An increasing number of poor first-quarter earning reports, a one-day rail strike in the United States and speculation of decreased interest rates combined to force prices on major Canadian stock markets lower this week.

News of the pending rail strike in the U.S. Monday sent prices sharply lower. The Toronto stock market's industrial index, a prime indicator of market movement, posted its fourth-sharpest decline of the year.

On the week, the Toronto industrial index fell 1.55, closing at 178.65.

Trading was light throughout the week as many investors remained out of the market, mainly due to the current international monetary crisis.

Volume at Toronto was 10.27 million shares, down from 10.79 million last week.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges the composite index lost 2.07, closing at 176.59.

Total volume on the two exchanges was 5.87 million shares.

Analysts said many investors are waiting for an indication of how interest rates will move in the near future. Most investors interpret higher interest rates as a sign of tight-money and thus a general slowdown of the economy.

At New York, the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 key blue-chip issues closed at 921.87, down 14.20. Volume at New York was 70.79 million shares, down from 79.69 million last week.

Prices were lower during four of the five trading sessions. A minor rally Thursday, according to market observers, was due mainly to "bargain buying."

Arabs Shell Valley

By The Associated Press

Israeli settlers ran for shelter underground when Arab guerrillas fired rockets into the Beisan valley Monday night in the first attack across the Jordanian border in more than six months.

Israeli mortars retaliated with a barrage, informed sources said. Minor damage but no casualties were reported on the Israeli side.

The Russian Katyusha rockets were aimed at an Israeli settlement three miles from the Jordan River frontier, the sources said.

'I see it, I see it. Don't rush me!'

New Quake Felt After 856 Killed

ISTANBUL (AP) — Turkey's third earthquake this month jolted an area 150 miles south of Istanbul today. The quake registered six on the open-end Richter scale, powerful enough to cause extensive damage, but first word from the area said no serious damage had been reported.

Meanwhile, the death toll from the quake last Saturday at Bingol, in eastern Turkey, rose to 856 persons. The search for bodies in the town and outlying villages continued, and the toll was expected to increase.

Another quake May 12, at Burdur in southwest Turkey, killed 57 persons.

Minden Man Slain

MINDEN, Ont. (CP) — Provincial police are seeking two youths in connection with the slaying of Bernard Joseph Gilligan, 28, of RR 2, Minden, whose body was found Sunday on a road two miles south of here.

Police said the two youths were seen hitch-hiking near Highway 7 and Bayview Avenue, just north of Toronto, where the dead man's abandoned car was found.

Mr. Gilligan, a part-time counsellor at a camp near this community about 60 miles north of Peterborough, died of stab wounds.

Police said Mr. Gilligan apparently was last seen about 6 p.m. Saturday when he left to take some garbage from the camp to a nearby dump.

Victoria Day Brings Protests in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Police and firemen played cat and mouse with roving arsonists in Montreal Monday night after an otherwise quiet Victoria Day had passed with a series of demonstrations in other parts of the province.

More than 250 specially-assigned policemen patrolled the southwest district of the city in attempts to round up gangs of youths who set about 100 small fires, mostly to sheds, cars and garbage stacks.

A police spokesman said 12 persons were arrested, including eight juveniles. Several families were evacuated from their homes when fires were set in tenements.

Earlier in the evening, about 600 persons jammed into 100 cars to stage a noisy motorcade demonstration through the city's east end in opposition to construction of a cross-town expressway which will result in demolition of thousands of homes in low-income districts.

Police stood by but did not interfere as the parade of flag- and banner-bearing cars moved through the streets before dispersing.

French-Canadian nationalists, who annually use the May 24 holiday to demonstrate their support for an independent Quebec, gathered in other parts of the province to voice their opposition to the celebration of the Queen's birthday and what they called its symbolism of foreign domination in the province.

About 300 paraded in St. Eustache north of Montreal, scene of a battle between government forces and Quebec "patriotes" in the 1837 Lower Canada rebellion.

Many had made the 15-mile trip from here in a motorcade of about 60 cars decorated with the red, white and green colors of the 1837 rebels.

There was no interference by police standing by as the demonstrators marched through the Laurentian Mountains community carrying French-language placards bearing slogans such as "down with the English colonialists" and "Free Quebec."

Trudeau's Visit City in Arctic

MOSCOW (CP) — Reuter — Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada is scheduled to leave the Arctic city of Norilsk tonight for Murmansk as his 12-day tour of the Soviet Union nears its end.

Murmansk, a port in the extreme northwestern tip of Russia, will be the second-last stop of Trudeau's tour. He is to visit Leningrad before returning to Canada.

The prime minister and his wife flew into Norilsk, the northernmost city in the Soviet Union, from the central Asian city of Tashkent Monday.

Norilsk was founded in 1935 in an area of permanent frost. But the city, with a population of 150,000, receives fresh food daily from hothouses.

The city now is an important metallurgical and industrial centre.

Kingston Merchant Is Tied Up

KINGSTON (CP) — Three masked and armed men escaped with an undetermined amount of money from a supermarket here early today after tying up the store's owner, his wife and 15-year-old son.

Manager Ken Robinson of the supermarket said the three men broke into his home, tied up his family and forced him at gunpoint to reveal the combination of the safe in the nearby store.

One of the men stayed with the family while the other two went to the store. Mr. Robinson said the third man left after receiving a phone call from the two in the store.

Racial Unrest Is Felt Seoul to Chattanooga

SEOUL (AP) — Black soldiers protested racial discrimination here blamed for a rash of grenade explosions at a U.S. camp 36 miles south of Seoul. One American and three South Koreans have been injured in the blasts.

Five grenades exploded during the weekend at Camp Humphreys, and a military source said two more blasts occurred today. No arrests have been made.

The Seoul newspaper Hankook Ilbo said 10 Negro soldiers were responsible for the weekend explosions. Police sources said a box of 36 fragmentation grenades was stolen four hours before the first grenade exploded Saturday night.

The English-language Korea Times reported an American soldier disappeared after the explosions.

An army spokesman said some grenades were missing from the camp's ammunition storage.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than 600 U.S. servicemen brawled at Travis Air Force Base Monday night in fighting which a base spokesman said grew out of a racial incident in a mess hall.

It was a third day of racial disorders at the northern California base, a major embarkation point for Southeast Asia. The base is about 45 miles northeast of San Francisco.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A Negro was shot to death by law enforcement officers Monday night, but authorities said civil disorders which have hit the city for four straight nights subsided with the presence of 2,000 National Guard troops on the streets.

Police Commissioner Gene Roberts said Leon Anderson, 22, was killed as he threw a brick at 12 officers who answered a call to an area where sniper fire had been reported on previous nights. He was the first person killed in the disorders.

State Safety Commissioner Claude Armour ordered an investigation of the shooting, which occurred shortly after sniper fire was reported two blocks from where Anderson was killed.

The trouble erupted Friday night after black soul singer Wilson Pickett refused to appear at a show because he was not paid in advance. But two black ministers Monday blamed the continuing disturbances Saturday and Sunday on police.

Rev. Paul McDaniel said police swore at blacks, were abusive, used the word "nigger" and arrested innocent people.

Rev. H. H. Wright, president of the local Southern Christian Leadership Conference branch, agreed.

"The trouble Saturday and Sunday was based on police action," he said. "Friday night's incident was forgotten."

Roberts said he had not personally heard any officers using abusive language although police had been abused verbally.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Rain will continue over the whole of Ontario south of James Bay today. In addition some thundershowers are likely to occur over the southern half of the province. A few showers will remain around Ontario Wednesday morning with clearing towards late afternoon. Temperatures will remain slightly below seasonal normals.

Mohawk Dancers

At the Mohawk Landing Day Sunday at Tyendinaga Reserve, Mrs. Lorraine Hill's grade 3 pupils put on a women's dance performance for visitors that promises to become an annual attraction. The children were taught by David Maracle, who sang the chants to accompany them, and learned their first Mohawk last year from a retiring teacher, Mrs. Lena Elliot, who Sunday became an honorary member of the band for her contribution to reserve education during the last 38 years. Busiest Astronaut Demonstrates WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut Alfred M. Worden demonstrated Monday that he will be the busiest man ever to remain in parking orbit around the moon while awaiting the return of his Apollo 15 companions from the lunar surface.

Worden and National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists working with him described seven complex experiments for which he will be responsible as command-module pilot during the 67 hours, beginning July 30, that his teammates, David R. Scott and James B. Irwin, are down on the moon.

An eighth will be performed after Scott and Irwin rejoin Worden in lunar orbit and just before they start the return journey to earth.

At that moment, Worden will fire into a 60-mile-high circular orbit around the moon a small sub-satellite somewhat resembling a larger-than-ordinary rural mailbox, carrying out experiments of its own.

Worden said the sub-satellite is designed to remain in lunar orbit gathering useful data for at least 88 days, but may be kept in operation for up to a year—"it will stay there as long as we care to play with it."

The experiments Worden will monitor in his own orbiting command-and-service module involve devices on 25-foot-long booms to measure the chemical composition of the lunar surface through radiation and x-ray fluorescence.

With a 24-inch panoramic camera the craft will photograph the lunar surface from orbit in detail so great as to show objects only three feet across.

For mapping purposes a three-inch camera will photograph terrain with a resolution of about 65 feet, compared to the three feet for the panoramic camera.

The mapping camera will work simultaneously with a stellar camera pointing to the side and taking star-field photos that will be correlated later with the lunar surface photos, for accurate correlation.

And on the way back home, Worden will climb out of the spacecraft and, attached to a 25-foot-long tether, make his way back to the service module to recover the huge film cassettes. If the film has rolled up properly, this job may take only 20 minutes. But the astronauts have allowed one hour for the work.

Firecracker Fire

Belleville firefighters fought two blazes set by firecrackers during the Victoria Day weekend. The tire storage shed behind Western Tire on Belleville Plaza was extensively damaged when firecrackers set paper in a trash drum (foreground) ablaze, and the flames spread to the building and its contents.

Firecrackers Cause of Two Fires

Firecracker Day 1971 fizzled out in a drizzle, but not before sparks were struck in two unscheduled locations.

The Kinsman Club's $750 two-hour display at Zwick's Island was cancelled Monday night because of rain, and rescheduled for 8:45 tonight.

But firecracker damage kept Belleville firefighters on the go over the weekend.

Two blazes were attributed by firemen to firecrackers in the hands of young boys, none of who have been identified.

The first fire was at Queen Victoria School about 5 p.m. Saturday. Woodwork around the north basement door was damaged when paper was packed between the door and its jamb and ignited with firecrackers.

The second blaze damaged the tire storage shed behind Western Tire at Belleville Plaza about 4:30 Sunday. It was believed to have started when two lads tossed firecrackers into waste drums at the door of the shed.

A spectator, first to spot the fire, saw two boys of about 10 or 11 racing away from the scene and told place "It was firecrackers",

"The sooner we get rid of firecrackers the better it will be for us," said Fire Chief Leo Culhane after the two incidents.

No estimate of the damage in the two fires is yet available.

A Hillcrest family of four escaped just in time Sunday when fire destroyed a large garage-workshop and gutted the adjoining residence.

The late afternoon fire was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Muir, 41 McFarland Drive.

Also destroyed in the blaze was a home built airplane on which Mr. Muir had been working for the past couple of years.

"We just got out in time," Mrs. G. Nobles, mother of Mrs. Muir who was visiting at the time of the fire. "Someone came pounding on the door and said the garage was all ablaze."

In the house at the time was Mrs. Nobles, Mrs. Muir, one of the Muir's sons and their 6-year-old daughter. The father and an older son were away when the fire started.

Neighbors said the garage was all ablaze when the fire was first noticed and quickly spread to adjoining house.

Saved from the flames was a hound tied in its dog house at the side of the garage, and a late model car parked beside the house.

The car was locked in gear and it took the combined efforts of half a dozen men and a truck to haul it to safety.

Tyendinaga Mill Rate Stays Same

Despite a decrease of $63,000 in assessment, the 1972 mill rate for Tyendinaga township will remain the same as for last year.

Clerk-treasurer William J. Walsh reported to day that the farm and residential rate will be 93.8 mills for public school supporters with the commercial and industrial rate to be 104.5 mills — down .9 mill from last year.

The secondary school levy is $9,378 compared with $45,310 in 1970.

The public elementary school levy is for $19,828 compared to $47,698 in 1970. This year's public elementary school levy of $51,277 is reduced by the 1968 surplus of the Tyendinaga Board of $28,923 and an overlevy of the county board in 1969 and 1970 of $1,516.

The elementary separate school levy is similarly reduced, combined county separated by the 1968 surplus of the school boards on entering the school.

The amount to be raised for county purposes this year is $90,230 as compared with $87,891 last year.

This year's budget for construction and maintenance of township roads is $125,000.

This year again the tax on residences will be reduced by the provincial tax rebate of $30.20 or half the taxes, which

Picton Man Cuts Face

A Picton man is in CFB Trenton Base Hospital this morning recovering from extensive facial lacerations he received in an accident late Monday.

Paul Allan Lindstrom, 23, of Washburn Street, Picton, required more than 60 stitches to close extensive facial wounds and a deep cut on his right leg.

At 11:45 p.m. Monday, the small, late-model English car in which he was driving northbound, went off the road at Bay Bridge, crashed through a fence and came to rest on its side facing south.

Treated for facial wounds and loss of blood at Belleville, Lindstrom remained in the latter transferred to Trenton.

Army Cadet Inspection To Be Held on May 30

The army cadet corps based at the Belleville armory will hold its annual inspection on Sunday, May 30 and will be one of four corps in the province to be inspected by a regular force general.

Brigadier General R. A. Coffin was born in Gaspe, Quebec, and holds a bachelor of science degree from Dalhousie University.

His military service began in 1936 in the non-permanent militia and since that time he has been a gunnery instructor at the Royal Canadian School of Artillery, Picton, has attended a one year post-graduate study in guided-missiles, Fort Bliss, Texas, and over is the lessee. The farm tax rebate is still to be ascertained.

Taxes will be payable in two instalments, one half being due July 31 and the balance on Dec. 1.

The township council has passed a bylaw to licence and regulate festivals and the holding of entertainment. The bylaw, the same as that passed by other municipalities in the county, calls for all requirements to be met at least 60 days prior to the commencement of the public entertainment or festival.

Trenton Budget Faces Cut

TRENTON (Staff)—The Town of Trenton's 1971 budget will be prime topic of discussion at council's committee of the whole session tonight.

All departmental spending estimates are completed, with one at least, facing considerable trimming.

Most councillors, Mayor Duncan McDonald and town engineer, Arthur Campbell, agree the best place to cut back is in public works.

Former municipal treasurer, Peter Groot will be on hand tonight for what is expected to be only the first of several budget meetings on the budget situation being aggravated by a 1970 operating deficit of just under $170,000.

Passenger Hurt

William Douglas Morrison is in Belleville General Hospital with lacerations suffered when the car he was a passenger in was involved in a one - vehicle accident at 2.30 a.m. Saturday on Highway 14 at the bottom of the Oak Hills. Driver of the car was Douglas Brian Fox of Belleville. Police estimate damage to the vehicle at $500.

REAL ESTATE

HOW IS THE HOUSE BUYING CLIMATE?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney Realty Ltd.

As good as any you are likely to find in the foreseeable future.

Mortgage rates are down to the lowest level in a year or two and likely as low as they'll go in our present era of inflation.

And prices are steadily rising with no immediate end in sight.

Both conditions contribute to making real estate the ideal investment: While you pay off your mortgage in steadily inflating dollars, your property continues to rise in value.

Increasing home prices correspond to price increases throughout the economy. These rates have been fluctuating from three to five per cent over the last years — a condition from which we have not yet emerged.

Building costs in many areas over the last three years have averaged over 7 per cent. This increase was equivalent $1,750 on a $35,000 property if the full cost increase was reflected in home prices. And while residential mortgage rates are down now, rampant inflation could push them up again.

The climate is ideal for home buyers who have been hesitating due to economic uncertainties, to take this important step.

Swing Your Partner

Who says a barn is the only place to hold a good old country hoedown? The orchards of Ameliasburg served just as well this past weekend when couples gathered beneath the flowering bowers to dance a few sets to celebrate the annual Apple Blossom festivities.

Blossoms Bit Slow For Tour Viewers

By Margaret Haylock

AMELIASBURG — Apple blossom time in Prince Edward County didn't coincide with the Quinte Apple Blossom Festival orchard tours this year but visitors didn't seem to notice that trees were merely blushing pink. With barely a blossom in sight more than 2,000 persons toured the Ameliasburg orchards of Lyle Weese, Allan Weese and Summer Dawson last Sunday, enjoying wagon rides among rows of budding trees.

Members of the County Whirlers Square Dance Club dressed in colorful costumes swung their partners to recorded music played in the orchards. Concessions selling apples, apple pie with cheese, and cider and doughnuts attracted many visitors at the festival. In the orchard of Ameliasburg farmer Lyle Weese, last year's Apple Blossom Queen, Elizabeth Doxsee, 19, held court with Apple Princess Dixie Motley and this year's eight title contenders. Miss Doxsee is reigning queen through this year's festival events. The girls were introduced by Lyle Vanclief.

Among special guests touring the orchards Sunday were the Hon. George Hees, MP Prince Edward-Lennox and Russel Thompson, reeve of Amelisburg. Mr. Hees joined a wagon tour of the orchard, sampled freshly baked apple pie as he mingled with visitors and later danced with the County Whirlers.

On Sunday, May 30, continuing orchard tours will be held at the Waupoos farm of Bruce Little.

National Arts Orchestra Here Tomorrow

Nearly two years after making its debut in Ottawa, the National Arts Centre orchestra of Ottawa, described as the "most Canadian of professional Canadian orchestras" will perform for the first time in Belleville on Wednesday May 26 at Centennial Secondary School.

The program will feature works by two Canadian composers, Sir Ernest MacMillan and John Weinzweig as well as compositions by Rossini, Mozart and Prokofiev.

The McMillan compositions selected are two sketches for strings on French-Canadian airs, Notre Seigneur en paurre and A Saint Malo. Both reflect the composer's special interest in the folk music of Canada.

The divertimento for flute and strings by John Weinzweig is one of the Toronto composer's most widely performed works and won the highest award for chamber music in the arts division of the London Olympiad.

Also on the program will be Rossini's overture to an Italian Woman in Algiers, another popular concert piece. Two symphonies will complete the bill of fare — Symphony No. 40 in G. MINOR BY Mozart and Symphony No. 1 in D by Prokofiev. The former consists of four movements molto allegro, andante, minuetto, trio and allegro assai. The latter also has four movements, allegro larghetto, gavotte and motto vivace and is considered one of the most difficult pieces in the entire orchestral repertoire which can be attempted only by the most skilled players.

The National Arts Centre orchestra consists of 44 pieces and was formed after auditioning more than 200 players who applied for positions. Mario Bernardi was finally selected as the man sufficiently talented to be its first director.

Born in Kirkland Lake, he earned his diploma in piano, organ and composition from the Venice Conservatory at the age of 17. He was musical director of the Sadlers Wells Opera, London before he accepted his present position. An excellent pianist, Mr. Bernardi frequently performs as soloist with his own orchestra, conducting from the keyboard.

No Monopoly

One of the hoary old fallacies of our day, or rather one which has impinged on the public mind in comparatively recent times, is the notion that the current generation knows more than their elders.

Dr. Arthur H. Cain in his book Young People and Revolution is one of the latest to make such a claim, noting that anyone over 30 would concede that young people today have a vast fund of knowledge about things that simply did not exist when he was growing up.

What Dr. Cain should have been saying is that young people have access to such knowledge. That vast numbers of them have no real grasp of it, let alone the essentials of the three Rs, or much knowledge of history or geography or of contemporary affairs, escapes Dr. Cain and others who similarly delude themselves.

* * *

Incidentally, Dr. Cain in his book denies any political bias, or incitement to the young to revolt and overthrow established order. Rather, he makes a case for constructive activism as something that is essential to social progress from generation to generation.

As the book progresses, however, Dr. Cain's leftist sympathies are only thinly disguised.

A psychologist, he is author of a similar series of books on young people and drinking, smoking, sex, crime, drugs and neurosis. Drugs, by the way, he regards as hazardous, including marijuana. He says that even a small intake of pot will diminish alertness and interfere with learning ability. He makes the point that had there been an emergency at say the Woodstock Rock Festival the half-million or so people present, many of them under the influence of drugs, would have been at the mercy of a handful of sober, alert, disciplined troops from anywhere: the Establishment or anyone else.

Hypothetical? Yes, but it does illustrate only too clearly the vulnerability of those who pretend that a generation of real men and women sound in mind and body, and of high moral calibre, can be fostered on the euphoria of drugs, the deafening din of rock music, and empty talk about peace unsupported by anyone willing or able to fight for it.

* * *

But to get back to our original theme, how much do the young people know in this day of exorbitantly expensive education? How many can name every State in the United States, let alone every province in Canada including the Territories? The countries of Europe and Latin America and their capitals. Basic things like that, and never mind all the new stuff they are supposed to know these days.

And what about arithmetic and mathematics? The Hamilton Spectator points out that results of a Grade 9 mathematics test in a Toronto collegiate were unpromising. Of 275 students in the test only 31 per cent knew the number of 1 in a mile; only 40 per cent could calculate 15 per cent of 20; only 47 per cent knew how many pints there were in a gallon, "while that hoary old problem of finding the circumference of a circle stumped all but 18 per cent."

The Spectator also refers to other shortcomings such as bad spelling, poor vocabulary and grammar, not to mention unfamiliarity with the better literature of times past as well as our own day.

So long as there is such poor performance among students in general it is nonsense to pretend young people know more than their parents did. That is not to say the adult population is all that knowledgeable. Their education must be a continuing process too. But let us not delude ourselves that the young have a monopoly in this regard.

June 1 Census

The Government, big brother and fatherly as ever, has come up with another of its cute advertisements, complete with an accompanying cartoon by Toronto newspaper cartoonist Duncan Macpherson, to remind us about the June 1 census.

It is like income tax time all over again, although we trust the census business will be less painful than that annual agony. But similar in the sense that Ottawa comes out with one of those sweet memorandums about "your chance to let Canada know all about yourself."

We are assured that the information obtained from it "is as secret as a ballot." Well, indeed, it had just better be.

The census of course is nothing new. This time there will be more questions to answer, and we shall just have to wait and see just how many are really in the interests of the government to know.

Relations Remain Delicate

P.M. Still Steering Clear of Official Visit to France

By GREG CONNOLLEY

OTTAWA — Pierre Trudeau has visited scores of countries since becoming prime minister but it is noteworthy that he still has not made an official journey to France.

One of his first overseas trips was to Britain to attend a Commonwealth Conference. This seemed fitting in the sense that Britain is considered one of Canada's two mother countries. But the prime minister has been in no hurry to pay his respects to that other motherland, France.

It is ironic that he can find time to spend 10 days in the Soviet Union but apparently is not particularly interested in visiting the land where his own ancestors came from.

Of course Trudeau still remembers the cool welcome Premier Charles de Gaulle received in Canada in 1967 when the latter uttered his cry "Vive Le Quebec Libre."

It was a bold and arrogant declaration by de Gaulle as seen by the Canadian government including Trudeau. It seemed clear at the time that General de Gaulle was encouraging separatism in Quebec.

Evidently this feeling held by President de Gaulle has not yet been forgotten nor forgiven by Mr. Trudeau. He also remembers the attempts by French Government officials to build up Quebec and to slight the Canadian government.

But relations were supposed to improve markedly with the passing of de Gaulle and the accession to the presidency of George Pompidou. Trudeau even sent a new ambassador to Paris, his former cabinet colleague Leo Cadieux, who was supposed to patch up relations with the French.

Mr. Cadieux, an amiable and talented French Canadian has indeed worked hard at improving relations between the two countries and has had some success.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has pitched in too, with a visit to Paris and discussions with French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann. Sharp has offered the view that matters between the two countries have improved.

But, if that is the case, why has Trudeau not yet visited France? Why has an official invitation not been extended to him from the French government? After all Mr. Trudeau has been prime minister for three years now.

It may be that President Pompidou would be willing to have Trudeau come to Paris and give him the red carpet treatment. But it is conceivable that the prime minister is not at that anxious to go.

Some months ago he was asked by Marital Asselin, Conservative MP from Quebec, if he was going to visit Pompidou. The prime minister replied with what appeared to be heavy sarcasm that he thought Pompidou would be glad to know Mr. Asselin was asking about him.

There are suggestions that any feud between the two nations is not all one-sided and that the French are still engaging in little intrigues with Quebec government officials.

There are some sore points between France and Canada not the least of which is the Canadian claim to 12-mile maritime French fishing rights off the coast of Newfoundland in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. There are also differences over off-shore mineral exploitation off the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

But despite all these problems, it seems incredible that the day of triumphant reception in Paris for Pierre Trudeau can be all that far away. Yet there are those in Ottawa who suspect he may even go to visit Peking before marching down the Champs Elysees.

Propaganda Ploy

Soviets Still Pressing for Troop Withdrawals

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP)

The Soviet Union, in making its pitch for troop withdrawals from Central Europe, is using a ploy that it has used with varying success over the years.

That ploy is the making of an attention-grabbing suggestion without giving any indication of how that suggestion can be implemented.

Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev put forward the proposal in a speech last week. The idea was pressed upon Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau in three days of official talks in Moscow this week.

Trudeau said Thursday that the Soviet idea must be "earnestly" considered. But he and other Canadian officials also tacitly put their finger on the weakness: At no time was Trudeau told in what forum or what manner troop withdrawals should be negotiated.

The Soviets and their allies have done this many times in the past.

They have called in recent years for a European security conference. But details of such a conference have been left in the air and the West has been left in the position of having to call for careful preparation before such a conference can take place.

At the United Nations, the Soviets and their friends have called for such seemingly worthwhile things as a Declaration of International Security, a definition of aggression and a document outlining peaceful coexistance.

All these looked great on paper and sounded good in speeches. But the West in each case found them little more than propaganda vehicles and years of work were needed before some balanced approach was achieved.

In the case of a Declaration of International Security, proposed by the Soviets two years ago, Canada took a leading part in proposing that the West defuse this ploy. A balanced document, little more than a rewrite of the UN Charter, was approved at the last session of the General Assembly.

The Soviets played the troop-reduction theme well. They could be sure of worldwide publicity because of the debate in Washington set proposals to reduce the size of the American troop commitment in Europe.

They got further publicity because Trudeau, head of a government which already has reduced the size of its forces in Europe, was visiting Moscow.

Moscow must know the difficulties that troop reduction poses for President Nixon.

For it is all very well to have American troops and Soviet soldiers pulled back from Europe. But the Soviet troops would go to Russia and would have easy access to Europe, if necessary.

American troops would withdraw across the ocean and access would be more difficult.

There are many other factors.

The Soviets, aware of them, can be expected to press their point, realizing that it could be a long time before the nuts and bolts of the proposal will be discussed.

City Budget, the 'Y', And Chamber of Commerce

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

City council deserves credit in producing a budget that kept the mill rate at $1.7, only 2.2 mills up from last year.

It is too bad they were not helped in their onerous task by those perennial "budget time beggars", the YMCA and the Chamber of Commerce.

The "Y" grabbed off $7,500 by way of a grant and an additional waiving of the $10,400 general rate taxes. With the $24,000 odd from the United Community Services their total take was in the region of $41,000.

Belleville's other "poor sister," the Chamber of Commerce, got away with $6,000. I think their pathetic attempts to balance their budget each year, would be the comedy provided by Chamber of Commerce week gives moments of light relief but to the tune of $6,000.

Alderman Jean Smith failed completely to justify the financial windfall for the "Y". She equated the YMCA request for money to the cost of keeping a prisoner in custody. At least the prisoner is there because he has done something. What has the "Y" done for the majority of the citizens that places them in the $41,000 category?

By the same token, what has the Chamber of Commerce done for the citizens at large that deserves a ritualistic handover of cash each year? Nothing, I suggest. Both the "Y" and the Chamber at budget time promise great concern for the community and its people. Yet the Yardmen, despite "conducting lotteries" (which seemed to offend one alderman) have given our Senior Citizens a fine place to relax and enjoy life a little. They give, the other two take.

Maybe the "Y" and the Chamber should get together with the Yardmen and get them to provide a few wrinkles on how to serve the community in a practical manner without robbing the city tax chest in the process — and do something about Jaballo, campaigns and speeches.

When the next election rolls round Alderman Keegan's advice of asking the people of the city whether or not they wish to keep the "Y" or the Chamber on its permanent welfare rolls could be followed.

The council, in raising their own stipends, followed the familiar course of the senior governments. In this case, they have my unqualified support. They have served us well whether we agree with them or not. Even at their present salaries, they are underpaid.

'Indiscriminate' Says Critic

Apartment Growth in City

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

It is good to note that residents of Belleville are at last joining together in an effort to reduce and eliminate the indiscriminate building of apartments in the residential parts of Belleville. Too many apartment buildings have gone up in the city already with utter disregard for their location and their subsequent effect on surrounding residences and areas.

The builders and real estate people have to date had almost complete control over the building of apartment buildings in the city of Belleville. It is time this ceased and home owners be owners of residential homes who stand to lose most in this building of conglomerates. Apartment buildings should be built only in areas allotted for this type of building.

It is quite how certain properties are not sufficiently large enough for building a home and later the same piece of land has an apartment building put up on it because some builder or realtor has been successful in obtaining a variance, which a private home builder could not do. Also there is a complete lack of concern for parking for these apartment buildings.

I would also like to comment on an article that the Quinte Home Builders are very anxious to see private dwellings completed within a two year period. Why? Many of the apartment buildings being erected by these same Quinte Home Builders are not being completed either, as how about putting into practice what they are trying to preach. The apartment building which was put up across from Northern Electric still has a pile of dirt on sidewalk and no effort has been made to clean up side yards next to other home owners of any landscaping or drives worked on. Let us take a look at the new unit under construction at the corner of Catherine and Yeoman Streets. The dirt is piled 10 feet or more on the Yeoman St. side and people are obliged to walk on the road. This should be hauled away. On Bridge Street the sidewalk has been smashed to pieces by heavy equipment moving over it. Each experience has shown that this is a regular occurrence by builders and should be stopped. The piling of these apartments should require much more supervision by the building inspectors so that these things do not happen. So let the Quinte Home Builders show more concern for their own misdemeanors before interfering with their fellow home builder.

Auto 'Sails' Into Lake Mother Saves Daughter

MARMORA — Two-and-a-half - year - old Kelly Cook of Marmora escaped drowning at his Crow River cottage Sunday morning thanks to the rescue efforts of his mother, Mrs. Francis Cook.

It is believed that the child released the emergency brake while playing in the family station wagon, causing the car to roll down in to the river where it filated out approximately 100 feet before going down in 20 feet of water.

Mrs. Cook was alerted by her daughter, Kathy, and dashing into the cold water, managed to pull Kelly out through the open window while the car was still afloat.

While Francis Cook ran to launch the family boat, Ed Shannon, who was visiting with the Cooks, also dove into the water and helped bring Kelly in.

The car was located by divers Morris Vanvolkenburgh of Marmora and Hazen Trites of Actinolite. When the vehicle was brought to land it was discovered that the roof had caved in from water pressure.

Ten-year-old Boy Is Derby Winner

TRENTON (Staff) — "It just would not be the 24th of May weekend in Trenton without having the soapbox derby."

A crowd ranging at times up to 1,000 lined King Street yesterday afternoon for the event, now in its seventh year.

Young derby buffs, 48 in all, paraded to the starting ramps at the King and McClelland corner with the Trenton Citizens' Band leading the way.

The rain did not dampen spirits and the band directed by radio personality, Ted Snider, played on.

"Crowd response was excellent and the number of entries was up over last year," says Kinsmen president-elect, Robert Hansler. This is the second year Trenton Kinsmen have sponsored the derby previously managed by the Chamber of Commerce.

At the end of 20 races, 10-year - old Luke Magne of 13 Gould Street, winner of the intermediate division, was declared grand champion.

Other division winners were Janice Scott, 9, in the powder puff event, Jamie Bird, 9, junior boys' winner and Ronnie Morgan, 13, champ in the boys' senior competition.

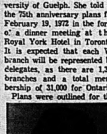
Hastings West W.I. Holds Annual Meet

The 70th annual meeting of Hastings West District Women's Institute was held recently in Emmandel United Church, Foxboro and was opened by the president Mrs. Cecil Jeffrey. Minutes of the 1970 convention and a financial report were read by secretary-treasurer Mrs. Vernon Harry.

The usual opening order of business was followed by reports of the district standing committee chairman. Mrs. Edison Sine Provincial Board director brought greetings from the board and announced regret at this being the final year of her term of office. She also reported that the Women's Institutes have reached their goal for $50,000 for MacDonald Institute, University of Guelph. She told of the 75th anniversary plans for February 19, 1972 in the form of a dinner meeting at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto. It is expected that each WI branch will be represented by delegates, as there are 1,311 branches and a total membership of 31,000 for Ontario.

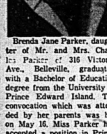
Plans were outlined for the next project which is the Ernland Lee Homestead and members were shown photographs of same. Many items at the home are to be left intact. The new handbook is expected to be ready early in 1972.

An important resolution was voted on and passed re: snowmobiles and the lack of protection for property owners but that seemingly protects the trespassers and travellers. Further details are expected regarding this resolution.



At the noon hour luncheon was served by Pine Grove Women's Institute.

An international roll call opened the afternoon sessions and each of the eight branches represented selected a country in ACWW. These were: Bay of Quinte, India; Pine Grove, Northwest Territories; River Valley, England; Stirling, Norway; Uxbridge, Australia and Wallbridge, Holland. Sidney South was also represented.



A most interesting guest speaker, Mrs. Stanley Bride, chairman of the international exchange committee held the attention of her audience in reporting a most active year. She was appointed in Winnipeg last August and told of the seminar in Ottawa in March for all Ontario conveners. The purpose of this meeting was to exchange ideas and Mrs. Bride spoke with much enthusiasm about a round robin letter which will go to every Provincial Board. Other interesting subjects she dealt with were pollution task force, UNESCO and United Nations and left members with many thought provoking ideas.

The election and installation of officers for 1971-72 took place as follows; president, Mrs. Roy Tucker, Stirling; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Vernon Harry, Stirling, RR3; Federated representative, Mrs. Gerald Irwine, Stirling RR4 alternate Federated representative, Mrs. Cecil Jeffrey, Trenton RR3, and public relations officer, Mrs. Pat Tracey, Foxboro RR1.

District conveners of standing committees were also appointed.

Brenda Jane Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parker of 316 Victoria Ave., Belleville, graduated with a Bachelor of Education degree from the University of Prince Edward Island. The convocation which was attended by her parents was held on May 16. Miss Parker has accepted a position in Prince Edward Island.

Kirk School Pupils' Presentation at Tweed

TWEED — Earlier this month, students from William R. Kirk School for Trainable Retarded Children in Belleville put on an assembly for the pupils of the Tweed - Hungerford Senior School.

Under the direction of Mrs. K. Pryer, Principal, a spectacular presentation was made.

The assembly opened with The Kirk Kombo, a 12-piece band, playing O'Canada, later joined by the audience. Four school songs and three waltz numbers were played by The Kirk Kombo. Following this a solo drummer played several numbers.

An 18 - member choir began by singing the 1969 Theme song of the special Canadian Olympics for retarded children. Other numbers were sung including folk, hymns, moderns and The William R. Kirk's own school song. Pianist for the program was Mrs. McBride.

Mr. Garn May, a professional square dance caller, called for three different dances with 16 members. The assembly was closed with the singing of God Save the Queen.

Everyone agreed that it was a most educational, enjoyable and entertaining program. The William R. Kirk students and staff received an open invitation to return at any time.

Students Gain Experience

TWEED — During the past week, 29 senior business and secretarial students of Centre Hastings Secondary School Madoc, including Tweed students who attend there, have been out of school participating in the annual work experience program. This is an arrangement whereby the graduating business students have an opportunity to spend a week in an office or other business, gaining invaluable experience.

Placement of the students is set up by the commercial department of the school, but the students are responsible for arranging their own transportation and accommodation.

The program has been successful over the years, generally resulting in offers of permanent employment for several of the students. The program could not be undertaken without the co - operation of local and area businesses.

Mrs. Jean O'Riordan, commercial director, at Centre Hastings, and Wallis Moffat, assitant commercial head in charge of the program, are most appreciative of the assistance of the many business organizations involved in the program.

'Blossom Tea' Held at Read

"Blossom Time" was the theme chosen for the recent CWL tea and bazaar held in the Read parish hall.

Guests were received by Mrs. J. Jordan, CWL president and bazaar convener, Mrs. L. Walsh.

The following women convened the various tables: Mrs. R. O'Brien, home baking table; Miss F. Corrigan, candy table; Mrs. C. Jorgan, apron table; Mrs. P. Shannon, novelty table; Mrs. H. Power was in charge of the touch-and - take items.

Guests were greeted at the tea room by Miss P. Roach. The tea table was attractively centred by an arrangement of spring flowers and was surrounded by a number of smaller tables, each centred by a single tulip.

Lucky draw winners were: Chris Rogers, Belleville; Terry Phillips, Steve Brennan and Mrs. Henry Phillips, all of Shannonville; Mrs. Jean McBride, Peterborough and Miss Mary Ann Lally of Corbyville.

Numerous Friends Attend Party

A surprise birthday party was given recently in honor of Althea Craig, 60 Murphy Street, Trenton at the home of her sister, Mrs. Bessie Rodgers.

Many guests attended the event coming from as far away as Port Erie, and others from Stirling, Keene, Belleville, Campbellford, Cobourg and Trenton.

All enjoyed a pleasant evening of games and contests, after which a bountiful lunch was served which included a large birthday cake made by Mrs. Brown, Mrs. L. Craighead and Mrs. D. Frederick.

A Time of Reminiscence On 60th Anniversary

Times have changed in the 70 years since James C. Cordes, 11 Yeomans Street, learned the printing trade in London, England.

Duly fledgling printer got paid while learning the trade but at the turn of the century Mr. Cordes worked for a year as an apprentice before drawing his first pay.

Then he went on the payroll at the handsome sum of six shillings or $1.50 per week.

Yesterday Mr. Cordes, retired Jobroom foreman at The Intelligencer, his wife, the former Alice Robinson, recalled the old days as they quietly celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary.

"I went to work as a printer apprentice when I was 13," said the 84 - year - old former printer. "You don't hear of many serving as apprentices today."

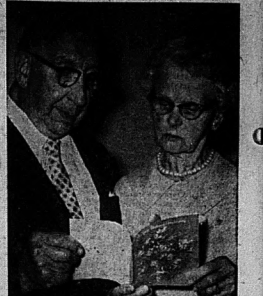
After working as a printer for a few years Mr. Cordes decided the printing trade was not for him and he emigrated to Canada in 1907.

But jobs were scarce and in 1908 he went to work at the Daily Intelligencer. The pay was $1 per day.

Two years later he moved to the Daily Ontario at $18 a week, increased to $11 the next year when he was married.

Mr. Cordes quit his future wife at the Salvation Army citadel where he played in the band. Mrs. Cordes had also come to Belleville from England.

At the Daily Ontario Mr. Cordes recalled feeding the flat bed press by hand, acting as mechanic for the type-setting machines and also supervising the job printing department.



He became full time job printing foreman in 1927 and retired in 1955 after 45 years on the job.

A veteran of World War I Mr. Cordes served in France, Belgium, and Germany as a band member in the 21st Battalion.

The couple are members of Holloway Street United Church where both sang in the choir for 25 years.

The couple married on May 24 back in 1911. In fact Victoria Day has been a big date for the Cordes family. It is Mr. Cordes' birthday and it was on Victoria Day that he left for overseas during World War I and was also the date that he arrived back home.

The couple have two children, a son Walter at Grimsby, and a daughter Mrs. George (Ruth) Smith of Belleville and one grandson in Saint John.

Difference of Opinion On VD Advice

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My boyfriend has requested that I write to you to protest the inadequacy of your answer which dealt with venereal disease. It was much too lacking in specificity to be of value to anyone.

You did not describe the syphillitic chancre nor did you describe the cures for either gonorrhea or syphilis. Considering the vast funds and resources at your disposal it is disgraceful that you could not have come up with a better response. You owe it to your public to improve the quality of your answers, or if you are as ignorant as you seem to be you should keep your stupid mouth shut.

ANN LANDERS

I'm sure your real motive was to scare people away from sexual activities. You will not succeed. — MISS L. AND DR. LOVE.

DEAR MISS L. AND DR. LOVE: Thank you for your letter. Here are some excerpts from letters on the same subject.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thank you for your excellent column on V.D. which appeared in the Des Moines Tribune. You have performed a tremendous service by helping to educate the public about a growing menace among teen agers. — MELVIN D. LIGHTENER, Administrator, Polk County Health Dept.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your column on V.D. may have saved my life. I went to the County Health Department after I read it. As I had suspected, I had both gonorrhea and syphilis. The doctor said I was lucky — that the diseases are in the early stages and both can be completely eradicated. I will be in your debt as long as I live. God bless you. — A. R. OF SAN LEANDRO.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thank you from the bottom of my heart for your column on V.D. I speak for all the health educators in the country.

The information you printed would have been impossible to get from parents or teachers. Most parents don't have the information and even if they had it, most children would not ask such questions of their parents.

Your column is read by millions of teenagers all over the North American continent. They trust you to tell it like it is. Your contribution to the youth of our nation is incalculable. Thank you, thank you, thank you. — INDIANAPOLIS TEACHER.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 15 years of age and I am working toward my advancement in Boy Scouts of America to become an Eagle Scout.

My final project is to get a statement from Ann Landers on "Why Young People Should Not Use Drugs." The statement should be 50 words or less. I would appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible because I want to complete this project. Thank you very much. — STEVE R., Lexington, Ky.

DEAR STEVE: I don't know who thought up the idea that I should write a 50 word statement as part of your project but it's very interesting to say the least. Since you are the guy who is working toward his Eagle, you should write the statement. I have written many thousands of words on why teenagers should not use drugs. Research my back columns (the library has them) and write the 50 words yourself, Bub.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Mary Tests Large Batch of Muffins

By MARY MOORE

For seven weeks we have been carrying on a test of a large batch of muffin batter that is made up and stored in the refrigerator. As you need the muffins you dip into the batter, fill your 12-cup muffin pan and bake them. Sounds impossible but as Mrs. Dunn of Carlyle, Saskatchewan claimed, is trifle.

batter will be for summer cottagers or businesses with unexpected visitors. I hope our Imagine how handy this cooks with large families will clip and use this recipe.

SEVEN-WEEK BRAN MUFFINS (eight-four 2½").

NOTE: Please follow directions to the letter

2 cups boiling water
2 cups bran bud cereal
1 lb. best quality shortening
1 cup granulated sugar
2 cups light brown sugar
5 large eggs
4 cups all-bran cereal
2 qt. buttermilk
5½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
5 tsps. baking soda
1 tbsp. salt
¼ cup natural bran
2 cups raisins
½ cup freshly grated orange rind

Soak bran bud cereal in boiling water. In large clean dishpan measure the shortening and sugars and cream together until light. Beat in eggs. Add alternately the all-bran cereal and buttermilk. Sift together the sifted flour, baking soda and salt. Add along with natural bran. Finally fold in the bran-bud-water mixture, raisins and orange rind. Do not overstir. Store in two tightly covered 2-qt. size plastic containers. Do not stir after storing. Store for 1 day before using.

When ready to use, scoop up portions of batter with spoon large enough to fill twelve 2½" muffin cups two-thirds full. Be careful not to stir batter below. Replace cover. Bake at 400 deg. F. — 18 min.

NOTE: Betty and her daughter Donna carried out this entire experiment for me over a seven-week period. Each Monday morning Betty would arrive with my weekly sample of batter. Monday, Thursday, from the seventh batch was just as good as the first. Improbable but true.

Eloquent Poem 'Prayer for Today' Delights Reader; Others to Share

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: You certainly are a wonderful friend in need— because I received a copy of Prayer for Today—my favorite prayer — all via you and your remarkable memory. I.

I am also going to write directly to the reader who supplied you with this prayer poem — all for me.

Honestly the world would be perfect — if there were more people made of the same ingredients that you are — living in same. I shall always cherish this poem. — Many Blessings

Dear Blessings: There is a special thrill to getting your hands on an old friend, isn't there? Even if that friend is just something on paper which gives you a lift.

I think the Prayer for Today is particularly eloquent and would be glad to share it with anyone who writes in. (Readers: It is the one which starts: "Lord, in the quiet of this morning hour. . ." Please enclose 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

* * *

Dear Doris: The highly perishable Vitamin C — my student have given me quite a knowledge of it. This is not exactly human realtions, but

1. After the orange has been squeezed, how long does it take before the juice is only worthy of being dumped out?

2. For anyone living alone, or two people, it is impossible to drink a can made up with added water, at one breakfast.

2. I was told by a young housewife that there was positively no good drinking it by the next morning.

This juice was kept covered in the frig.

By now I am sure you are willing to put me in the deep freeze — but I was amazed to see a half container go down the sink. I nearly called Dr. McCready at University of Guelph, to settle the dispute. Orange Blossom.

Dear Orange: Dr. Mac would have blown a gasket!

1. Latest findings are that any type of citrus juice loses very little Vitamin C even after four days in the refrigerator. Even adding boiling water to orange juice does not damage its Vitamin C.

2. Canned and frozen orange juice also retains its Vitamin C. Go ahead and make up a can in a large pitcher, to be consumed over two or three days, if you like. The only juice which loses its Vitamin C quickly is apple juice.

3. Besides Vitamin C fruits and fruit juices are high in als, especially iron. Such juices add desirable liquid to the diet, as well as helping to satisfy that sweet tooth.

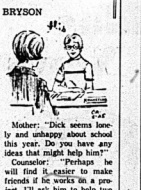
Dear Doris: What is the difference, if you go out in the summer, or now? Please give me an answer, so I can tell my mother. She just doesn't trust me. — Stuck

Dear Stuck: She may think that in the holidays you won't be working your way through school. And there's that bothersome fact that dating sometimes puts a 14-year-old like you on a spot she'd like to avoid. There is such a thing as anxiety for your welfare. Slow down a little — although I know it isn't easy.

Anonymous letters are bad manners and may be ignored. When writing in, give Doris your right name and address. It will be kept confidential.



Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Dick: "I hate junior high school. All the kids are dopes. I don't even want them for friends."

Mother: "I thought you would like it and find it interesting. Why don't you try to be more friendly?"

Mother: "Dick seems lonely and unhappy about school this year. Do you have any ideas that might help him?"

Father: "Perhaps he will find it easier to make friends if he works on a project. I'll ask him to help two of the other boys run the projector for the educational movies."

The change to junior high school comes at a time when children are emotionally vulnerable, and the atmosphere of a larger school may seem frightening and unfriendly. Ask teachers, principal or counselors for help if your child seems to be consistently unhappy about school.

Surprise Anniversary Party Held

TWEED — The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hinchey, of PR 4, Arden, was the scene of a happy and memorable event, recently, when over 50 guests visited to extend congratulations and "Surprise" to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hinchey of RR 4, Arden on the occasion of their 35th wedding anniversary.

The couple were married May 2, 1936. Their attendants were Ian and Mrs. Bill Brown of RR 4, Napanee, who were unable to be present.

The attractive decorations in the house and the beautifully decorated wedding cake, which adorned the cake table, the arrangements for the "Open House" were the work of Marcelline Brown-week period. Each Monday morning Betty would arrive with my weekly sample of batter. Monday, Thursday, from the seventh batch was just as good as the first. Improbable but true.

Mrs. Pauline Hinchey and Mrs. Madeline Hinchey.

Presiding at the tea table during the afternoon and evening were Miss Paula Baker and Miss Penny Hinchey, great nieces of the couple.

Out-of-town guests from Toronto, Oshawa, Kaladar, Napanee, Strathcona and Inverary.

'Lot of Dissatisfaction' Among Liberals Reported by Hellyer

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Hellyer, who resigned Friday from the Liberal caucus, said Sunday there "is a lot of dissatisfaction" within the Liberal party.

He doubted, however, there would be further defections.

Mr. Hellyer's resignation came in the wake of an announcement last week by Toronto backbencher Philip Givens that he will give up his Commons seat to run in the next Ontario election as a Liberal.

Former communications minister Eric Kierans recently resigned his cabinet post but remained within the caucus.

Speaking Sunday on CBC's national television program Weekend, Mr. Hellyer said the majority opinion has been "relegated to the background" and government has not been cooperating with private business as common partners.

He said Canadians should strive to recognize their interdependence and common goals.

The former cabinet minister, who will hold a news conference at Ottawa Tuesday to announce the plans of a new political movement, Action Canada, said the "moral aspects" of government policies—such as creating unemployment deliberately to fight inflation—had driven him to form the new group. It was to give the Canadian majority an opportunity to express its views.

He disagreed with the trend encouraging welfare, and increased unemployment insurance as a substitute for jobs.

Friday's resignation was not Mr. Hellyer's first public dispute with party leadership. After losing the leadership contest to Prime Minister Trudeau, he resigned from the cabinet over what he termed economic differences.

Mr. Hellyer said he will sit as an Independent Liberal and will run in the next federal election in his Trinity riding.

Givens Finds Fighting for City Hall Hard So He Switches His Battle to Legislature

TORONTO (CP) — Fighting city hall is one thing. But fighting for city hall is another.

And after four years as a Liberal backbencher in Ottawa, former Toronto mayor Philip Givens will tell you that fighting federally for city hall is a lot tougher.

Thursday he announced he will resign his federal seat to run in the Toronto York-Forest Hill riding in the next provincial election. He figures that will be a better way to make Ottawa aware of the needs of the cities.

It's a need he obviously feels deeply. But of his efforts and those by others to do something, he said the reaction often was a skilfully wielded stiletto from Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Givens said he knew early in his federal career that an argument with the prime minister had cost him his chance for his "corporal stripes" in Parliament, but what really disturbed him was the realization that the Commons had no system to use or recognize an MP's qualifications and abilities.

Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon has promised him the urban affairs portfolio if his party forms a government. This, says Mr. Givens, will provide him with another lance to prod Ottawa into greater involvement in urban affairs.

"But remember, I've got to burn my bridges behind me," he said in an interview with The Canadian Press. "If my opponents lose, they still remain in public life."

"But if I lose, I drop that big salary increase, the pension rights for which I have to go through another election, my seat and there's no road back.

"It's a big commitment which shows this is not a capricious act of opportunism. It is a decision I made because I feel so very, very strongly about it."

The decision came, Mr. Givens said, after squabbles in caucus, being thrust on the defensive by the bureaucracy and being ignored when he felt he had something to contribute.

Mr. Givens said Prime Minister Trudeau once told the caucus he liked members to disagree and criticize.

"Yet whenever we would, there was a way he had of sort of delivering the stiletto so that you realized that you weren't exactly Number 1 boy."

Another caucus discussion concerning cities saw Mr. Givens supported by "13 or 14 MPs . . . and the PM got up and said 'maybe some of you guys should have run in the provincial legislature instead of coming here.'"

Mr. Givens said the prime minister later apologized.

Another clash with Mr. Trudeau over cities took place in front of reporters at a Liberal policy conference in Harrison Hot Springs, B.C. which made a couple of headlines the next day.

Mr. Givens says that probably ruled out any hope he had for a cabinet post although he really never expected because he hadn't served his Commons "apprenticeship."

"Right then and there I knew that I had lost whatever chance I had of corporal stripes but what really stunned me was that I couldn't really believe, having been a politician so long, that my judgment had been so outrageously wrong about the subject matter we argued about.

"My main beef was not the portfolio. The tragedy of the Parliamentary institution is that it has not been able to devise a system where an MP with reasonable qualifications and abilities can play a useful role."

As mayor of Toronto from 1963 to 1966, he had overseen development of a new and striking city hall. His office had a desk console with 34 buttons so he could personally talk to department heads.

"You were able to influence things and everybody knew what your thinking was."

But Ottawa was "a situation where you're accorded a monastic cell of about 10 by 12 and one secretary and one telephone. You'd be amazed about the amount of howling I had to do until the MPs got a second telephone line."

"It's this business of serving an apprenticeship. I had served an apprenticeship of 15 years and had run a city and been involved with a city of two million people.

"The budget of my city was bigger than the budgets of seven of the 10 provinces. The population of my city was bigger than the population of eight of the 10 provinces.

"So how much of an apprenticeship do you serve before being asked to do something really significant?"

"The order of the priorities as far as I was concerned was very slow in developing and as far as I was concerned we just wasted four years.

"The government is a dinosaur and it is not responsive to the urgent, modern problems of today. It responds as sort of a reflex action. The danger looms up and blogs, we shout at it and there's a panic. But there's no forethought."

These and other comments came out in the 90-minute interview with CP. Following is an edited report of the interview.

Q. What happens to a government backbencher who criticizes?

A. You can criticize once or twice and then you become sort of ostracized. There's a sending to Coventry. There's a very subtle kind of censure and you begin to realize that you've been done in and the system just doesn't encompass this sort of thing. I think that's bad because the MP becomes nothing but a rubber stamp. He becomes like a nut in a tool kit where every so often you're asked to screw something in for them.

Q. Describe your April 29 meeting with Mr. Trudeau when you announced your intention to resign.

A. I felt that as my leader he had a right of veto and I was staying as a loyal Liberal. Secondly, if what I was going to do provincially was going to bear fruit then I had to have his goodwill because, after all, if I become minister of urban affairs, I'm going to be coming back as a sovereign subject instead of a jerky MP.

Q. Why did you shift to provincial politics?

A. Because of the slowness of proceedings in Ottawa there is no question that constitutionally, legally—the prime responsibilities for the cities is provincial and the Ottawa involvement would have to be a slow process of consultation and co-ordination over a period of time. I just felt that I'd maybe be more comfortable if I came to the place where there was the legal provision, where there was the responsibility and as a person with authority.

Q. Do you see any parallels between Mr. Hellyer's resignation announced Friday and yours?

A. No. I was hoping he was going to come my way but he decided not to.

Q. Had he been asked to join Mr. Nixon?

A. Well, I asked him for one. But he now lives in Ottawa and he has his family up there.

Q. If you are elected, how would you deal with Ottawa as provincial urban affairs minister?

A. On the basis of one government dealing with another government. I would encourage them on the things on which I think they should be encouraged on. What we have to have to start with is a brand new basis of tri-level consultations. It is absolutely imperative that the cities of the country be plugged into Confederation.

Q. Will the role of the cities be one of the major areas of your campaign?

A. Yes it will. This sort of thing doesn't have a great deal of glamor but if it isn't done then the horrible results of the failure to do this will loom very large in the next five to 10 years.

Q. What are your views on regional government in Ontario?

A. I don't think anything's been done since these proposals have been introduced. People are very unhappy in various areas and I think there's got to be a complete re-examination.

Q. Would this be your job as urban affairs minister?

A. This is one of the things I would have to tackle. It would probably become my area of responsibility.

Mohawk Ceremony Becoming Major Quinte Attraction

By JENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The annual re-enactment of the Mohawk landing at Deseronto is fast becoming a major attraction in the Quinte area.

More than 200 persons were on hand Sunday for luncheon at the Council House and more were believed to have attended the service at the cairn on the shore of the bay in Deseronto in the morning.

With the revival of the Mohawk language and culture on the Tyendinaga Reserve, the re-enactment day is becoming bigger and better and drawing spectators from throughout the district and beyond.

New this year was the Indian music and dancing at the Council House following the luncheon.

Sixteen pupils of Mrs. Lorraine Hill's grade 3 class at Western Indian Day School performed for the audience, accompanied by their instructor, David Maracle, a Moira Secondary School student researcher of Indian lore who sang the chants. Following the children's performance, David and Carl D. Brant teamed up in a Souix war dance. Since the Mohawks have no war dances of their own.

The day began at 9 a.m. when a canoe slipped ashore at the landing spot, re-creating the moment on May 22, 1784, when a party of Mohawk refugees from the United States loyal to the British crown during the American Revolution, came ashore to claim their lands at Tyendinaga.

Immediately upon landing, the original Mohawks upturned a canoe, and led by the catachist with the band gave thanks according to Anglican liturgy for their safe arrival.

Sunday, it was senior catachist Earl J. Brant who performed the re -enactment of the historic ceremony as he placed the Queen Anne, silver, a gift from the British sovereign in 1711, on the upturned canoe before the cairn.

Delwin Claus and David Maracle offered prayers in Mohawk during the ceremony, and Rt. Rev. Neville E. Clarke, Bishop of James Bay, gave a brief address.

The young Grade 3 dancers were on hand to augment the choir of Christ Church and sing Mohawk hymns.

A service at the church followed, with the Queen Anne silver in use for communion and Bishop Clarke taking part in the service.

Members of the band and visitors were served luncheon at the Council House where Indian corn soup was featured on the menu.

At the festivities in the afternoon Mrs. Lena Elliott, a teacher for 38 years on the reserve, was made an honorary member of the band. She first moved to the Reserve with her family when she was 12 years old and remained to teach until her retirement this year.

Chief Earl Hill gave Mrs. Elliott the indian name of Kwatsihsonni, "faithful flower".

Russell Moses, executive assistant to the minister of Indian Affairs was special speaker, and cited the Mohawk Landing day and the interest it has aroused as an example of "the way Indians can live together with their white friends" and "an example of co-operation".

Half Arabian Horse Show Thrills Crowd

The second annual Eastern Ontario Half Arabian Horse Show was run off in the rain at Exhibition Park Monday afternoon.

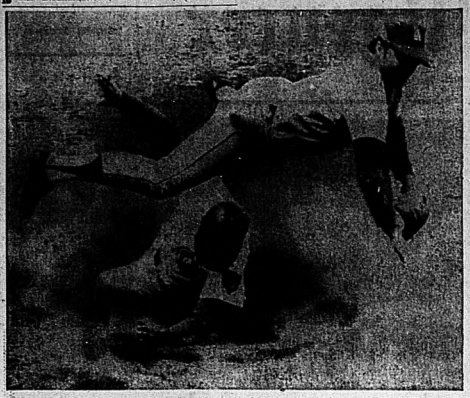
Amera Sagira, a gelding owned by Peter Slauwhite of Lakeview, N.Y., emerged as Western pleasure champion, and Pinoak's Starzam, a gelding owned by Warren Whitley of Belleville, became English pleasure champion.

Champion mare in the halter class was Raggaty Indi, owned by Ann Badley of Toronto and champion halter class gelding was 'Bout Time, owned by Marianne Porter of Ridgeway, Ont.

Two geldings tied for high points in the show with 20 points each. They were Amera Sagira and Pinoak's Starzam. Reserve high point horse with 17 points was 'Bout Time.

The racing events stirred up some excitement, with two men taking bad spills and being removed to Belleville General Hospital by St. John Ambulance in the corps' new ambulance. They were treated for the shaking up and released. Two riders also tumbled off their mounts in the jumping competitions.

Jo-Anne McNevin on her mare, King's Crystal, won the half - mile race and Louri McCullock of Whitby on Jay R won the half-mile trotting event.



Winner of the Half - Arabian jumper class was Desert Sand, owned by Marion Birch of Newmarket, and winner of the open jumper class was XL, owned by David Koval of Kingston.

Cindy Whitley of Belleville entered four of the five junior classes and won three — showmanship, English equitation and Western equitation. Her sister Kim won the under-14 showmanship class.

Winner of the $100 stake in the Western riding class was Dahmar, owned by Gordon McKay of Hillsdale, Ont., and top hunter hack was 'Bout Time.

Entries for the show totalled 94 and eight purebred Arabian stallions were on display.

Highlight of the show was a demonstration of top horsemanship, by Cindy Neale of Toronto, a member of Canada's Pan - American team. She rode a thoroughbred gelding, Bon Heur.

Williams Hit .400 for Boston, Manages .500 AGAINST Them

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ted Williams, once a .400 hitter for Boston Red Sox, is now a .500 manager against them.

Williams' Washington Senators, last in the American League East, turned on the division-leading Red Sox 8-6 Monday night, snapping an eight-game losing streak.

The victory was the 20th in 40 games for the one-time Boston hero as a manager against the Red Sox and sliced their lead to 9½ games over idle Baltimore Orioles.

In National League play Monday, San Diego Padres knocked Bob Gibson out in the fourth inning and routed St. Louis Cardinals 13-3, Philadelphia Phillies edged Cincinnati Reds 2-1 and Atlanta Braves toppled Montreal Expos 9-4.

The Senators took their lumps during the weekend, losing 5-0 and 11-0 Sunday and 3-1 Saturday to Detroit Tigers.

In other American League action during the weekend, Milwaukee Brewers blanked Kansas City Royal 4-0; California Angels downed Chicago White Sox 10-5; Baltimore Orioles split a doubleheader with Boston Red Sox, winning the first 12-3 and dropping the second 2-1; and New York Yankees tripped Cleveland Indians 6-3 while the Indians rebounded in the nightcap 2-1 in Sunday games.

Saturday, Baltimore took Boston 5-2, Chicago drubbed California 13-0, Oakland defeated Minnesota 3-1, Cleveland nipped New York 2-1 and Milwaukee throttled Kansas City 12-0.

The National League had a full schedule Saturday and Sunday.

Los Angeles Dodgers clipped Chicago Cubs 4-3, St. Louis defeated San Diego 6-1; New York Mets blanked Atlanta 4-0, Cincinnati edged Philadelphia 4-3., San Francisco Giants handled Houston Astros 7-4 and Montreal downed Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2 in Sunday games.

The Saturday action saw Chicago down Los Angeles 5-2, New York nip Atlanta 8-7, Philadelphia defeat Cincinnati 5-3, Montreal club Pittsburgh 5-2, St. Louis outhit San Diego 7-6 and Houston edge San Francisco 2-1.

The Senators rolled into Boston having lost 18 of their previous 21 games and having scored one lone run while dropping a four-game weekend series in Detroit.

That changed quickly. With Frank Howard belting a two-run homer, his first in Boston since 1960, the Senators jumped on Bill Lee for five runs in the first inning.

But the Sox clipped Casey Cox for a run in their half of the first and shelled him in the third with Carl Yastrzemski hitting a two-run homer and Billy Conigliaro a three-run job.

"When we blew that lead I was ready to take the gas pipe," said Williams. "I just thought, oh, hell, here we go again."

"However, we got great relief pitching—and I mean great—by Joe Grzenda and Paul Lindblad."

Grzenda allowed only one hit in three innings before leaving for a pinch hitter and Lindblad worked three hitless frames.

Meanwhile, the Senators nicked Bob Rodin for the tying run in the sixth and got the winner in the seventh on doubles by Joe Foy and Paul Casanova.

Clarence Gaston and Dave Campbell led San Diego's assault against St. Louis and prevented the Cardinals from moving into first place in the National League East.

Gaston drove in four runs with three singles while Campbell also had four RBI with his fifth homer, a two-run triple and bases-loaded walk. Gibson, 4-5, was raked for nine hits and seven runs in three innings-plus.

Philadelphia's Denny Doyle, with only four home runs in his big league career, connected with a runner aboard in the second inning, enabling the Phils to nip the Reds 2-1 behind the six-hit pitching of Rick Wise.

Orlando Cepeda broke a 3-3 tie with a two-run homer in the fifth inning and Felix Millan doubled home three runs in the ninth as the Braves trounced the Expos. Ron Fairly and Garry Sutherland homered for Montreal.

Artful Dodger

Los Angeles Dodgers' second baseman Jim Lefebvre makes like a bird as he wings ball to first base to complete double play after forcing out Johnny Callison at second base Sunday in Chicago. Action came in second inning when Chris Cannizzaro of Chicago Cubs grounded to shortstop Maury Wills who flipped to Lefebvre. Dodgers won 4-3. (AP Wirephoto)

Only One Year Old...

Tier System Under Fire

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — The one-year-old system of dividing Canadian junior hockey into two levels was attacked as a device "that can destroy hockey on the junior level" as the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association began its week-long meetings here Monday.

Ray Mitchell of Thunder Bay told the CAHA's junior council the two-level system was "legally and morally unsound. . . . It's destined to destroy hockey on the junior level."

The meeting voted in favor of a motion asking that the two-level system be abolished and that all junior clubs be eligible to compete for the Memorial Cup, the trophy presented to the national Junior A championship team. The CAHA will consider the motion later this week.

The junior clubs are now divided into two levels or tiers, Major Junior A or level one and Junior A or level two. The major clubs, represented by three leagues in Canada, compete for the Memorial Cup and the other juniors for the Centennial Cup.

The three Major Junior A leagues are the Western Canada Hockey League, the Ontario Hockey Association and the Quebec Amateur Hockey League.

Mitchell, a member of the Thunder Bay delegation which represents a level-two league, said the level-two teams have been "degraded and the whole concept of junior hockey has also been degraded.

"Let's dispense with the two levels and return to Junior A and B. If we in Thunder Bay or those in Newfoundland can't make the Memorial Cup final, let competition be the judge."

Ron Butlin, president of the WCHL, said the tier system has worked reasonably well despite the problems on both levels.

In other business, the association's financial report showed a deficit of $27,209 for th yeard ended March 31, despite an increase of 2,398 players on CAHA cards. The total number of registered players is 17,908.

Woman's Touch

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Retta Herrington, one of the few women drivers on the Golden Horseshoe circuit, ignored a sloppy track Monday as she guided Chapel Hill, to victory in the featured seventh race at Garden City raceway.

The 5-year-old trotting mare, with only two wins in her past 20 starts, nipped two other horses at the wire. She who by a nose over Aunt Thelma, and two noses over Strike One.

Chapel Hill trotted the mile in 2:06 2-5 and paid $13.10, $6.80 and $4.10.

A crowd of 4,381 wagered $173,411.

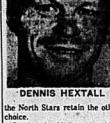
Stars Swapping

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota North Stars acquired homestate products Gary Gambucci and Bob Paradise from Montreal Canadiens today, the final day for trades in the National Hockey League.



General manager Wren Blair said left winger Gambucci, from Hibbing, and Paradise, a defenceman from St. Paul, were obtained for cash and a rearrangement in the amateur draft agreements between the two teams.

The deal was the second major trade swung by the North Stars in the last three days. Minnesota obtained centre Dennis Hextall from California Golden Seals Saturday in exchange for minor league centres Walt McKechnie and Joe Johnston.

Blair said he has hopes of making additional moves before tonight's midnight trading deadline.

Gambucci and Paradise are the third and fourth Minnesotans added to the North Stars' roster since the team joined the NHL four seasons ago. The others are right winger Lou Nanne, still with the club, and centre Tom Williams, since traded to California.

The amount paid for the new players was not revealed. The deal included a flip-flop of arrangements for the 1972 amateur draft, in which Minnesota holds two first-round picks. Montreal had rights to use the lower of the two, and now can use the higher selection while the North Stars retain the other choice.

DENNIS HEXTALL

Gambucci, 24, was a high school All-American player at Hibbing and an All-American in his senior year at the University of Minnesota. He has played the last three years for the U.S. National, scoring 51 goals and 47 assists in 56 games last season.

Paradise, 27, played minor league hockey for Omaha in the Central League two years ago and Montreal Voyageurs in the American League last year.

No Competition, Morris Makes Pan-Am Grade

The only entry in the 242-pound heavyweight class at Saturday's Canadian Senior Weightlifting Championships here, Morris practically left to a 975-pound total, 65 pounds less than he hoisted in April to win the Ontario Senior title in Belleville.

Being the lone heavyweight entered in Saturday's contest, Morris' effort was good enough to regain the Canadian title he held for five years before losing two years ago. But coach Carr-Brant was less than enthused about Morris' total, which qualified him as a member of the Canadian weightlifting contingent to July's Pan-American Games in Cali, Colombia.

"He just barely made the standard, and he needed a 300 clean-and-jerk to do it," Carr-Brant sighed with relief. "It was almost impossible for Price to come up with a good total lifting by himself."

Defending Canadian and British Commonwealth champion Russ Prior was supposed to provide the other half of the heavyweight rivalry Saturday, but the young Hamilton lifter failed to file an entry or show up, an increasingly frequent habit of his.

Prior was the gold medallist at last summer's Edinburgh Commonwealth Games, compiling a Canadian record 1,000-pound three-lift total. Morris won a bronze medal with 1,035 pounds. Their next head-to-head competition came in Belleville at the Ontario senior championships. Prior also failed to file an entry for that meet, but turned up "in a great lifter" and was bested 1,040 - 1,010 by Morris.

Not showing up for Saturday's "rubber" match cost Prior any chance of being named to Canada's Pan-Am Games team.

Price Morris' selection marked the third time the Frankford lifter has been chosen to represent Canada in international competition. He competed in the 1967 Pan-Am Games in Winnipeg and in last summer's Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh.

In addition to Morris, the 1971 Canadian Pan-Am weightlifting team will include Chin Hon Chan, Montreal, who won Saturday's flyweight (114-pound) class with a record 655-pound total; featherweight (132-pound) Hilal Denis Dube, Quebec City; lightweight (148-pound) champion Pierre Charbonneau of Montreal; middleweights (165-pound) Keith Adams of Surrey, B.C., and Craig Bowman of Hamilton; light-heavyweight (181-pound) Earl Jack, Hamilton, and middle heavyweight (198-pound) Wayne Wilson, Vancouver, and runner-up Aldo Roy of Ottawa.

Team coach will be Vancouver's Wes Woo, and manager will be Philip Saint-Cyr of Montreal.

Middleweight Paul Barrett came the closest to making the team of the other four Apollo Club entrants in Saturday's contest. Barrett was runner-up in his class with an 810-pound total, 15 less than the Pan - Am Games qualifying standard. He had a 330-pound clean-and-jerk overhead that would have placed him on the team, but couldn't hold on.

Gary Wall's 870-pound total placed him third in middle-heavyweight ranks, while brother Bob was fifth in the same class. Younger brother Art Walt put together an 845-pound total for second place among light-heavyweight entries.

Carol Armstrong examines her most unusual piece of archery work to date after she finds her arrow embedded in the top of a competitor's shaft at the Ontario Provincial Open Archery Championships in Kitchener this weekend. It was the first time that the former Canadian champion had ever accomplished the feat, known appropriately enough as "Robin Hood" arrow flaw a distance of 50 yards before scoring a direct hit on the shaft already embedded in the target. Mrs. Armstrong was in second place at the completion of the first half of tournament competition.

Two City Archers In Title Contention

Two Belleville archers are in serious contention for titles at the Canadian Open Archery Championships, which completed the first half of competition at Kitchener this weekend.

Former Canadian champion Carol Armstrong is currently holding down second spot in the women's open competition, while relative newcomer Bruce Thompson is pacing the field at a record - setting clip in the men's intermediate field.

Mrs. Armstrong trails the leader by 181 points but could easily close the gap with a strong showing in the second half of the tournament next weekend. She has only entered the Ontario championships once, previously and is seeking her first provincial title.

Thompson, a Belleville high school student, has been engaged in archery for only three months, but the lack of experience hasn't proved to be any handicap. He has only to maintain his current shooting pace to establish a new provincial record in his event.

The third local competitor entered in the championships is Floyd Armstrong, currently placed eighth in the men's open event.

Minutes after the Bears' tyke competitor and his teammates finished their warm-ups however, they were sent scurrying for cover by an evening shower that washed out the three tyke Minor Softball Association bouts scheduled as well as the league openers for the Commercial and Industrial softball loops.

Softball Openers Weekend Washout

The 1971 Belleville softball season received a somewhat less - than - auspicious greeting from the weatherman Monday night as all action was rained out.

The Commercial Softball League opening double header featuring Rollins against Howard and Robert Printing and Point Anne taking on the Ellis Juniors, was postponed until next Sunday evening at 7 p.m.

Barrig further rain, the league is scheduled to open its season with Point Anne meeting Quinte Hotel in a 7 p.m. encounter at the Alemite and the Ellis Juniors opening against Howard and Robert.

A trio of scheduled Industrial League openers went down the drain as well and will be re-scheduled for this weekend.

Tonight's Industrial action will pit Unemployment Insurance Commission against AOCO at Prince Charles diamond and the Post Office meeting the Morch Mariners at Prince of Wales. Industrial League games begin at 6.30 p.m.

The final softball entry to come up with wet feet was the Belleville Minor Softball Association, which will also re-schedule the games for this coming weekend.

The minor softball body hopes to open its season tonight with a trio of peewee contests — weather permitting.

Ump's Decision Costly

NEW YORK (AP) — An umpire who had called the balls and strikes at a neighborhood softball game in Brooklyn Sunday was paid $2 but demanded $5.

In the argument which followed, one player produced a shotgun and fatally shot him in the head.

The dead man was identified as Eddie Sanabria, 23, of Brooklyn.

The gunman fled.

Adams Opens on No-hit Note

The defending champion Plaine's Concrete squad wasted little time in establishing themselves as the team to beat in the South Hastings league this season.

The Cannifton team blanked Latta 7-0 in their opener Saturday night and added a second coat of whitewash Sunday as they smothered the Reserve 18-0.

Righthander Garnie Adams pitched a brilliant no - hitter in the Saturday opener, missing a perfect game when he walked the lead-off batter in the top of the eighth inning.

The slender firebatter struck out 15 batters and issued only the one walk in the contest that was called after eight innings because of darkness.

John Hill absorbed the loss for Latta giving up 12 hits walking two and striking out a pair. His teammates committed two fielding miscues, while Adams was backed with errorless support by his Plaine's mates.

Ron Urch paced the winners with a homer and double with, Warren Hay notching a double and single and Larry Lewis and John Tweedy chipping in two singles apiece.

Ted Abrams came back Sunday to hurl a six - hit shutout against the Reserve. He set down 14 on strikes, while walking two and getting errorless fielding support.

CARNIE ADAMS

Hill and Maracle took the loss walking nine and fanning an equal number. Their teammates committed six errors.

Larry Lewis banged a homer, double and single for Plaine's, while Abrams aided his own cause with a homer and Garney Adams lined two singles.

Saunders had a pair of safeties for the Reserve.

Kinsmen Baseball Juniors Face First Test Wednesday

The Belleville Kinsmen Junior entry in the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association will get its initial test of the season Wednesday night when they meet Kendal Intermediates in the first of 34 regular season games.

"We've got the makings of a good team here" offered coach "Moe" Horner of his junior baseball charges. "We're shooting for the wins over the regular season.

A strong point on the Kinsmen figures to be the pitching rotation which features last year's regulars Garnie Adams and Terry McTaggart is starring roles with newcomers Ted Shaw and Stan Brooks slated for relief.

Shaw was a former standout hurler in the Belleville Minor Baseball Association, while Brooks is a graduate of last year's midget all-stars.

Belleville baseball fans will be able to purchase season's tickets this year from any of the Kinsmen Junior baseball executive as well as from the Cosy Grill, Thomas Cigar Store and the Queen's Hotel.

The $5 price tag will provide admission to the 12 regularly-scheduled home games as well as a proposed half-dozen exhibition tilts. Most Kinsmen home games will be played at the Belleville fairgrounds Wednesday nights, with a few slated for Sunday afternoons.

The first 100 children attending Wednesday night's opener with an adult will receive free soft drinks and potato chips.

The contest with Kendal is slated to start at 8 p.m. at the fairgrounds with special pre - game ceremonies commencing at 7:45.

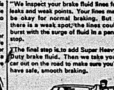
Riding System Service
Brake Reline $24.88
Disc brakes and/or broken bars extra



"When we reline your brakes, we do a lot more than reline your brakes!"
"Even if all we did was replace your worn lined linings, we'd still do a great bargain. We use only the finest quality bonded linings. They've guaranteed for 20,000 miles, assuming the rest of the braking system is in good condition. So you get good value for your money.
"But we go a lot farther than that. Because as Riding System specialists, it's our responsibility to make sure that every car that leaves our service center is in safe operating condition.
"We start by 'arcing' your new linings on our precision grinder. This helps to ensure that they will make good contact with the drums for safe braking. We also inspect your brake drums to be sure they are true, to make contact over the full surface of the linings.

"Then we install the new brake linings. But our job is far from finished.

"We examine your wheel cylinders and your master cylinder for leaks. If you've got problems, we'll let you know.

"Then we inspect your brake shoe return springs. There is one spring on each wheel. If the spring tension is uneven, your car will pull to one side when you brake. So it's important to know about their condition.

"We next step in to remove your inner and outer front wheel bearings. We clean them carefully, inspect them for flaws. And then re-pack them with a top-quality grease. This could save you money. Because wheel bearings can be badly damaged if the original grease has caked and dried.

"We inspect your brake fluid lines for leaks and weak points. Your lines may be okay for normal braking. But if there is a weak spot, the lines could burst with the surge of fluid in a panic stop.
"The final step is to add Super Heavy-Duty brake fluid. Then we take your car out on the road to make sure you'll have safe, smooth braking.

"As you can see, $24.88 goes a long way at Firestone. We install top quality linings in all four wheels. We clean and re-pack your wheel bearings. And we check the total braking system for safe operation. And that's a great bargain in anybody's language."
*This offer includes brake linings, brake fluid, grease, and service described in this advertisement. If other parts and services are required, you will be advised before hand of additional costs.

Taylor Almost Hidden Among Riders' High School Hopefuls

OTTAWA (CP) — Eight young men—five from Ottawa and one each from Almonte, Ont., Windsor, Ont., and Sudbury—were chosen Monday as possible winners of football scholarships to United States universities.

They were the prime prospects at an annual high school camp held by Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference.

Almost hidden in the prevalent long hair of the about 75 scholarship hopefuls was flanker Bobby Taylor, late of Toronto Argonauts, who was working out with new Rough Rider quarterback Rick Cassata.

Even Taylor, waived through the Canadian League by the Argos, went away happy, with contract offer from general-manager Frank Clair in his pocket. He said he'd let Ottawa know his plans by midweek.

The top prospects at the camp were Eric Upton of Ottawa, a 6-4, 213-pounder, who was named lineman of the camp and got spot offers from three U.S. universities, including Colorado State which was represented by Kay Dalton, former coach of Montreal Alouettes. The top halfback at the camp was Ray Maynard, 5-10 and 185 pounds from Almonte.

Baseball Fireworks Start Early

The Cobleview tadpoles started their May 24th fireworks a little early as they blasted Motorland Chrysler 15-6 Monday afternoon as the Belleville Minor Baseball Association house league opened the 1971 season.

Lorne Andrews and Mike Lazier combined to fire two-hit ball for Cobleview striking out 15 batters and allowing only three walks.

Losing hurlers Tim Turner and Allan Maikawa were touched for seven safeties.

Louis Crawford belted a homer for the winners while Lorne Andrews added a double and single and Dan Coughlin a double. Kenny Kent and Allan Maikawa collected the only safeties for Motorland.

In peewee action Golden Mile took the measure of Trenton Legion by a 10-2 count getting three - hit pitching from Brian Lawrence, while Golden Mile batter fanned one batter and gave up four walks.

Peterson and Nokes toiled for tdh losers allowing six hits and as many walks, while getting one batter on strikes.

In the other peewee bout contested Canadian Legion 9s buried Fitzgibbon Construction 14-6.

Mike Burke and Chris Masterson looked after the pitching chores allowing only a triple to Steve Cameron while striking out seven batters and walking an equal number. Elton Van Bolkenburg and Larry Denike were touched for 15 hits in a losing effort.

Jeff Dean and Mike Burke paced the Legion with a homer and single each, while Grant Bolton added a triple and two singles.

Towers' All-Star Tykes Face Two Different Fates

Belleville's Towers Food City tyke representatives were faced with vastly different fates in their opening minor baseball encounters this week-end.

The Towers tykes were edged 11-10 Monday by Kingston after snowing under Lindsay 41-5 in a Saturday afternoon encounter.

Dale McTaggart and Greg McEachern allowed ten hits in absorbing the loss Sunday, walking five batters and fanning eight. Don Witheridge and Ron Skeggs fired 13-hit ball for the winning Kingston squad.

Ken Revoy blasted a homer and two singles for Towers, while Marty Henderson collected three safeties and Dale McTaggart a pair.

McTaggart and Paul Marineau combined for a one-hit-ter against Lindsay and were aided by a 31-hit barrage by their teammates.

Bruce Bell provided some heavy hitting help with a homer, double and two singles, while Greg McEachern rifled two triples and two doubles, and Mark Crawford had a triple and four bags knocks. Ken Revoy, Paul Marineau and Peter Manderville all included a home run in their two hits.

In the only other all-star contest played on the week-end the Conductors and Brakemen stopped 7-5 Saturday by Kingston.

Peter Hall and Bill Whalen allowed six hits while striking eight and striking out the same number of batters as they absorbed the Belleville loss. The trainmen managed six safeties off winning hurler Jeff Bennett.

Mike Burke had a triple and two singles for Belleville, while Paul Wells, Clyde Rowley and Howie Coons collected the other hits.

Sports on All Fronts

MONTREAL (CP) — Le Journal de Montreal says Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings has played his last National Hockey League game and will officially retire during the team's training camp next fall.

Quoting what he calls a reliable source, Jacques Beauchamp says in his daily column that the 43-year-old Howe finished last season in pain and decided to retire before what would be his 26th NHL season.

Howe picked up 23 goals and 29 assists in 63 games last season but was hampered by a wrist injury which required surgery.

The reports says the veteran right winger will report to training camp at the beginning of September but retire before the regular season begins.

Hockey Bill Joke

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Gov. Wendell Anderson was blasted Thursday by stack of bills on his desk awaiting his signature when one abolishing the game of ice hockey caught his eye.

"We asked if they really passed the thing," an aide said Monday.

Martin Sabo, a political ally of the governor, was listed as the main author.

"He was going to veto it," Anderson's aide said, until several staff members could no longer contain the secret that the bill was a phoney.

It had been slipped into a stack of bills the governor was checking before signing into law.

The bill said hockey produces "an overabundance of aggressiveness, mayhem and pugnacity" among players who "sometimes become politicians" and continue "to be superaggressive as they were as players."

Because of this ill effect, the phoney bill stated, the game of hockey is abolished. Violation carried a $10,000 fine and two years in jail.

Anderson, 38, played hockey at the University of Minnesota and in the 1956 Olympics. He continues to play amateur hockey in a senior league in St. Paul.

One Shot Makes Hay For Littler

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — "One shot has a way of turning a whole tournament around," said Gene Littler, admittedly a little dazed at his triumph in the $125,000 Colonial National Invitation event.

"Without that eagle Saturday, I didn't have a chance of winning."

Littler set out Sunday five strokes behind pace-setting Julius Boros and trailing 11 members of the field. In the end, it was Boros, Tommy Aaron, George Knudson, Homero Blancas, Dave Stockton, Bert Yancey and Littler locked in a title fight with the tricky, swirling winds.

Littler fashioned a 69 for a 72-hole total of 280, three over par, the highest winning total in a PGA-event since 1963. Yancey closed with a 70 for 284 and $14,300.

Orville Moody, Boros, Knudson and Fred Marti were a stroke back and earned $6,081 apiece. Five others, including Blancas, the defending champion, and Gary Player, were clustered at 286.

Wilf Delmonik of Winnipeg had a closing-round 72 and a 287 total worth $1,950.

Littler, three times a runner-up here, smashed a seven-iron 165 yards into the cup on the 18th hole Saturday en route to a 74.

The triumph, Littler's 24th, pushed his total earnings this year to more than $80,000, most of it in the last six or seven weeks.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

'Lumbago' Cause Could Be in Disc

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I used to have a strong back, but now I suffer from lumbago. I am only 46 so I doubt the trouble is due to arthritis. Aspirin helps only a little.

Lately the pain has been going down one leg. A friend of mine tells me that I probably have a slipped disc in my spine. Could you explain? If this doesn't let up soon I intend to see a doctor. Mr. G.

• • • •

COMMENT: Lumbago? What's that? Undoubtedly you'll still find its definition in any dictionary as "pain in the lower back," probably of muscular origin. However you'll rarely see it written on a doctor's case report of his patient. It's too loose a term. It doesn't tell us exactly what is the matter.

So let's forget lumbago for a while and turn to your friend's diagnostic guess that the trouble may be due to a "slipped disc." He may or may be right — although I don't think the term "slipped" actually describes the trouble. What is a "disc"?

The spine, which consists of a column of bones, has cushions (discs) of special fibrous tissue which protect the vertebrae from each other as we twist and bend; these allow easy and free motion. As we grow older, these spaces between the vertebrae narrow.

Due to injury or compression, a disc may bulge (not slip) into the spinal canal. Here it puts abnormal pressure on nerve roots which cause back pain. If the roots happen to be those of the sciatic nerve the patient gets the typical sciatic pain down the leg in addition to back discomfort.

Sometimes pain comes on suddenly when a disc ruptures. Some patients get their first attack of pain when bending over to tie a shoelace. "It hit me like a shot," they say, "... couldn't straighten up." For weeks they have difficulty raising a leg (it usually involves only one side). Sometimes they lose the normal reflexes in the leg.

• • •

As we are only postulating, Mr. G., let's suppose that disc trouble is what your doctor finds as the cause of your "lumbago". What is the treatment? He has a choice.

Some patients do well after a few weeks of rest in bed with a board under mattress. Others require traction also — weights to take pressure off the disc and nerves. Others improve while still up and about if they wear a specially fitted back-brace.

However, if you continue to have painful attacks that interfere with your normal way of life, then surgery may be necessary. An operation will not give you a new disc, but will repair the damage, and surgical methods will be used to strengthen the spine by bone grafts or other indicated procedures.

So you see, Mr. G., the time has come to discover just what is causing your back pain. Maybe it is arthritis, after all. The fact that you are "only" 46 doesn't rule that out as a possibility.

• • • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I would very much like to know what you think about punishing a child by putting soap in his mouth. Just a drop and that happens to be in sight. Isn't there danger of germs being on a bar of soap that everybody uses to wash their hands? I know it has made the child sick for a time so that he was unable to eat. I am thinking of his future health. (Please do no print my name.)

COMMENT: My guess is that this note comes from a righteously frustrated grandparent. I agree — it's antiquated and distasteful, punishment. I'm more concerned about emotional aftereffects than danger from germs.

CUPE Asks Reforms

THUNDER BAY (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees, Ontario division, on the weekend pledged to work for a variety of social changes and heard a plea from NDP Leader Stephen Lewis to help change the provincial government.

The 300-odd delegates, representing more than 45,000 workers, called for a uniform pupil-teacher ratio across Ontario, a lowering to 60 from 65 of the retirement age for provincial employees and safety regulations for vehicles taking children to nursery schools.

The ratio ultimately ranging from Ontario hydro employees to hospital workers to office and clerical workers employed by Metropolitan Toronto government. Sunday also urged equal pay scales for men and women.

Mr. Lewis told the annual convention Saturday night the provincial government has already postponed an election which was destined for June, because they haven't been able to take off. It's not a government any more, it's a political travesty."

The three-day convention, which ended Sunday, also endorsed recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women on maternity leave and day-care centres and urged more representation for women on the union's executive groups.

The latter point was endorsed by a wide margin despite the objection of Kingston delegate Myra Carr that demanding women be given executive positions in proportion to their general membership was a form of tokenism.

Your Car

Turn Off Key at Once If Gas Pedal Sticks

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"My car is equipped with a powerful V-8 engine and automatic transmission. It has power brakes and power steering.

"Last week, after crawling along for some time at about 20 mph behind a slow-moving vehicle, I pressed down on the gas pedal and pulled over into the passing lane. Completing the pass I turned back into the inside lane and took my foot off the gas pedal. To my alarm the car continued to gain speed at a fantastic rate.

"Kicking the pedal several times had no effect, so I then applied the brakes, which slowed me down a little. But transmission dropped into low gear causing my car to again take off like a jet. After steering wildly through traffic for a short distance I turned the key off. This had the effect of stopping the car, but only after a series of loud explosions which blew the muffler apart.

"A mechanic in a nearby repair shop could find nothing in the gas pedal linkage to cause sticking. At his suggestion I started the engine and everything worked perfectly. I drove slowly to my regular garage where I authorized necessary repairs to the exhaust system and gave instructions to try to find out what had caused the throttle to stick.

"They replaced the muffler, but found no reason for the jammed gas pedal. I got the feeling that the mechanic thought I had been imagining the whole thing. He suggested I bring the car back if the trouble recurred.

"I have driven around town for about 200 miles for the last few days and the gas pedal worked fine, but I don't like the idea that it may stick again.

"A friend told me I should have stopped the car by applying the brakes and putting the transmission in neutral rather than turning off the key when the throttle jammed. Do you agree with this? Do you consider it safe to go on driving as suggested by the mechanic?" — Mr. R. G., Toronto

Turning off the ignition was the right thing to do, but the time to do it was at the first sign of the throttle being stuck in the open position. Although backfiring will usually result which may damage the exhaust system apart from the cost of repairs there is no danger involved in turning off the key — better than attempting to bring the car under control while maneuvering at breakneck speed through traffic.

With automatic transmission, applying the brakes will slow a vehicle to the speed at which the transmission automatically drops into low gear. The low gear ratio delivers much more driving force to the rear wheels and frequently — at least with a powerful V-8 engine — the brakes are no match for the surge of power, and when the brakes are fully applied the car forges ahead.

The important thing to remember is to turn off the ignition key and apply the brakes simultaneously. But steering and power brakes are not as effective as they would be when the engine is running.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Few Take Panoramic View

Each age of life has its own angle of vision, and few persons possess a panoramic view at any given time. When we are young, we are psychologically short-sighted: as we become older, we get long-sighted.

What I mean by this is that older persons tend less to see what is in front of them than what is at a considerable distance, while younger persons tend to see only what is directly in front of them.

Older people look into the distant past, which is in better focus for them than the immediate scene, which is blurred and confusing, for it is too close-up to accommodate their angle of vision. This accounts for their impatience and incomprehension with today's activities.

Younger people, on the other hand, never look back and rarely look forward more than a year or two; only what is right before them seems "real" and both past and future seem insubstantial. And thus, their impatience and incomprehension with the "lessons of history" and the "dangers of the future".

Our range of vision changes, imperceptibly but steadily, as we get older. Intellectually, we learn from people in psychology, and so each coming generation has the task of reminding its elders of what stands before us now, not when we were children and walked three miles to school in the snow.

If the mind does not grow as the eye changes, then we become fixated in the past and judge the present by standards that are inappropriate or unrealistic. We imagine that our past formulas for coping with life are immutable laws of nature and we transform what were relative guides into absolute norms. This infuriates young people.

While it is doubtless our job to remain open to the present the fault is not entirely on one side. Young people must learn to enlarge their own angle of vision so that the present falls into a proper perspective between past and future, and so that their desperate sense of "immediacy" does not degenerate into barbarism and witless sensuality.

When I was young was very good at discerning the falseness in ideas and institutions and people all intelligent youngsters are natural critics; they are excellent at spotting phonies, false arguments, self-serving ideas. This negative function is useful and astringent for the social order, and must not be repressed or ejected.

As I got older, I began to see the other side of the fabric: truth and goodness and vitality in people and ideas and institutions, despite their flaws and failings. Somehow, these two views must be joined together to obtain an accurate portrait of the human society, so that we can develop a process to encourage the positive elements and discourage the negative. No one yet is doing this.

CUPE Asks Reforms

THUNDER BAY (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees, Ontario division, on the weekend pledged to work for a variety of social changes and heard a plea from NDP Leader Stephen Lewis to help change the provincial government.

The 300-odd delegates, representing more than 45,000 workers, called for a uniform pupil-teacher ratio across Ontario, a lowering to 60 from 65 of the retirement age for provincial employees and safety regulations for vehicles taking children to nursery schools.

The ratio ultimately ranging from Ontario hydro employees to hospital workers to office and clerical workers employed by Metropolitan Toronto government. Sunday also urged equal pay scales for men and women.

Mr. Lewis told the annual convention Saturday night the provincial government has already postponed an election which was destined for June, because they haven't been able to take off. It's not a government any more, it's a political travesty."

The three-day convention, which ended Sunday, also endorsed recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women on maternity leave and day-care centres and urged more representation for women on the union's executive groups.

The latter point was endorsed by a wide margin despite the objection of Kingston delegate Myra Carr that demanding women be given executive positions in proportion to their general membership was a form of tokenism.

Euromart Decision In Offing

LONDON (AP) — Government agreement on Common Market entry terms in a month; parliamentary approval within three. That's the possible fate of France for Europe which Prime Minister Edward Heath's administration is reported to have charted for Britain.

Political insiders are saying that Heath's summit meeting last week with President Georges Pompidou of France was so successful that parliamentarians may be asked to make their momentous decision on whether Britain joins the Common Market before they recess for the summer vacations.

Everything depends on detailed negotiations on entry terms with the six Market states. Although Heath and Pompidou reached broad agreement on the future shape of Europe, several problems remain to be thrashed out.

They are, principally:

—How much Britain will pay into the community budget.

—What safeguards there will be to protect New Zealand's vital dairy industry.

—What restrictions will exist to prevent over-fishing of territorial waters.

Heath told the House of Commons Monday that he emphasized to President Pompidou the importance of reaching satisfactory arrangements over New Zealand and the difficulties posed to Britain's fishermen by the Market's "free fishing" regulations.

He disclosed: "The president and I both felt able to say after our talks that we were confident that the main issues could be settled before the end of June."

Sources close to government thinking said the optimism of Heath and his cabinet was such that they saw a remote possibility of entry terms being reached in Luxembourg June 7. That would leave British-Common Market ministerial meetings arranged for June 22 largely a formality.

Wind and Rain Cut Attendance At Ontario Place

TORONTO (CP) — The gremlins were at work again Monday, marring the mood of Ontario Place.

Chilling wind and rain whipped the island showcase, spoiling once more the surge of attendance anticipated for the Victoria Day weekend. By noon, only a trickle of visitors, huddled in wraps and raincoats, toured the grounds.

Problems plagued the $23 million tourist attraction since the official opening Saturday. The opening-day crowd was a far cry from the overflow expected; and then, Sunday, a breakdown in gas supply cut off restaurant stoves, and a shortage of washroom facilities produced uncomfortable lineups.

LCBO Buys 'Futures' In Imported Wines

TORONTO (CP) — The Liquor Control Board of Ontario has decided to go into the futures buying of imported wine in an attempt to retail wines to the public at a more-reasonable price. Currently the board buys the wine after it is bottled, a practice which is usually more expensive, says Maj-Gen. Kitching.

Chateau wines, even for the poor 1965 vintage, can range in price in Ontario from $11.75 to $15.35 a bottle.

Robarts Wonders Whether Everyone Needs to Work in Today's Society

KITCHENER (CP) — Former premier John Robarts raised the question Sunday of whether every member of an increasing population must be employed, and also cautioned students at the spring convocation of Waterloo Lutheran University about protest as a means of achieving goals.

Mr. Robarts asked graduates:

"What are we to do about the question of jobs? Is it going to be that everybody must have a job, or can it be that we will have to devise some means in our society whereby a man or woman can be meaningfully occupied even if not gainfully employed?"

He did not attempt to answer his question, but noted the population of Ontario is expected to increase to 12 million by the year 2,000 from 7.6 million now.

The former premier who told graduates he had, in his days at Osgoode Hall law school during the 1930's, taken part in a protest march on Queen's Park, advised that concrete action also is necessary.

"I can assure you from my own experience that there is enormous personal satisfaction in involving oneself and playing the game considerably fully, and as hard as you can".

"Protesting is necessary to draw attention to what you are protesting about." But positive action is also needed "if you are to produce the conditions that will crack these situations about which you may wish to protest."

Mr. Robarts was one of three men awarded honorary doctorates of law by the university Sunday.

Others were Chairman Harry D. Grebb of Waterloo Lutheran's board of governors and Dr. E. G. Pleva, a prominent geographer and professor at University of Western Ontario in London.

J. Edgar Hoover Finds Mrs. Mitchell Lovable

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has denied reports he suffers from indigestion—"unless I read certain columnists" — and says he will not retire as long as he's healthy.

Hoover, 76, made a rare public appearance Monday night to honor the wife of Attorney-General John N. Mitchell as the American Newspaper Women's Club's headliner of the year.

"She is the most lovable girl I've met," he said of Mrs. Mitchell. "She says what she thinks and lets the chips fall where they may."

Both Hoover and Martha Mitchell have gained attention in connection with communications and the centrepiece at the head table was an old-fashioned telephone.

Mrs. Mitchell is famed for late night calls to espouse her political views while Hoover recently has been under fire by some congressmen who claim the FBI is tapping their conversations.

The FBI has denied the accusations.

Asked if he had plans to retire, Hoover replied: "None whatsoever; not as long as I'm healthy."

Hoover denied claims by syndicated columnist Jack Anderson that the director must have stomach ailments because of medications found in his trash cans.

"I do not have health or gastric problems," Hoover said, "except when I read a certain man's column."

Although criticizing several journalists and columnists, Hoover said he likes the women of the news media.

"Ladies of the press are less catty than some male members," he said. "There are few jackals among them, unlike the males."

Arson Seen Possibility As Ship Fire Kills 32

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norwegian investigators were expected today to join Canadian officials checking the possibility of arson in a fire which killed 32 crew members of the cruise ship Meteor.

"We are not overlooking the possibility of arson," Staff Sgt. George Williams of the North Vancouver RCMP detachment said Monday after the second day of searching aboard the 2,856-ton Norwegian vessel by police, fire marshals and department of transport officials.

"It appears the fire started in three or four different places in the crew's sleeping quarters."

The last 11 bodies were recovered Monday from the burned-out forward section of the 300-foot ship, which was 60 miles from completing an eight-day Alaska cruise when the blaze broke out before dawn Saturday.

Fourteen bodies were found Saturday while deckhands fought to quell the blaze near Texada Island in the Strait of Georgia, which separates the British Columbia mainland from Vancouver Island. Seven others were discovered Sunday when the Meteor made Vancouver Harbor under her own power.

A memorial service was to be held here today for the victims.

All 67 passengers and 39 other crew members escaped injury. Vancouver Coroner Glen McDonald will conduct an inquest Wednesday.

Staff Sgt. Williams said he knew of no evidence to indicate there had been an explosion aboard the Meteor before the fire. He said the RCMP investigation would probably wind up today.

Captain Cyril Burrill of the transport department said Monday night he didn't think a full federal inquiry would be called because Norway would conduct its own detailed study.

He said the department was performing its usual preliminary inquiry and would send the results to transport Minister Don Jamieson, who could release a summary of the findings.

The passengers and four crew members left the stricken ship in lifeboats and were transferred to the Alaskan ferry Malaspina, which was five miles away when it picked up the Meteor's distress call.

The coastal freighter Island Prince, the tanker B.C. Standard, two coast guard cutters and several tugs converged on the scene, pumping thousands of gallons of water into the ship.

The deepsea tug Sudbury II poured on a chemical foam which extinguishes flames by displacing air and pumped out the Meteor's hull to prevent it from becoming unstable in the water.

East Hill Residents Oppose Apartments

Zoning Change Sought

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Residents of East Belleville have joined in the mounting city-wide protest against what is termed the indiscriminate construction of apartment houses.

The latest to raise their voices are residents in the Bridge Street, Chatham and Bleecker Ave. district, who are concerned over the possible erection of an 80-unit complex at 217 Bridge Street East.

They are asking for re-zoning of their section to permit only the construction of single family dwellings costing more than $25,000.

In a letter to city council, the residents say they have enjoyed quiet possession of their properties for many years, free from worry over possible decreased property values, over-loading of sewers, traffic congestion and the effect of an environmental change in the peace and quiet atmosphere of the neighborhood.

They wanted to know (should the apartment complex become a reality) how decreased evaluation of their properties would affect taxation; who pays for additional local improvement costs and whether consideration would be given before a permit is issued.

The letter was referred to the city planning board, the traffic committee and the city engineer.

A second petition from another group of 12 East Hill ratepayers on the same subject was also received by council.

And also in protest against more apartment construction, a delegation of Hill ratepayers from the Ritchie Ave. area made a formal request to council for re-zoning of their area from "B" to "A".

Mayor J. Russell Scott assured the delegation that the problem was already before the planning board which would be bringing in a report on June 17 for consideration of council.

Saskatchewan Vote Called for June 23

SASKATOON (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher Tuesday announced a Saskatchewan general election for Wednesday, June 23, and said the major issue will be a better method of solving labor-management disputes.

Mr. Thatcher, who turned 54 on Victoria Day, said he will implement a labor-management court if his Liberal government is returned for a third term.

He led the Liberals to victory over the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, predecessor of the New Democratic Party, in 1964, and in the last election, on Oct. 11, 1967, his party improved its majority by three seats. However, the Liberals took only 45.6 per cent of the popular vote compared with 44.3 per cent for the NDP.

And the Liberals lost the Kelvington riding to the NDP in a June, 1969, by-election.

At dissolution, party standing in the legislature was Liberals 34, NDP 24, vacant 1. The vacancy arose in 1970 with the resignation of George Willis (NDP - Melfort - Tisdale.)

Liberal and NDP parties each has fielded a full slate of 60 candidates, an increase of one due to redistribution this year. The Conservatives so far have nominated only four candidates and Social Credit has said it will run no candidates provincially while it prepares for the next federal election.

However, Saskatchewan Progressive Conservative leader Ed Nasserden said Tuesday he hopes the voting will be so close that his party will hold the balance of power.

He said in an interview that the number of Conservative candidates will not be made public until Monday, June 7, nomination day.

The party has not been represented in the legislature since the 1967 election when former leader Martin Pederson was defeated.

Quebec Is Expecting Showdown At June Constitutional Parley

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government is getting ready for a struggle of wills with its partners in Confederation at next month's constitutional conference, says a qualified government source.

The source, who did not want to be identified, said in an interview Tuesday the constitutional conference in Victoria June 14-16 will be "the most important ever" and could conceivably be the last.

He said Quebec's demands in the field of social policies are pitted against the impatience of Ottawa and the other provinces with Quebec's refusal to accept a proposal for repatriating and amending the constitution.

He said the three Prairie premiers—Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, Harry Strom of Alberta and Ed Schreyer of Manitoba—have indicated individually that they will not attend any future constitutional conferences if no agreement is reached at the Victoria conference on the amending formula.

He said the three gave the indications at the last conference in February and that he believes that they still hold the same opinions.

In Winnipeg Tuesday night, Premier Schreyer of Manitoba said it would be "safe to say I would be very disappointed "if the conference rejected the amending formula; but he ventured no opinion on what effect a rejection would have on future conferences.

Premier Strom of Alberta said last week there must be agreement at this conference on some points or there would be no purpose in continuing discussions.

Premier Thatcher, who has called a provincial election in Saskatchewan for June 23, was en route to a political meeting in Watrous, Sask., and unavailable for comment.

The Quebec government source said the provinces other than Quebec, especially the Prairie provinces really want only a formula which "brings home" the Canadian constitution after more than 103 years of Confederation.

The British North America Act of 1867, which created Confederation and forms the basis of the Canadian constitution, is a British law which can only be amended at present by the British parliament upon an address from Canada.

In addition to a new amending formula, the source said, Ottawa wants to have guarantees of the language rights of cultural minorities in each of the provinces entrenched in the constitution.

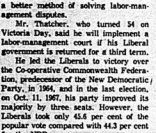
The source said Quebec is alone in wanting substantial changes in the distribution of constitutional powers between the federal and provincial governments.

He said that for Quebec to accept the repatriation and amending formula without first having received guarantees that it would get the constitutional powers it wants would effectively end the negotiations.

Once the other governments had got what they wanted, they would lose interest in substantial constitutional revision, and Quebec would be left alone pushing for negotiations.

Quebec was holding out its agreement to the formula eyeballed out at the last constitutional conference, held Feb. 8-9 in Ottawa, in an attempt to get prior agreement on a new distribution of powers in the field of social policies, he said.

The source said Quebec would probably accept the formula if it got much of what it wants first because it does not expect that a much better formula could be worked out.



Bodies Of Nine Found

YUBA CITY, Calif. (AP) — The bodies of nine transient fruit workers, hacked with a machete or some kind of heavy knife, have been unearthed from the peach and plum orchards of this farming community, the county sheriff announced today.

Sheriff Roy Whitearce said Juan V. Corona, 39, a farm labor contractor, was arrested shortly before dawn at a Richland Road home.

"He will be booked for nine counts of murder," the sheriff said of Corona. Whitearce did not announce an alleged motive for the slayings.

Undersheriff Frank Cartonelli said all the victims were transient fruit workers, ranging in age from 40 to 60 and that the times of the killings ranged from five or six weeks ago to sometime this week.

Hees Sees Quebec Growing Impatient

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — George Hees, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Prince Edward-Hastings, said Tuesday the spirit of separatism in Quebec is "becoming stronger day by day."

Mr. Hees told the Downtown London Association he bases his opinion on conversations in the last year "with French-speaking Canadians from most parts of Quebec and from many walks of life."

"I have reluctantly come to the conclusion that if things go on as they are at present there is a very real possibility that in the election after next in Quebec we will find the majority of the people deciding that they want to separate from the rest of Canada.

"We must start now to do everything we can to meet the legitimate aspirations of our fellow countrymen living in the province of Quebec, and by so doing persuade them that their best hope for the future lies in remaining as a very important part of this country."

Hellyer's 'Action Canada' Launched with 24 Charter Members

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Hellyer unveiled his Action Canada Tuesday, announcing that its top priority is full employment and that "many, many Canadians" are joining the organization, which someday may become a political party.

But for the moment it remains a political movement, said the 47-year-old MP for Toronto Trinity, who resigned as a Liberal cabinet minister two years ago and who quit the Liberal caucus last week to sit as an Independent Liberal.

Mr. Hellyer and 24 charter members of Action Canada gathered here Tuesday to launch the organization officially.

The former transport minister said Action Canada crosses party lines and is intended to be a rallying point to unite average Canadians in a mass movement.

Future events would dictate whether Action Canada would remain a movement to apply pressure to governments, whether it would support candidates holding the same views as the movement, or whether it would field its own slate of candidates.

The 24 charter members of the movement come from all walks of life, and while most are living in Ontario and Quebec, Mr. Hellyer said the organization will be national in scope. He said letters are pouring in from all parts of Canada with the $10 membership fee.

The movement's top priority, he said, is full employment. It also calls for immediate and fair tax cuts, along with immediate mandatory wage and price guides. It would aim at giving Canada the highest environmental standards in the world, along with warm, clean shelter as a basic right for every Canadian.

It would work for an effective urban transportation system, to reduce the size and complexity of the bureaucracy, to increase savings for investment, and to decentralize government authority.

Every Canadian should have a direct vote on the question of constitutional changes, Mr. Hellyer told the inaugural news conference.

Apart from outlining the basic objectives of the movement, Mr. Hellyer said that many of the details would only be worked out when the membership grows and its opinions become known.

For instance, he did not want to comment on foreign policy until the views of the hoped-for membership were known. The same applied to questions involving English-French issues.

Among the charter members was Reid Scott, a former New Democrat MP who now is a Toronto alderman. While Mr. Hellyer said the movement was not socialist—"we believe in the free enterprise system"—Mr. Scott said that at the moment he did not see any conflict with his long-standing membership in the NDP.

The wave-length we want to be on is the people's wave-length," he said.

Mr. Scott said he is heartsick with what he sees in connection with unemployment. "There is just nothing we can do to help them, no place we can send them."

When Mr. Hellyer resigned from the Liberal caucus last Friday he said he would be devoting his energies to the new movement which would represent Canadians dissatisfied with what is happening in the country.

But he made clear then, and again Tuesday, that the structure of the new movement would be, to a large extent, dictated by events.

Maintenance Costs Up

Community Use Puts Strain on School Board Budget

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Hastings county board of education last night approved expenditures this year of $454,324 for capital improvements of its buildings and sites.

The money will go to improve sites and fence them, alter and renovate schools, build additions and buy new elementary school properties and portable classrooms.

A sum of $35,000 will be spent to complete the all-weather track at Trenton High School, begun with money raised by the students.

The board will build portable classrooms for elementary schools and two double units for secondary schools at a cost of $16,000. Buying the portables, needed for the next five years, is cheaper than renting them trustees were told.

The capital improvement recommendations were accompanied by a report on plant operations and maintenance by K. H. Hawkins, controller of plant for the county system.

The board owns 85 buildings on more than 200 acres of land, and worth $45,000,000 without contents, the trustees learned.

The board has too few caretakers to look after its buildings, Mr. Hawkins said. The present number is adequate for day school use, but community use of the schools "is in effect doubling the size of the schools," he said.

He suggested a review of the situation before next year's budget is set.

Cost of utilities is rising and Mr. Hawkins recommended "careful analysis" of future use of electricity for heating.

Most expensive school to provide with utilities is Centennial Secondary, where costs are $4.36 cents a square foot. Costs decrease to about 19 cents a square foot for elementary schools such as Queen Victoria in Belleville.

Air conditioning at Centennial has boosted the utilities costs, the board learned, and the cooling tower is due to be replaced. "The architect and engineer came in for criticism from trustee Mac-Donald Smith. "The estimate on electricity for the school was one half what is shown here," he declared.

Centennial's electricity bill was $27,995 last year.

Mr. Hawkins said the incidence of vandalism in our schools is almost minimal. It is to the credit of the people of Hastings that such a situation exists, Mr. Hawkins told trustees.

An indication of one reason, at least, for the high cost of education came out in the plant controller's report.

"When the work to be done changes from maintenance to capital, the necessary department of education approvals must be obtained before the work becomes an approved capital expenditure for grant purposes," said Mr. Hawkins.

"It is imperative that we have sufficiently trained staff to prepare the many documents, specifications, drawings, etc., which are required by the approving authorities. This is a relatively new requirement and we will be recommending the appointment of a draftsman to perform this task."

Assembly Line for Sign-In

Ying Hope, past chairman of the Metro Toronto School Board, signed in to the four-day Ontario Traffic Conference, being held this week at the Four Seasons Hotel. Sign-in was handled by city police and city hall secretaries, left to right, Vivienne Beaman, Carol Maracle, Gail Newman, Mrs. Betty Flower and Mrs. Jean Hallam.

Extra Use Cost Hard to Pinpoint

Keeping county schools open after 4 p.m. is costing ratepayers at least $48,500 a year.

The figure was given in a report by director of education Eric Runacres to the board last night.

"The extra costs are there, but a precise accounting is extremely difficult and may be somewhat invalid," he said.

The figure he gave included extra custodial charges of $48,500 for last year, and the cost of 70 per cent of a secretary's time ($3,500) to make arrangements regarding the permit system.

Despite the extra cost, the board decided to continue its policy of encouraging community use of the schools after regular hours.

Community organizations used the schools for a total of 5,589 hours between Sept. 1, 1970 and April 31, 1971.

Users ranged from Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, universities, nurses' training schools, athletic associations, churches, recreation departments, political organizations, dancers, music teachers, gospel singers, conservation clubs Masonic lodges to commercial organizations that make extensive use of Centennial Secondary School.

Under the board's policy for community use of schools Home and School Associations, Scouts, Cubs, Guides and Brownies, the Quinte Arts Council and municipal departments are not charged for accommodation.

Non-sponsored youth and recreation groups, that is all groups not functioning under the authority of the organizations listed previously, pay $2.50 an hour for elementary schools for non-profit activities and $10 plus $2.50 an hour for profit making ventures. These groups pay $5 an hour for use of a secondary school for non-profit ventures and $20 plus $5 an hour for profit-making events.

The price increases for religious organizations, fraternal societies, service clubs and political meetings is a base of $10 plus $2.50 an hour for elementary schools and non-profit and profit making use and $20 base plus $5 an hour for secondary schools.

Groups using the schools for commercial purposes pay a base price of $30 plus $5 an hour for elementary schools and $50 plus $5 an hour for secondary schools.

The office of the director of education makes the decision on the status of requests for school use.

"The public is using the schools and the public is paying for it," commented Mrs. Miriam Graham, after hearing the report.

Ralph Weaver of Trenton asked administration to make clear to the public that increased use of schools is costing the ratepayers more in educational taxes.

Environment Is Seminar Topic

The city of Belleville this week is playing host to the 22nd annual convention of the Ontario Traffic Conference, which will see up to 150 delegates from all parts of the province in attendance.

Convention sessions got underway yesterday afternoon with registration at the Four Seasons Hotel and will continue through until Friday afternoon when the reports of the various standing committees will be received at the annual meeting followed by a closing luncheon and a meeting of the new board of directors.

A series of panel discussions and seminars have been established to discuss topics ranging from parking and public transportation problems to the controversial topic Does the Motor Vehicle Destroy the Community.

Donald Kay, an alderman on Ottawa's city council and the Ottawa - Carleton regional government council, this morning moderated the elected representatives session.

"Engineers and planners must stop sacrificing green belt areas and the environment in general. Why sacrifice the environment for the machine," he told The Intelligencer in a pre-session interview.

The Ottawa alderman said mounting criticism of highway planners and their flagrant destruction of nature for construction of modern highways is playing an ever-increasing role in the development of provincial travel.

In Ottawa, a portion of the higher income development in the Alta Vista district was slated for a four - lane expressway.

"Enough pressure was brought to bear to halt this," Ald. Kay said, "but it's still being considered."

He cited the case of Toronto's Spadina Expressway, the future of which rests with the provincial cabinet. In United States, citizens committees have banded together in an attempt to halt the progress of expressways through prime residential and green belt districts. In several instances, their efforts have proven successful.

"In the old days, engineers constructed highways from point a to point B with little thought to what lay in between," he said.

"I think we'll see the day, and I hope it's soon, when preservation of the environment will play a major role in transportation development."

Mr. Kay suggested properly placed questions could produce concrete suggestions. He indicated engineers and planners would not be given the chance to sit back without participating in today's discussions on "this controversial subject."

Ontario Minister of Transport, Charles McNaughton, will be the speaker at a Thursday evening civic dinner.

Local arrangements for the conference are under the direction of Mayor J. Russell Scott as general chairman. Alderman Arthur Keegan is committee committee vice-chairman and Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie, secretary.

Registration is in charge of city clerk Adam Stalker.

A four day program for the entertainment of the wives of the visiting delegates is under the direction of Alderman Jack Smith as chairman, with Ald. Robin Jeffrey and Mrs. Donald Soutter on the committee.

Zoning

The petition was referred to the planning board.

Alderman Donald Soutter said that council for the time being was tied to existing zoning regulations.

To protect their interest in any move for rezoning he suggested residents objecting to apartment construction would be well advised to obtain legal assistance, to advise them at any rezoning hearing.

Alderman Corke noted that under existing regulations there was just no way council could prevent the erection of apartments in a "B" zone.

Also at last night's meeting two letters were received from Wellington Crescent, residents asking the city to retain adjoining Albert College property for playground and greenbelt use.

The property is now up for sale and there are fears it could be sold to a developer for apartment construction.

Council had no objection to an application to the committee of adjustment asking for a land split for a property on Highland Ave. owned by Mr. and Mr. Mrs. Patrick Foley.

Earl Dafoe, secretary for the committee of adjustment, said his information was that the owners wished a land split to enable them to build a new residence.

He said the size of the lot was not sufficient for construction of a multiple dwelling.

On recommendation of Alderman Arthur Keegan council entered no objection to the proposed land split providing the land was used only for construction of a one- or two-family dwelling.

Trenton to Offer Clinical Experience

Students in the nursing assistant's course at Quinte Secondary School in Belleville will take part of their practical training at Trenton Memorial Hospital next year.

Facilities at Belleville General Hospital, where the girls have received their clinical experience, are strained to the limit by increased registration in the Edith Cavell Regional Nursing School, making new arrangement imperative if the nursing assistant's course is to continue.

About 40 girls are enrolled in the course at Quinte, 20 in Grade 11 and 20 in Grade 12. They will receive clinical experience in Trenton for three months of the school year, with first year students being accommodated for one day a week and second year students' for two days a week.

"Trenton was most co-operative and helpful," said superintendent D. C. Stirling, in announcing the program. "Our girls will get surgical and obstetrical training in Trenton that they are not able to get at BGH."

No transportation costs are involved. The students must get to the Trenton hospital on their own.

Points to Ponder

'All Over Now'

Although the 1971 United Appeal fund raising campaign has not yet officially started, problems faced by member agencies and plans for the campaign were aired last night. Ian Brady, president of the local chapter of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, ponders a point raised by 1971 campaign chairman Rev. Laurie Sutherland, background.

United Appeal

Payroll Deduction Emphasized

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

The Belleville and District United Appeal fund raising campaign for 1971 will be launched with emphasis on payroll deductions.

At last night's meeting of United Community Services member agencies and local business representatives, delegates were asked to determine what approach they deemed best for the campaign.

Of the more than 40 present for the meeting, more than half expressed interest in the formula of payroll deductions from salaries as a means of raising funds for the 13 member agencies.

This method "should be exploited a little more than it has been," said Dr. Evelyn Williamson.

It was generally agreed that most employees in local business would prefer to donate on a weekly basis rather than with a lump sum.

Delegates also urged an increase in public relations, "to counteractack those who attack the appeal".

"There should be more stress on the objectives of each organization and we should let donors know that the money side of it . . . this is an ultimate goal but there are other objectives such as participation of each organization, a spread of responsibility as far as possible."

"Nobody but the United Appeal can go into government and industry and come out with payroll deductions," he said.

"Most of the fund raising organizations employ the door to door method and it would be good if we could do away with this."

"With payroll deductions and no knocking on doors, we could eliminate the "I gave at the office . . . I gave at home" concept," the executive director asserted.

Mr. Cooperman, in dealing with the suggestion that lotteries could be employed, said "I think we can get hung up on lotteries and I think we have more and more organizations running lotteries in the community."

Alderman Ben Corke, last year's chairman of the United Appeal campaign, and 1971 chairman of the industrial division campaign, said in the past, there has been criticism of the hard - hitting campaign but told delegates "I don't think there's any rudeness about that."

Mr. Brady asked what was being done to dispel friction surrounding YMCA membership in United Community Services.

United Community Services president Robert Ord commented, "I know there's a problem, but it is on the way to being resolved."

"This is not the place to discuss it . . . It's not material at this point," he said.

Rev. Laurie Sutherland of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, chairman of the 1971 campaign told delegates "It's beyond the concern of the United Appeal at this point."

Further problems to be faced before the launch of the campaign include, establishment of a fund-raising goal and the number of agencies that will join or continue with the United Community Services.

Mr. Cooperman called for full effort of member organizations.

Repeating an earlier statement, made last year, he said "If people gave from the heart, we wouldn't need a campaign."

The 1971 United Appeal campaign set a Belleville first, with a total of $132,000 raised from a goal of $126,000.

Trenton Council Does Homework Trying to Offset Tax Increase

TRENTON (Staff) — There is no question about it — there will be a substantial tax increase in Trenton this year, Unless councillors can find an answer the community is facing a possible 14-mill increase.

The town's tax rates have been relatively low in the past, but as one councillor said this morning: "It is all over now".

Council met in committee of the whole session last night to go over budget projections with former town treasurer, Peter De Groot, and decided to take the budget papers home for further study.

One councillor quipped he would not be surprised if some fled town.

By the time cost estimates had reached council last night, they had already been submitted to rigorous slashing and it is doubted that the public works budget — until now prime candidate for marked cut backs — can take any more trimming.

Big problems to be coped with in bringing down a budget are the paying off of a $54,000 education debt levy and the community gardens, operating loss of $40,000, factors contributing to the town's 1970 deficit total of just under $170,000.

Rectifying this deficit position alone may call for a tax increase of seven mills, council sources report. One mill added to the general rate brings a further $19,000 to town coffers.

Two other areas placing considerable stress on budget makers are the police budget and that for welfare services.

Council Can't Halt Car Wash

City council has no authority or wish to regulate the opening of new businesses.

This was made clear at Tuesday's regular meeting of council when a letter from the owners of the Minit Car Wash on Dundas Street, East, was read objecting to council's action in approving two new car wash outlets in the city.

The new outlets referred to were the Shell car wash on North Front Street which is scheduled to go into operation June 1, and a Dundas Street West station to be constructed by Esso.

The North Front Street location is part of the Quinte Mall development, while approval for the Esso was given . few weeks ago.

The letter from the Minit Car Wash owners was ordered received with the comment that council couldn't do anything to regulate business.

The police budget, by one report, may call for the addition of four or five mills to the general rate — largely due to salary increases in the police department.

As far as welfare is concerned, expenditures in this area appear to have increased by approximately $40,000, and, as welfare cost estimates stand now, the tax rate would have to be increased by two mills to cope with it.

A principal factor in increasing costs is the high number of young single people here drawing welfare. As one councillor said "the chickens have all come home to roost".

Another said he fully expects his residential tax bill to be up by at least $150.

Crackdown On Bass Poachers

NAPANEE (Special) — Department of lands and forests officials yesterday issued warnings to fishermen that removal of small and large mouth bass from area lakes and streams could bring a possible fine of up to $1,000.

This warning came in the wake of arrests throughout the entire Quinte area as lands and forests officers attempt to curtail out-of-season fishing for this species.

Citizen Groups Switch Roles — Present City with Funds

Yesterday was presentation day for city council, but contrary to the usual procedure the city this time was on the receiving end.

First the Quinte Action Centre committee with president Dick Hurst as spokesman, presented the city with $31,000, the proceeds of the Belleville Minor Sports walkathon in the fall of 1969, plus donations and accrued interest amounting to $3,600.

The money will be used to help defray the costs of the Dick Ellis Rink in West Belleville.

The second presentation was from the Belleville Kinsmen Club which has made $1,000 available to the city to be used mainly for pollution control.

The suggestion is that $400 be used by the Parks Board to plant trees with the balance of the money going for the purchase of litter containers.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the efforts of the two "action" groups was commendable and much appreciated by the city. Alderman Donald Scutter, as chairman of the recreation - arena committee, added his appreciation for the gift of the Quinte Action Centre committee toward the new rink.

Census '71.
And what it means to you.

1. Things like schools, roads and community grants.
The statistics we get from the Census are used in planning the building and location of things like schools, hospitals and roads. Many government grants and assistance programs are allocated on a per capita basis and the Census statistics are used for them. So for every person who does not get counted the community loses.
A unique National Census only happens once every ten years. That's why it is so important that you take advantage of this one on June 1.

2. A lot of little circles to fill in.
You can have a little fun filling in your Censusform. But please fill in the circles carefully. With a pencil. And remember all the questions are important.
Right Wrong

3. Privacy.
The Census questionnaire must be completed by law and your privacy is ensured by law. It's all part of our motto: Eyes Only.
And, on our part we assure that all the information you give will be kept completely confidential. It's top secret stuff.
Really. To be used only to produce statistics. No one outside DBS, not even another government department, can get near the individual census forms.
Only compiled statistics will be made available.
There are severe legal penalties for any DBS employee who doesn't respect your privacy.

4. It's your country.
Census results will affect your community, your province and your country.
By completing your census form on June 1, you'll be participating in the planning for a better Canada.

5. It wouldn't be right without you.
Everyone in Canada must be counted in a National Census. That makes sense. How great would a National Census be if only the rich people were questioned? Or only the poor people? Or only the city people? It has to be everyone. So, count yourself in to the better Canada.
That's what Census '71 means to you.

June 1 is Census Day. Count yourself in.

Regional Government

Whither regional government? The subject received another thorough airing at the annual meeting of the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council in Peterborough last week.

Doubts inevitably still exist as to the concept of regional government. Will it be an impersonal thing, for example, separating the man in the street from the greater intimacy of local government, encouraging a still greater degree of bureaucracy and hindering rather than promoting progress.

There is always such a risk as governments grow and become more cumbersome, politicking, red tape and empire building, rather than with the needs of the people. But in the nature of things today, with the prospect by the year 2000 of three major cities of 800,000 population each between Toronto and Montreal, with the kind of increase and the social problems that go with it there can be no thought of implementing it under present municipal and county structures. To do so would be like trying to educate contemporary youth in the little red schoolhouse of old.

The prospect of such population increase and the commensurate growth of cities is exciting, although mixed with apprehension stemming from recognition of such bogies as pollution, further pressure on non-renewable resources, and other mundane things such as waste disposal.

These are tasks for regional government which among other benefits, and in the words of Quinte MPP Dr. Richard Potter, "would allow a more rational distribution of industrial activity to the greater benefit of a larger number of people."

Dr. Potter, a Minister without Portfolio in the provincial legislature, and Alderman Robin Jeffrey were present at the Peterborough discussion and both advanced strong arguments in favor of regional government. Teething problems in some embryo regional administrations were acknowledged, and Manitoulin county administrator Carl Bateman wondered if they would prove accessible and responsive enough to the public. But if the provincial government did not have all the answers, Alderman Jeffrey felt it was at least looking forward and not backward. It was a point well taken, for the requirements of the future — the world of tomorrow — demand administrative machinery that can keep pace with the swiftly changing times.

Regional government may be regarded as inevitable. Such a concept does not take root in the public mind, and the thoughts of the planners, only to be cast aside. To do so would be to balk the processes of natural evolution. Alderman Jeffrey speaks of the need for discussions on regionalism between elected representatives. That could be the first step and it is only a matter of where and between whom, for this is a matter of interest to everyone, citizens, elected representatives and municipalities.

Dr. Potter has noted that the government does not intend to impose regional planning or government on the people of Ontario. Its intention was to advise and assist, but this remark seems quite out of date when it is realized that government planners are already embarked on regional administration plans for the entire province. The Lake Ontario region for one, Dr. Potter mentioned, is being studied and the first phase of the findings will be released later this year.

Further discussion when is necessary in our own area, for this is a complex subject. The mechanics of regional government alone will be difficult and the evolution of such a system inevitably will take time. Government studies will be guidelines, but local study and involvement are necessary too.

When in Rome

At the Kremlin museum last week Mrs. Pierre Trudeau was either the most "in" representative of the women present, or she was the most old - fashioned, depending on how you look at today's fashion scene.

In a group at the museum there were five women, including Mrs. Trudeau. Wearing a flowered dress of the kind popular among Russian women was Mrs. Ludmilla Guishiani daughter of Premier Kosygin. The hemline was below the knee. Standing beside her was a younger woman, possibly a daughter of Mrs. Guishiani and she was wearing an above-the-knee dress similar to many worn by young women in the West.

Mrs. Trudeau for her part wore a long midi dress, the longest of the group. Her hair, like most of the Russian women, was combed back rather severely. Russian women, we understand, did not take to the miniskirt as readily as their western counterparts, and Mrs. Trudeau, probably aware of this, doubtless chose her Russian-trip wardrobe accordingly.

Education

Are We Neglecting the Practical, Trade, Skills?

Peterborough Examiner

Where is education going?

How has education changed during the past two decades when it seemed that its expansion, qualitatively and quantitatively, would lead to a better world?

The OECD Observer, a bi monthly publication of the Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development, gives some statistics which are, to say the least, surprising.

Maybe disappointing would be better word.

The statistics cover 22 countries, of which 18 are European (only one Communist country is included, Yugoslavia), plus Ireland, Japan, Canada and the United States. The majority of these countries are highly industrialized and have a well-established higher educational base going back for centuries.

Education for our purpose means university education and it must be taken into consideration that in Europe, and in some non-European countries, education generally includes apprenticeship programs, trade schools, etc., which are almost non - existent in some other countries. This means that lack of education marks an entirely different thing in Europe than in North America.

While the lack of a college degree in North America renders a man "uneducated," in Europe a person still has many options to be trained for certain trades through a combination of apprenticeship and trade school.

Still, the figures explode some myths.

Growth in student enrolment had little to do with the material well-being of the countries involved. Between the 1955-56 and the 1964-65 academic years, Canada achieved the second biggest growth of the 22—127 per cent. Greece was third with 200 per cent. Norway beat everyone with an astonishing 318 per cent.

Turkey (138 per cent), Yugoslavia (180), Denmark (134), Spain (126), Britain (136), Luxembourg (125), France (143) and some others were ahead of the U.S., where the number of university students was only 121 per cent higher in 1965 than in 1955-56. Japan reached 103 per cent, beating only New Zealand (90 per cent) and Ireland (98).

The figures show that despite sudden growth, no country in the OECD area has reached what could be called "mass" higher education. In most countries, the average enrolment is about 10 per cent.

An analysis shows that the quantitative expansion of higher education was, to a great extent, caused by an increase in the number of secondary school graduates. More women receive higher education. But they still do not comprise more than from one-third to one-half of the total student population.

The statistics also show that there is no relationship between university enrolment and the wealth of a country (the rate of economic growth). What is more surprising is that the rate of growth in expenditures on higher education has, on the whole, little to do with enrolment growth rates, either.

The OECD publication does not say so, but the number of people with university degrees does not necessarily lead to a higher living standard or to sudden economic growth.

In many countries, university education is being sought to keep people off the job market, especially since thousands of degrees are awarded in fields which are not practical enough.

An undue emphasis on higher education also causes problems, particularly in less-developed nations. Thinking that education is the cure-all for everything, some nations have been turning out thousands of people with degrees in the humanities. Now they have lots of experts on Greek literature, Egyptian architecture or French literature, but not enough skilled people to work in the new factories or to build the factories.

Authorities the world over will have to take a good look at higher education and decide which way to go from now on.

It seems that while during the past decade we have been trying to push everybody into higher education, what the world needed, and still needs, is more people with practical education — skills and trades.

The Push-Me-Pull-You

Scruffy Look in Clothes May Be 'Factory Fresh'

Milwaukee Journal

The "system" or "establishment" isn't as fuddy-duddy as some young people like to think it is. It has found a way to make a profit from the fads of those trying to break away from "straight" orthodoxy by creating their own conformity.

The Wall Street Journal has just taken a long look at the fads moving many young people. Take the long haired, shaggy young fellow walking down the street. He may be a legitimate street person. But the chances are, the study shows, that he is one of thousands who spend $7.50 to get their hair cut to look just the unkempt way they want it. And he uses expensive spray to keep it in place.

Take the young fellow with the faded, tattered jeans. They may be brand new — product of companies like Blue Bell, Inc., whose engineers developed a machine that makes jeans that way — for $2 more than a new look-ing pair costs. Companies are selling denim clothing with patches put on at the factory. Heavy work shoes and run down sandals are being sold, brand new, to look as though they had been worn for months. Air Force jackets from Army surplus stores at $60 each—with floppy hoods — were the "in" thing last year. Now they are being manufactured and sold at $40 each, new but looking old and of poorer quality than the originals.

The manufacturers, the Wall Street Journal points out, have turned "what seems like youthful antimaterialism into a major component of what they call 'the youth market'." The hippie you see may be ersatz.

Fresh Approach To Alcoholism Problem

Windsor Star

Public drunkenness is not a new social phenomenon. Individual drunkenness is a sorry state into which it is too easy for some people to fall and too difficult to leave behind. But to date, the legal machinery in Ontario has not been doing an adequate job to cope with the problem.

A. B. R. Lawrence, the new health minister, has proposed a plan to deal with chronic alcoholism in a humane and more effective way.

The program would establish 16 detoxification centres in 11 Ontario locations, including Windsor. An individual would be able to "dry out" in one of these institutions. Under the plan, the government would also create half-way houses to help reintegrate the former drunk into society and would establish farm-like institutions to provide therapeutic treatment within a rural environment.

But even more important, public drunkenness would cease to come under the authority of the criminal system and would instead be treated as a social problem requiring compassion and cure, rather than detention and punishment.

Anyone who has been approached by a panhandling drunk in Windsor is aware that the problem is a real one. The Ontario government, if Mr. Lawrence has his way, will finally become aware of the need for a more enlightened approach to the widespread situation.

Today In History

May 26, 1971 . . .

Samuel Pepys, the great English diarist, died 268 years ago today—in 1703—aged 70. He had been the equivalent of minister of food during the plague of 1666 and was one of only a handful of government officials who did not flee London. In 1686 he reorganized the Royal Navy along modern lines and restored its efficiency. Throughout his life Pepys stood by his friends, although some (including his wife) were Roman Catholics and he was several times imprisoned and falsely accused of complicity in "popish plots."

1354—91 persons died in a fire aboard the USN carrier Bennington off Rhode Island.

1946—The United States government surrendered seizure of national railways after a strike was overcome.

1942—Russo-British mutual aid pact was extended to 20 years.

1942—The German army began a drive on Stalingrad.

1923—Transjordan (now Jordan) won independence.

1918—101 persons were killed when the Leasowe Castle was torpedoed in the Mediterranean.

1917—A tornado killed 101 at Matoon and Charleston, Ill.

1913—The first woman magistrate in Britain was appointed.

Kingston Pen. Investigation

Kingston Whig Standard

The Justice and Legal Affairs Committee, dominated by Liberals, has voted down a motion to have its members visit Millhaven prison and interview inmates and guards concerning the riots at Kingston Penitentiary and the aftermath of that crisis. The shadow of that petty despot, Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, hovered over the committee when he warned its members that there is a risk of a riot at Millhaven should Members of Parliament — and, of course, the press — be allowed to visit.

Inmates from KP were transferred to Millhaven after the riots and there have been charges of their ill-treatment by Millhaven guards. Mr. Goyer mentioned the special committee soon to sit in closed sessions at RMC to inquire into this situation. He added that the Ontario Provincial Police are investigating both criminal activity during the riot and the allegations concerning the beatings administered to some prisoners by guards. Two prisoners died and 13 others were injured. Mr Goyer said that an inquest would be held into the death of the other prisoner, Brian Enzor.

The justice spokesman for the Conservatives, Eldon Woolliams, was not satisfied with Mr. Goyer's stand. He said that the committee should actually make sure that Millhaven prisoners are "being protected by the rule of law" and should get first-hand information concerning the alleged beatings. His motion was defeated five to three. As an alternative, a special committee member, Terrence Murphy suggested that Mr. Goyer reveal to the committee privately the contents of the entire report of the Government-appointed group to begin at RMC on 7 June.

Mr. Goyer maintained his usual obstructive attitude: he said that to make this report public could endanger the safety of prisoners and the reputation of both guards and prisoners.

Growing Menace of VD

Windsor Star

Two medical experts have recently outlined plans concerning the eradication of venereal disease: both are quite ingenious, but they do serve to focus attention on a serious medical problem.

The first was Dr. David Reuben, author of the best-seller Everything You Always Wanted To Know About Sex, who said that VD could be wiped out if one injection of penicillin were given to everyone capable of sexual intercourse.

The second was Dr. Hilberis, according to Dr. J. R. Jones of the Metropolitan Windsor - Essex Health Unit, who calls this "a bit of rubbish." One injection of penicillin simply won't work: the local health unit already has to give six times the dose that was given 10 years ago. Follow-up treatment is absolutely essential. The Essex - Windsor clinic figures demonstrate: of 1,000 patients, only 3,741 recorded patient visits during 1970. Out of that total, 560 were for non-VD; 202 were diagnosed as gonorrhea, and 22 as syphilis. This showing that many repeat and follow - up visits were required.

Dr. Reuben's cavalier solution simply will not work, and neither will the other extreme proposals suggested by Dr. Gordon Bates, of Toronto, for 20 years head of the venereal disease unit at Toronto General Hospital. The 85-year-old medic has argued that VD (now rampant (currently being tested in Ottawa) would lead to a "generation of alley cats." Profoundly, so it seems the doctor suggests, would wreck society. The drug should, accordingly, not be developed.

His argument is as valid as arguing that just because a car can be 150 miles per hour, people are going to drive 150 miles per hour. Careless driving will be careless, and promiscuous people will be promiscuous. If a cure for cancer were found, would everyone smoke 100 cigarettes a day?

Postal Rates to Go Up

Winnipeg Tribune

And a special task force report on Post Office operations has warned the deficit could exceed $500 million by 1980.

To balance forecast expenditures, the six-cent letter rate would have to be doubled in 10 years. A 21-cent stamp would be required for a first-class letter by 1980 with the trend going on to sweep through the 25 cents and off the page by the end of the century.

The new increases are not expected to put the Post Office into the black, however. The additional revenue is expected merely to trim the deficit down to $50 million by March, 1973 still a substantial amount to be picked up by the taxpayer. Postal, mechanization and modernization costs are blamed for the losses.

Release Centres Show Promise as Aid in Prisoner Parole

By MARGARET RAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Parolees from Canada's federal penitentiaries can discover the importance of self - responsibility through residence in community release centres established in pleasant, prisoner rehabilitation. Clyde Rands, guidance counsellor and programmer with Toronto's Montgomery centre yesterday told Picton Rotarians many parolees exhibit hostilities and a hesitancy to communicate upon arrival at release-centres. He stressed these men, addressed only as numbers during their imprisonment, frequently retain feelings of bitterness and uncertainty. A new federal regulation now has made it compulsory for all inmates to be called by name.

Parolees may apply to reside in one of Canada's four release centres through their classification officers. Requests are examined by a seven-man review board where the parolee has been serving his sentence. If an application is approved, the paroled serving the final three or four months of his sentence is sent alone by train or bus to a release centre where he will be met by its director and one of its counsellors.

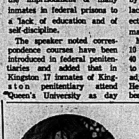
Mr. Rands said the parolee's problems, past history and future ambitions are discussed with a counsellor who will spend several days accompanying him to points of interest near the release centre. A careful evaluation of the former prison inmate is made as the counsellor observes him moving outside prison walls. "It's a skilful phase," commented Mr. Rands referring to the parolee's first week at the centre.

The parolee is taken to meet prospective employers and is introduced for job interviews. If the resident does not find work he returns to the release centre where he receives up to $5 a day to pay for meals and personal needs. Each release centre has a fully equipped kitchen where residents can cook their own meals if they choose.

Mr. Rands stated each resident's attitude is assessed during his first two weeks at the centre. It is vital to know whether the individual is sincere in his efforts to succeed. The guidance counsellor described this assessment of the resident's co - operation as "the hardest part" of his work. Parolees failing to meet the criteria of the release centres are transferred back to prison. These residents usually are alcoholics who refuse to return to the centre on time and often are not "completely in control."

If a release centre resident cannot find a job he is provided with a budget set at the lowest possible subsistence level and its balance is deposited in a bank account. This money is available to the jobless man when he leaves the centre. Job opportunities often are suggested through the John Howard Society. All release centre residents are given the society's name and address for future reference. Similarly they are familiarized with the Salvation Army headquarters and the YMCA in their city. Residents who do not obtain work within three months are forced to leave the release centres. Staff members assist in finding such men a place to live.

Mr. Rand said the program of release centres has been successful "on the whole" and added the residents most often returned are those who have no trades. He attributed the imprisonment of many inmates in federal prisons to a lack of education and of self-discipline.



The speaker noted correspondence courses have been introduced in federal penitentiaries and added that in Kingston 17 inmates of Kingston penitentiary attend Queen's University as day students. It was emphasized by Mr. Rand that he feels lack of education relates directly to the imprisonment of many men and women.

Mr. Rands predicted that in 10 years Canada will have 40 community release centres to assist prison inmates in adjusting to the outside world. He noted a fascinating number of psychologists are studying the effects of prison life on inmates, in an effort to help. He urged co-operation from employers in all communities in hiring former prison inmates, and welcomed suggestions from Rotarians concerning prisoner rehabilitation. "The more minds we have working on rehabilitation the sooner we will have an answer," he remarked.

Inmate Costs $5,500 For Year in Prison

PICTON (Staff) — Clyde Rands, guidance counsellor and programmer for a community release centre in Toronto yesterday said here there are 7,000 men and 100 women in Canada's federal penitentiaries. Each inmate is maintained at an annual cost of approximately $5,500. Mr. Rands stated nine of every 10 inmates are Canadians, making a total of 6,300 Canadian prisoners. One out of every eight inmates has been previously convicted of a juvenile or provincial felony. Seven out of every 10 did not progress beyond the eighth grade and six out of 10 were unemployed when they became offenders. Four out of 10 were previous offenders or "repeaters."

Canada's 7,100 prisoners are housed in 24 federal institutions. There are eight special institutions including one for drug addicts and another for aged offenders. Four community release centres each headed by a director and staffed with five guidance counsellors operate in Canada. These centres are run on a 24 hour basis and help is always available to those requesting it. Through the efforts of the centres, husbands and wives frequently are re-united. The Montgomery release centre where Mr. Rands is employed lodges 14 residents described as "a logical number for success in this program."

Ann Landers

Outspoken Friend May Feel Worse

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Do I lack a sense of humor? Is there something wrong with me that a small incident of no consequence bothered me for hours?

ANN LANDERS

While browsing in a book store, I encountered a woman I had not seen for months. We were never close but we met frequently at civic functions. She was always pleasant. The woman greeted me with a look of horror and disbelief, actually shouted: "My God! You're alive! I heard you had died!"

I stood there, dumbfounded. She realized she had startled me with that odd greeting and attempted to recoup by trying to remember with it was who told her, etc., etc. The more she talked, the worse it became. Finally I mumbled, "Nice to have seen you," and walked off. Why was I so bothered? What should I have said? Thanks for your help. — ALIVE AND WELL IN WICHITA FALLS.

DEAR ALIVE: You were bothered because the thought of death bothers most people. But I'll bet the lady with the loose lip was more bothered than you. You might have made a joke of it and said, "Like most rumors — it was grossly exaggerated," and changed the subject.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 19 and have been married for nearly two years. My husband and I got along beautifully until six months ago. Suddenly he became indifferent. He doesn't talk to me and when I ask him what's wrong he says, "Nothing. Don't nag me."

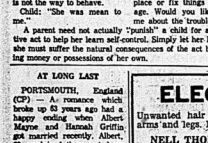
He hasn't the last year all he seems interested in is having a baby. I want a baby eventually, but I'm not sure I am ready for motherhood yet.

Do you think if I had a baby it would help our marriage? Right now I am thinking about divorce. My husband hasn't spoken to me for a week. Please tell me what to do. — BLOOMING MISS.

DEAR LOX: The last thing you need is a baby. I suggest counseling to help you determine whether or not your marriage is salvageable before you bring a child into the world. I hope the 17-year-olds out there who think marriage is such a ball will read your letter twice.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back you printed a letter from "Mr. Haddit" who proceeded to tell the world how he handled folks who just happened to be in the neighborhood and decided to drop in. "Mr. Haddit" had a sign made and he mounted it directly above the front door. It read: "If You Are Uninvited and Unexpected You Are Also Unwanted. Go Away." I wish I had the courage to do the same.



I am a freelance writer who works at home. Somehow people don't believe writing is work. They can't understand that a creative person can sit for hours without writing a single sentence then suddenly rockets go off in his head and he must translate them into words immediately or they are lost. I can't tell you how many times, after a dry spell, I have just begun to connect — a car drive up and unexpected company appears. The creative mood slips away as the guests jabber on and on — and I do a slow burn.

As I said, Ann, I don't have the nerve to hang the sign, but if you will print my letter I promise to have it framed and mounted over the doorbell. — HADDIT, JR.

DEAR JR.: Here it is. Call the framer and good luck.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "March right home. You'll get a good spanking for smashing Jenny's new doll. You know that is not the way to behave.

Child: "She was mean to me."

A parent need not actually "punish" a child for a destructive act to help her learn self-control. Simply let her learn that she must suffer the natural consequences of the act by forfeiting money or possessions of her own.

Children's Eating Habits Pose A Problem

By DORIS CLARK

Readers, here's a poser for you. It was gleaned from a book about amusing letters to doctors:

"We have two small children — a boy who hates and a girl who is three. The girl is a very slow eater, and the boy is a very fast eater. Sometimes the boy is ready to start his lunch, and I am still screaming at the girl to finish her breakfast. (I don't let her leave the high chair until she is finished.)

"My question is: Should I get my daughter to eat faster or get my boy to slow down?" — Quoted in Today's Health

* * *

Dear Doris: I am sending you a story written by a 12-year-old boy. How would you assess this boy, by his writing? I feel you have great insight into human behavior. — Faithful Reader

Dear Faithful: The story describes a robbery, violence, people being killed, police and at the end a dead hero. I suppose it is the violence that concerns you. It often concerns parents and teachers.

My psychiatrist consultant is not disturbed at all. He says, in part:

"Curdled blood and plenty of gore in fantasy life are probably essential to healthy coming - to - terms of one's natural aggressive impulses. Actually, living out violence, or any other type of experience secondhand, gets rid of the violence.

"The writer of the story magnificently brings right to triumph over urteg at the end. He overcomes his violence and then made peace."

I'd say your boy was thoroughly normal and possessed of an exciting and creative imagination.

Dear Doris: Faithful Reader's heartbreak sounds so much like my own. I have a lovely family and a husband who is very hard to get along with. I too am in love.

Last spring this man, who loves me too, became desperately ill and was expected to die. I went to see him and knew then that I could never forget him. Please help me, Doris. I have been very ill all winter over this. — Heartbroken.

Dear Heartbroken: When a woman finds, all too late, the man she can give her whole heart to, it is heartbreak indeed. Yours is no passing flirtation. This can happen to well - disciplined and mature persons, who would not think of walking out on present responsibilities.

Yet there are times when separation from a marriage partner is desperately needed; and for such situations social workers rejoice in the new and easier divorce laws. There are times when not only does the woman sacrifice herself, but home atmosphere is so charged with dislike as to be healthy for unwary children.

I'd suggest you discuss it all with a trained counsellor.

Doris welcomes your comments and ideas. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Collapsible Furniture Said Here to Stay

EDMONTON (CP) — Collapsible furniture is no fad—it is here to stay, says Keith Brooks, manager of a store dealing in the air- and water-filled plastic containers.

Now when wife goes home to mother she can cart away most of her furniture in a shopping bag—let the air out of the couch, chairs and tables, siphon the water out of the beds, and they will fold into a light pile.

"Plastic furniture has many advantages," Mr. Brooks said. "It is economical, in contemporary styles, washable, mobile and child-proof."

He believes it is the answer to the housewife who gets frequent urges to rearrange her living room furniture. Balancing a couch in one hand and an end table in another results in no backaches.

"The armchairs are especially great for taking out on the lake," Mr. Brooks said.

Plastic furniture was first introduced in the United States a year or so ago and in Canada in January. Sales are increasing, Mr. Brooks said, and he is looking forward to a profitable life in the business.

The water beds intrigue most of browsers in his shop. With the slightest pressure applied to the bed it begins to quiver like an amoeba. It continues to shiver as long as pressure is applied.

"There are no pressure points, therefore no tossing and turning all night. The bed moulds to the exact contours of your body so no one part of your body becomes tired from lying on it."

The beds range in size from three feet by four feet—the crib size—to the jumbo size which is seven by nine. Round beds are also on the market with diameters of seven feet or more.

"We can make a bed to any size you want," said Mr. Brooks.

Prices vary from about $35 to $80, not including the wooden frame the water mattress should be placed on, "but it isn't necessary." Some of the more elaborate frames, containing orgate headboards and lighted sets, cost more than $1,000.

The plastic furniture begins at about $20 for an armchair to several times that amount for chesterfields, with separate air-filled compartments. The first couches locked the separate compartments, and when a person sat on one and all the air would rush to the other side lifting it like a teeter-totter.

The chairs can be shaped like conventional armchairs, tree stumps or deflated weather balloons.

Mr. Brooks guarantees his furniture for a year. An early line of plastic furniture sprung leaks easily, he said, but he classed his new products as "indestructible."

He said they are no more susceptible to damage from cigarette burns than ordinary furniture.

For people who like to smoke in bed, burning a hole in their water mattress would result in 40 gallons of water gushing out, but Mr. Brooks doubted such a possibility because the frames are constructed to retain any mattress leakage.

Mr. Brooks could not describe the "average person" who buys plastic furniture. Bohemians to sedate old ladies buy the water beds, persuaded by some as erotic—and the furniture gets placed in penthouses and "knock-about family rooms."

Nutritional Cheese and Asparagus Dish

By MARY MOORE

Who should I respond to first: the girl who asked for more reducers' recipes or the wife who wants recipes for her diabetic husband or the budgeter who complains that my recipes are too expensive or the hostess who wishes I would give more gourmet recipes or the vegetarian who asks "Have you forgotten all about us?"

I have been looking after all of these people, I think, but since it is asparagus time decided to give a beautiful casserole for vegetarians that has all the nutritional ingredients necessary to a main dish. Incidentally when the asparagus season is over try it with broccoli.

CHEESE AND ASPARAGUS PUFF (serves 6)

4 large (or 5 medium) eggs
2 cups milk
½ tsp. salt
1-16 tsp. pepper
1 cup fine cracker crumbs
1 pimiento chopped (optional)
1 lb. fresh asparagus (or canned or frozen ½ pieces) (see below)
10 oz. (2 cups packed) Edam or Gouda cheese cut into ¼" cubes
2 tbsps. melted butter

NOTES: You may reduce the number of dishes to be washed by mixing all of the ingredients in the casserole in which this Puff is to be baked.

First prepare the crumbs and dice the cheese. Then cut 4" spears from asparagus stalks. Trim and cut into ¼" pieces the tender bottom ends of stalks.

Into large casserole break eggs and beat with rotary beater. Add all remaining ingredients except asparagus tips and melted butter. Stir until thoroughly blended. Wipe sides clean with paper towel. Arrange asparagus tips on top like spokes of a wheel. Drizzle melted butter all over top and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 50-60 min. uncovered.

NOTE: This casserole may be assembled in advance but butter should be poured over just before baking.

This casserole was very pretty. Do not worry about it falling like a souffle. The cracker crumbs make it durable.

I hope our vegetarian readers see and clip this recipe.

Vegetarians Take Notice!

Vegetarians should sit up and take notice. Mary Moore has given you a main dish casserole that provides all of the nutritious elements needed for a well-balanced meal. Cheese and asparagus puff stretches that precious bundle of fresh asparagus. When it is out of season you may substitute fresh frozen or canned or use broccoli.

Prior to her recent wedding, Mrs. Ean Bush (nee Valerie Clark) was honored at two miscellaneous showers, one at the home of Miss Carole Kings and the other at the home of the bride with her sister Mrs. H. Campbell as hostess. Mr. and Mrs. Ken Bush, the bridegroom's parents entertained the bridal party after the rehearsal. During the wedding reception the couple received a phone call from the bride's sister in B.C. and a telegram from her brother in B.C.

Bush – Clark

Valerie Ann Clark, daughter of M.W.O. Kenneth Clark and Mrs. Clark became the bride of Ean Fred Bush son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bush of Trenton at a ceremony held on May 15 at the CFB North Protestant chapel. Padre H. T. Cox officiated at the double ring ceremony while Mrs. Mary Craig played appropriate wedding music and accompanied the soloist Mrs. Jerry La Pointe.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of embroidered nylon over satin with a flowing train. The stand up collar and long, full sleeves were trimmed with pleated lace. The waist length veil fell from a head piece of tulle leaves and lily of the valley. She carried a white Bible crested with a mauve orchid encircled with stephanotis and long ribbon streamers.

The matron of honor Mrs. Gloria Campbell of Pickering, sister of the bride wore a floor length gown of white embroidered nylon over purple taffeta. The bridesmaids Mrs. Elaine Carlisle of Stirling, sister of the bridegroom and Miss Carole Kings of Trenton were attired in dresses identical to that of the maid of honor but over mauve taffeta. They carried nosegays of white shasta daisies and baby's breath.

The little flower girl Colleen Chambers of Corbyville, cousin of the bridegroom wore a long dress identical to those of the other attendants but over white satin. She carried a basket of yellow and white daisies. All the attendants wore daisies in their hair.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother Ken Bush as best man. The ushers were Jack Clark and Lee Scrimshaw. The ring bearer Jamie Campbell, nephew of the bride wore a white suit and carried the rings on a heart shaped cushion matching the bride's dress.

The reception followed at the Sergeant's Mess, South Station CFB where guests were received by the bride's mother wearing a gold dress of Chinese silk brocade with yellow embroidery and gold braid trim adorning the raised neckline and sleeves. Gold accessories and a mauve orchid corsage completed her costume.

Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother in a pink flowered polyester dress with English lace crimp cape, white accessories and a mauve orchid corsage.

For the wedding trip to Niagara, the bride changed to a mauve and white crimplene dress, white coat and accessories with a mauve orchid corsage. Upon return the newly married couple will reside in RR 3, Frankford.

To understand meat codes at Food City

MANUFACTURERS CODE DATING

All processed meats such as wieners, bacon and sliced cooked meats are code dated, according to the recommended Code of Practice for product dating of the Meat Packers Council of Canada.

The code date shows the month and the day of the month. This allows you to always select the freshest product in the meat counter. For example, two packages of bacon are coded 0519 and 0517, the 5 represents the fifth month (MAY) and the second number the date. So in this case, the package with the 0519 code is the freshest.

FOOD CITY CODE DATING

Store packaged meats such as beef, pork, chicken and veal, are also on Freshness Code Dating. The actual date the meat is packaged in the store is printed clearly on the price label. i.e.: May 19.

It's outdoor season again and the urge to own our own piece of outdoors once more overtakes many of us. Before you make the final decision to own your own mortgage, remember that the reference shelves hold handbooks of fiscal tables to help you calculate those payments.

The Handbook of Interest, Annuity and related fiscal tables is compiled by Cuthbert E. Reeves. He has seen a need for assembly of the interest, annuity and other tables useful in dealing with the problems arising in the purchase, sale, leasing and financing of realty. The Alpha Financial Corporation has produced Amortized Monthly Mortgage Payments. Tables cover interest rates from 5% percent to 15 percent compounded semi - annually. Another volume designed to help solve problems in finance is Compound Interest and Annuity Tables - prepared by Frederick and Jerome Kent.

More calculations and tables designed to help in future adjustments are contained in Industrial Metrication by J. Peach. This dandy little book is in English publication presented to prepare people there for the changeover to the metric system of weights and measures. Metric units in all areas are explained. Of most general use of course will be the description of the new decimal currency and the chapter on everyday metrics - refrigerator temperatures, measures of fuel, and cooking and dress making units.

Outdoor season looks different anywhere in the world. To support your interest in the wildlife of this and other areas of the world, Belleville Public Library has the new International Wildlife Encyclopedia. This work covers in 20 volumes, the A to Z of the earth's wildlife. Animals, insects, fishes, reptiles and birds, both familiar and strange are included. In each instance, the description of habitat, history and habits is amplified by photographs in color. Next best thing to a visit to the zoo, the whole makes fascinating reading - and just looking.

If you plan to improve your knowledge of the out-of-doors there are other books to which you may want to refer. A naturalists's guide to Ontario: The Physiography of Southern Ontario: Rocks and minerals for the collector: Hull, Manitwadi, Quebec, Ottawa - Peterborough, Ontario: The Forest trees of Ontario: Native trees of Canada: Native Wild plants: Guide to wild flowers: and The Field guide to Ferns.

Remember that it doesn't have to be a problem in finance or in identifying animals which brings you to the reference department. We have information on subjects from consumer education and pensions, to tax studies and technical handbooks. For help in answering your questions use the reference department of your library.

Land Sale Inquiry May Begin Next Week

TORONTO (CP) — Hearings of a judicial inquiry into the recent purchases of Niagara Escarpment land by the Ontario government may begin next week, Chief Judge Colin Bennett of County and district courts said Tuesday.

Judge Bennett was appointed Friday by Premier William Davis to examine the land purchases, after allegations of large profits being made on resale to the government by interests that had purchased the land previously.

The judge said in an interview he has appointed two Toronto lawyers, B. J. MacKinnon and Marvin Catzman, to act as commission counsel.

Hearings will begin either in the first or second week of next month. At the first hearing, it will be decided who shall be given official status at the inquiry, Judge Bennett said.

Reorganization Gets OK

All-party Agreement Ends Commons Logjam

OTTAWA (CP) — The government-reorganization bill is heading toward passage in the Commons today, freed from a debating logjam by all-party agreement.

The bill's major provisions would permit the prime minister to create new ministries of state, and would create a department that would take over environmental jobs now being done by several departments.

It passed committee-of-the-whole discussion Tuesday, and debate on third and final reading starts today.

The measure has been before the House for weeks, with government spokesmen labelling opposition tactics a filibuster.

In line with the deal worked out last week, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury offered an amendment Tuesday that would allow the Commons to debate the creation of each new ministry. The amendment was passed.

The government also won support in the 264 Liberal majority of the limit of five new ministries that could be created, and opposition agreement to pass the bill by tonight.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin took credit for the amendment calling for debate on new ministries. He said it was a good example of what a responsible opposition could achieve.

Stanley Knowles, New Democrat House leader, agreed.

He was also pleased with what he termed the growing uneasе among Liberal backbenchers about the increasing powers of the government.

But James A. McGrath (PC — St. John's East) was not satisfied that fisheries would be adequately treated even with the extra title for Mr. Davis.

The environment department needed a deputy minister of fisheries as well, he said.

That was not in the agreement, Mr. Drury replied. A separate deputy for fisheries would mean a separate department.

Mr. McGrath responded that he would be happy if one deputy minister held both titles, just as the minister would.

The House later defeated an amendment from Mr. Knowles that would have done just that.

The House also passed a clause Tuesday authorizing the prime minister to appoint as many parliamentary secretaries as there are ministers.

The maximum now is 16.

"We are buying a pig in a poke," warned Mr. Knowles. MPs could not know now how many parliamentary secretaries would or could be appointed.

Thomas M. Bell (PC—Saint John-Lancaster) said Parliament would expect more work from parliamentary secretaries than they have delivered in the past.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: We understand that off the Gaspe Coast there are two locations where islands have been set aside as bird sanctuaries. Can you tell us how they may be reached and something about the area?

ANSWER: The two bird sanctuaries that you refer to are probably Bonaventure Island and Perce and Rocher-aux-Oiseaux in the Magdalen Islands.

At the eastern extremity of the Gaspe Peninsula on the Gulf of St. Lawrence, Perce is in one of the most scenic locations on the continent. This summer resort is best viewed from Mont Ste. Anne, which can be ascended on foot or in a horse-drawn carriage.

Rocher Perce (Pierced Rock), an interesting rock formation offshore, rises abruptly from the sea. At low tide it may be approached on foot, over a sandbar.

Bonaventure Island, 3 miles offshore, is a bird sanctuary which shelters 18 varieties of wildfowl. Boats are available from Perce; a trip around the island requires 1½ hours fare $2.50. Visitors may land on the island, where a guided trail leads to the top of the cliffs overlooking the bird ledges.

An enjoyable 5-mile automobile trip may be taken around Mont Ste. Anne. Starting north up the steep hill outside Perce, pass the Three Sisters Cliffs overhanging the sea, the Overlook and the Big Bowl, a rock formation on the mountainside. Turning southeast on Chemin du "Fall," pass the theatre-rock formations and Mont Blanc. St. Paul's Anglican Church marks the descent into Perce.

The Magdalen Islands, located in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, 155 miles from the coast of the Gaspe Peninsula, were first visited by Jacques Cartier in 1534 but were not settled until 1774 when the Acadiens fled Nova Scotia. They made up nine islands and several islets covering 53,000 acres.

This remote area now has a population of about 13,000 and is growing economy. Farming and fishing are the main industries; Magdalen lobsters are said to be the best in the world. Visitors will find sand - duned beaches, rocky coastline and sun-tryside sprinkled with quaint houses. French is the spoken language, but many Magdalenians also speak English.

The eight main islands are connected by bridges and sand bars. The island of Rocher-aux-Oiseaux, a large bird sanctuary, may be visited by boat through arrangements with the local fishermen. The Magdalen Islands are accessible by boat from Pictou, N. S., Charlottetown and Souris, P.E.I. Daily air service is available from Charlotte-N.B.

OHSIP A Factor?

Ontario Tonsils Snipped at Busy Pace

TORONTO (CP) — More than half the children in Ontario have their tonsils removed although some experts say no more than three per cent of children really need the operation, Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said Tuesday.

"A surprising number of surgical procedures of questionable necessity are being performed in Ontario. Tonsillectomy is the most flagrant example. . . . Ontario has the highest rate in the country."

Mr. Lawrence, speaking to a legislature committee studying his $990 million departmental estimates for 1971-72, was elaborating on a series of questions he asked the Ontario Medical Association in a major speech earlier this month.

He had asked the doctors why they, as a self-disciplining professional group, allowed overbilling of the province's medical-insurance scheme and abuses of medical ethics by a minority of doctors.

Opposition members asked the minister to make public the facts behind his questions.

Mr. Lawrence said his questions were based on computer analysis of the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan.

Dr. J. S. W. Aldis, executive director of the health service insurance division, said tissue audit of the removed tonsils would be no help in determining whether the operation was necessary because 90 per cent of Canadian children have decayed tonsils in winter. Most became healthy by adolescence or adulthood.

The removal of up to 50 or 60 per cent "is exceeding the balance of what most conscientious experts in the field would consider reasonable," Dr. Aldis said.

Mr. Lawrence also said Tuesday evidence from OHSIP and from Physicians Services Inc. showed the average income per patient over a three-month period for a general practitioner is $18.67. But five GPs have an income per patient of more than $300. Six psychiatrists had incomes per patient of more than $200 while the average for psychiatrists is $80.

"Five GPs have been interviewed by OHSIP because they earn very large incomes by seeing each patient several times more than the average."

Mr. Lawrence said OHSIP is not aware of any claims for fictitious services.

But a number of individual physicians habitually substituted higher-cost for lower-cost items when billing OHSIP.

They claimed general assessment or physical examinations for office visits, hospital visits for supportive care, office visits when only injections had been given. Diagnostic work was listed as an independent procedure instead of part of an examination, Mr. Lawrence said.

OHSIP also found that services provided by supporting personnel were billed at the physicians' fee level.

In other business:

—Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales said any company that advertises it has tacit approval from his department for subdivisions does so at its own peril.

—Hugh Peacock (NDP—Windsor West) said expenses paid members of the Ontario legislature should no longer be tax free.

—Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, said Ontario is "no easy welfare haven" for people emigrating from other countries.

—Labor Minister Gordon Carton said his department is not considering increasing the province's minimum wage to $1.75 from $1.65.

Costs Outlined

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence gave the legislature's human resources committee figures Tuesday showing how much the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan costs and how much it will take in from premiums and federal grants.

The total revenue is expected to be $541,250,000 made up of $317,300,000 in premiums, $205,450,000 from federal grants and another $18,500,000 from overdue federal contributions.

The government expects to pay out $470,342,000 in claims payments, $21,300,000 for other payments to doctors and laboratories, $32,006,000 for administration of the Health Insurance Registration Board and the Health Service Insurance Division, and $57 million for the health-resources development plan. The total expenditures for OHSIP for 1971-72 are expected to be $580,648,000.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said the $57 million for development should not be billed to OHSIP. Without that figure, he said, the plan would be making a "profit" of $17.3 million next year.

Advice Not for Canadians

Police Told to Speak Softly While They 'Carry A Big Gun'

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The president of the 150,000-member International Conference of Police Associations has urged police officers everywhere to "speak softly and carry a big gun."

Speaking Tuesday before the Police Officers Association of Michigan, ICPA President Carl Parsell declared: "If police killings are to end, it looks like the only people who are interested in stopping the slaughter are the police officers themselves."

Parsell was re-elected president of the POAM and also heads the Detroit Police Officers Association.

Policiesa, police administrators and the courts have failed to end the police killings, he said, and now it is up to the police officers themselves.

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Canadian Police Association said Tuesday he disagreed with advice to police officers to "speak softly and carry a big gun."

Syd Brown said in an interview he felt such advice would only serve to aggravate the problem of police killings.

Mr. Brown was commenting on remarks made earlier in the day by Carl Parsell, president of the 150,000-member International Conference of Police Associations.

Mr. Parsell told a meeting of the Police Officers Association of Michigan in Lansing that "shotguns must be in every patrol car and be ready for use every minute of every day."

Mr. Brown said he thought Mr. Parsell was speaking basically for policemen in the U.S. where they had a "real problem."

He said that so far the same problem did not exist in Canada and he hoped that it never would.

Smythe Appeal June 14

OTTAWA (CP) — An appeal on income tax charges by Stafford Smythe, president of Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto, will be heard June 14 in the Supreme Court of Canada.

A Crown motion to have the appeal heard next month rather than later in the fall was agreed to by the high court with no objection from the defence.

Smythe is charged with evading payment on income totalling $278,920 between 1965 and 1968, and with making false statements in tax returns between 1964 and 1967.

When Smythe appeared before a county judge in October, 1970, his lawyer, J. J. Robinette, argued that because the Crown was proceeding by indictment, it was an infringement of the Bill of rights.

Proceeding by indictment made Smythe liable to a jail sentence if convicted. A fine only is allowable under a conviction by summary trial.

County judge Joseph Kelly agreed with the argument but his decision was wiped out by the Ontario Supreme Court. It said that Smythe's trial should proceed by way of indictment.

Smythe is asking the Supreme Court of Canada to reinstate Judge Kelly's ruling.

Ontario Economic Council Makes Specialty of Boat-rocking

TORONTO (CP) — Boat-rocking is a way of life for the Ontario Economic Council, an aggressive provincial advisory agency which has never lived up to its name, or even tried to.

That's because, in strict economic terms, the council became redundant in 1964 when Ottawa established the National Economic Council.

Although the Ontario agency's powers were broadened so as not to conflict with the national council's goals, the name remained.

Today, nearly 10 years after its creation, the provincial council concerns itself with a wide range of issues, from the plight of the immigrant to the way forests grow, few of which have any real relation to the group's name.

Donald Richmond, a tall, shaggy-haired political economist with the council, calls the agency an internal pressure group or catalyst whose aim is to spur government departments into action.

It is constantly running afoul of bureaucratic sensibilities.

"We sometimes work with departments, sometimes against them, and sometimes on the fringe," he says. "You could say we frequently create antagonism which the bureaucrats don't like."

The council is little known publicly because of policies initiated by William Cranston, who recently retired for health reasons after eight years as the government-appointed chairman.

Mr. Cranston was content to keep the council in the background, letting its reports "stand on their own hook." If a government department wanted to take credit for the council's work, as many did, that was fine.

Dr. John Gillies, a York University professor, takes over as new chairman June 15.

Thirteen research projects, from a pilot study on land-use planning to St. Lawrence Seaway talks, were initiated by the council in 1970 alone.

Operating on a $250,000 budget, the council already has published 18 major reports. One of these, on the problems immigrants face moving to Ontario, made public last year, convinced the government to set aside $3 million to help resolve the situation.

Council officials say that government would not have acted.

It frequently is called to act as a kind of mediator in inter-departmental disputes. It made a major tour of Northern Ontario in 1968 to get an on-the-spot look at problems facing the area.

A bulky index it compiled of government services available to individuals, groups, companies and municipalities is considered a model of its kind.

Another index, updated every two years, lists all the private and public research projects being undertaken in Ontario. Distributed to industry, universities and individuals across the province, it helps avoid duplication of research. The Russians sought and received a copy of it.

A study the council did on tourism won it a Canadian Tourist Association award for "unusual achievement."

The council was successful in promoting Moosonee, Ont., on James Bay, as an airport terminus for eastern Arctic shipping. It exerted pressure to force a reluctant Ontario Hydro to test lignite from Northern Ontario as a possible replacement for coal in thermal power stations.

While the council doesn't mind ruffling government feathers, it follows two strict rules:

—It does not interfere in areas where an advisory body already exists, such as in housing and health.

—It does not want to be privy to confidential government information.

Accepting government secrets would leave it open to criticism because the 21-member council is composed of private citizens who serve without pay.

Among the council members are David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor; Dalzell Jones, chairman of Consumers' Gas Co.; Robert Taylor, vice-president of the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd.; and W. Roy Thompson, industry commissioner of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission.

The council's full-time staff of eight, operating from a small suite of offices on the seventh floor of an uptown building, include Secretary Ian Butters, an electrical engineer; C. H. Van Horne, chemical engineer and consultant; and Geoffray Allebrook, who once served in the British colonial service and ran the international relief fund during the recent civil war in Biafra.

"As you can see from the diversity of talents, things can get pretty hectic up here," says Mr. Butters.

MRS. BORDEN TULLY, 109 Peter Street, Perth, CAME MAXI DISCOUNTING AT LOBLAWS AND SHE CAME OUT AHEAD.

Mrs. Tully who shops for four says, "I used to shop Loblaws in Hamilton and I liked it. Then we moved to Perth in 1964 and there was no Loblaws there so I occasionally came over to Smiths Falls to shop. About a month, six weeks ago, I came in and noticed the difference in Loblaws prices and I've been coming back to Loblaws ever since—to save a little money like everybody else." Asked to estimate her MAXI DISCOUNT SAVINGS in dollars and cents, Mrs. Tully says, "I haven't really averaged it out, but I think I save from $5 to $10 each trip. The prices here are definitely lower now—there are savings all over the store".

Advice to Canada:

Get to Know People In Latin America

MEXICO CITY (CP) — A leading Mexican educationist urged Canadians Monday to avoid the approach taken by many Americans toward Latin America—the attitude that works on the basis "this is how we do things at home."

Victor Urquidi, president of the Colegio de Mexico, told a meeting of the Canadian Association of Latin American Studies that while there are some Americans who do not follow this practice, the majority do.

He suggested that Canadians avoid what he called "academic tourism" by sending first-class economists, sociologists and anthropologists to study in Latin America for a minimum period of one year.

"We don't want half-baked experts coming here to tell us how to solve our problems," he said.

Osvaldo Sunkel, here for a three-week holiday or even for a summer isn't enough. You have to get to know the people and their way of life."

He added that Canadians shouldn't come to Latin America with the idea of changing the Latin peoples.

"We are two different peoples and you must accept this."

Urquidi said he is pleased that Canadian interest in Latin America is on the increase and he hopes that in future it will be possible to arrange student exchanges between the countries.

His comments followed presentation of a paper to the CALAS meetings by Herman Konrad, a professor in Latin American studies at Calgary.

Konrad said Canada relies heavily on the U.S. for advice on Latin American studies, but "the programs models represented by American institutions should not be the ones Canada strives for."

Konrad said there are grounds for skepticism regarding the development of something new in Canadian academic relations with Latin America because the present Canadian milieu in many ways is merely an extension of developments in the U.S.

"Nevertheless, I would insist that as far as academic relationships between Canada and Latin America are concerned there is a great promise for something new."

No Welcome Mat for New Commercial Entries

Both Quinte Hotel and Howard And Robert Printing went through tough initiation tests last night in the opening Commercial Softball league game of the season.

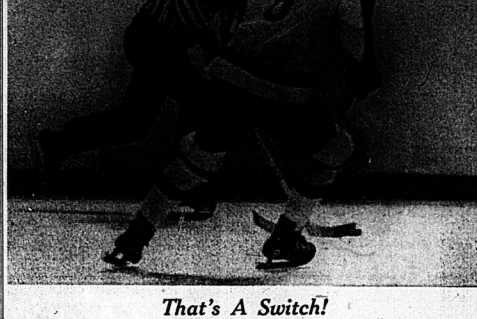
The Hotelmen were stung four times in the first inning as Point Anne utilized that margin to record a 9-1 win in the opening game of the double header, while the defending champion Richard Ellis Juniors took a tight 14-10 pitchers duel from Howard and Robert in the second contest.

A walk and an infield error opened the gates for Point Anne in the first inning when Mike Cook, Doug Olsen and Rick Rosebush reached Quinte hurler Bob Swan for run-producing safeties. Bruce Stickle drove in the fourth marker with a fly ball to left field before Swan was able to retire the next two batters to end the inning.

Don Holoway turned in a strong pitching performance for Point Anne to handcuff the Hotelmen on only four hits. The only Quinte score came in the sixth inning when Wayne Woods doubled and was classed home by Dale Duvall's RBI-single.

Holoway went the full seven innings to record the win, blowing third strikes past 16 batters and walking only two. Swan allowed eight hits on the Quinte mound fanning three batters. He did not walk a man in the seven inning stint.

Rick Rosebush paced the winners with a pair of doubles, while Mike Cook doubled and singled and Vern Whalen added a triple. The other safeties went to Eric Maher, Doug Olsen and Jim Norwood.



A double by Wayne Woods was the only extra base hit of Holoway with singles going to Dale Duvall, Dwight Rathwell and Bob Swan.

Where There's A Will...

TEDDY WAITE

Morch Mariners made an early 2-0 lead stand up as they matched tallies in the late innings to gain a 5-3 decision over the Post Office in the first Industrial Softball League action of the season.

Will Bulpit fired eight-hit ball to gain the pitching verdict. He fired strikes past 11 batters, while exhibiting flawless control.

Gary Johnson was touched for 12 hits in absorbing the loss, setting down four batters on strikes while issuing the only walk of the game.

Bulpit punched a double and triple to aid his own cause, while Morch teammates Glynn Reynolds and Larry Ell added two doubles each.

Ed Percy was the top Post Office batsmen with two singles and a double, while Reid had a triple and Rohan a two-base hit.

In the other Industrial game played, Unemployment Insurance Commission blasted ACCO 17-2.

Bernie Coughlan hurled the win for UIC, while Ron McCoy and Alec Belch worked in a losing cause.

Richards, Healy, Coughlan and Parrinder each had two safeties for UIC, while John Smith collected a pair of hits for the losers.

Ellis hurler Ted Waite played a major role in carrying the rookie-laden juniors to their 1-0 win over Howard and Robert.

Waite, one of the mainstays from last year's champions, tired a two-hitter to outduel Lary Marshall of the rival Printers.

The Juniors, seven of whom were starting their first Commercial League contest managed six hits off Marshall, who was himself getting his initial taste of action in the major Belleville loop.

The only run of the game was scored in the fifth inning when Ellis shortstop Rick Graham reached first on a walk and then raced all the way home when John Sutherland's blast to right field was misplayed. Dave Stalkovich recording the third out at home plate as Lorne Blatchford attempted to score on the dropped third strike.

The Ellis ace fired three strikes past a dozen batters, while walking two in recording the win. Marshall issued two free passes, striking out three batters in the six innings that he worked.

Danny Lupenette was the top batsman for the winners with a pair of singles. Other safeties went to Waite, John Campbell, Graham and Brian Gariepy.

Ridley and Don Gardiner were the only Howard and Robert batsmen to solve Waite's deliveries.

Hall Still Bashing'em

Paul Hall who bashes linebackers in the fall for the Quinte Secondary School football champions will be bashing baseballs this season for the Kinsmen.

The hefty 205-pounder will be switched from his regular catching position to the outfield this season because of a broken hand incurred in the fourth game of last year's baseball schedule. The injury kept him out of the lineup for the remainder of the season.

The 18-year-old slugger is expected to fill the clean-up slot in the Kinsmen batting order tonight when they open their Eastern Ontario Baseball Association schedule against Kendall intermediates.

The game will get under way at 8 p.m. with opening ceremonies at the Fairgrounds slated for 7:45.

Moira Lacrosse Dies Suddenly

It took a sudden death playoff before North Addington was finally able to prove its supremacy in the Quinte COSSA lacrosse loop.

The Cloyne high school won an 11-7 decision over Moira Secondary last night to give them the championship. The two teams had tied in both of their regular season contests posting identical records of 4-0-2.

Gerry Synder led the way for the winners firing four goals getting help from Doug Perry and Bill Paterson, who notched two apiece. Brian Brooks tallied a goal and five helpers with single markers going to Bruce Paddick and John Hope.

Danny Payne paced Moira with a goal and three assists while Dan Coulson scored once and assisted on two others.

By Maurice Switzer

In the fall of 1922, Leo Dandurand, manager-coach of the Montreal Canadiens entry in the six-year-old National Hockey League, set out for the small western Ontario town of Stratford, armed with a contract for $5,500 and, legend has it, $500 in small bills.

Dandurand returned to Montreal minus the money, but with the contract bearing the signature of Howie Morenz.

It was no coincidence that, six months later, Mr. Dandurand's name, and that of such hallowed hockey figures as Georges Vezina, Aurel Joliat, and Joe Malone were being inscribed on the Stanley Cup for the first time since the NHL was formed in 1917.

Today, sixteen engraving jobs later, the Montreal Canadiens are offering their employees somewhat more than Morenz' $2,500 annual stipend. Current stars super-star Jean Beliveau spends that amount on postage replies to fan mail.

But if pro hockey salaries have taken a steep step up, so has the number of working hours.

The Canadiens won their first NHL Stanley Cup by playing the grand total of 24 games — 24 of them in a regular schedule, and the remaining half-dozen in three playoff series against Ottawa, Vancouver, and Calgary.

On Tuesday evening, May 18th last, the 1970-71 version of Les Habs captured their 16th National Hockey League championship by winning the last of 20 playoff games — combined with a 78-game schedule and a dozen pre-season exhibitions, that meant this year's Canadiens had played the world's fastest game 110 times since opening training camp way back in September.

While the Mahovlichs and Dryden were waving 'em with scoring and stinginess, most observers overlooked an NHL record that was going by the boards. The decisive May 18th game set a new record for league longevity, surpassing the previous May 11 season-ending Cup win by the Habs over St. Louis in 1968.

Just think of it — playing hockey in May! If you lived in Montreal you could take in an Expo game in the afternoon, and head down to the Forum that evening. Or maybe drop over to the Autostade and catch a glimpse of some of the Alouettes testing new cleats. And if nothing's doing, you could always drive out to Richelieu Valley and try your luck on the 18 holes the pros will be testing in this July's Canadian Open.

But if you're a Montrealer who happens to play for David Molson's band of merry men, you've thinking about one thing: less than 100 shopping days until training camp.

That's right, a mere 14 weeks from now the NHL clubs will start sweating the summer out of their roster hopefuls.

In the beginning (the 1917-18 league inaugural), there was a 22-game schedule. In 1918-19 it dropped to 18 games, but rebounded to 24 the following season. From then on it was all uphill.

The big-timers played a 30-game schedule in 1924-25, then jumped to 36 in the next year.

With the addition of New York, Chicago, and Detroit entries, the NHL was a ten-team two-division league and the schedule was increased to 44 games in 1926-27.

By 1932 clubs were playing 48-game schedules, and the nate was upped to 50 in the 1942-43 season, when league bosses decided to put all playoff sets on a best-of-seven basis.

In 1946-47, the first year of Clarence Campbell's tenure as NHL president, the schedule was increased to 60 games. It became 70 three seasons later.

The 1967-68 expansion "forced" a 74-game schedule, which went to 76 the following year, and 78 this past term.

Hockey has no doubt become a better product since the days of Leo Dandurand, but the swelling schedule, (which, for playoff-makers, is within striking distance of baseball's 162-game marathon), and tedious travel are making some public offerings of hockey less than top-calibre.

The reasons for longer schedules is not a philanthropic desire on the part of NHL governors to provide the public with a surfeit of sporting fare. It is to sell more seats, to reap bigger returns from sale of network broadcast rights..

Granted, it is also needed to meet increased payroll demands: it takes more than a few greys to pay Bobby Orr's annual allowance.

But unless players and management start applying the brakes, a player's league life expectancy will drop considerably in the face of exhausting schedule demands.

When the Stanley Cup playoffs become part of our Dominion Day celebrations, I'm going fishing instead.

Giants Have Cake, Eat It Too!

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Dodgers helped Willie Mays celebrate his 20 years in the big leagues with a barrage of birthday cakes—but they couldn't cut it against Juan Marichal—as usual.

Mays was rewarded with 20 cakes before the San Francisco-Los Angeles contest Tuesday night at Dodger Stadium, they Marichal went out and starved the Dodgers on seven hits in a 9-1 Giants romp.

The triumph continued Marichal's spellbinding successes against his Los Angeles cousins. He now has mastered them 36 times in 49 career decisions.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York Mets trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 in 12 innings; Houston Astros stopped San Diego Padres 3-2; Montreal Expos edged Atlanta Braves 3-2; St. Louis Cardinals bounced Chicago Cubs 4-2 and Cincinnati Reds turned back Pittsburgh Pirates 7-4.

Marichal, who has a history of pitching his best against the Dodger aces, beat Bill Singer for the second time in two weeks.

Singer, blasted out by a six-run sixth inning that included a three-run homer by Marichal, is off to the worst start of his career with a 2-9 record.

Bob Aspromonte drilled a Jim Bunning offering into the right field corner to score the winning run for New York in the bottom of the 12th. Donn Clendenon roared home from second base on the two-out single.

Johnny Edwards brought Houston from behind with a three-run homer in the seventh inning. Clay Kirby had a 2-0 cushion and was working on a one-hitter when John Mayberry singled and rode to third on Norm Miller's double. Edwards then ripped a two-out homer, his first of the year.

Ron Swoboda's bases-loaded walk in the seventh inning scored the winning run for Montreal. Swoboda's walk off Phil Niekro followed passes to Rusty Staub ad Bob Bailey and an error by second baseman Felix Millan on Ron Fairly's sharp grounder.

The Expos had tied the game 2-2 on Fairly's run-scoring single in the fifth.

Ted Simmons' run-scoring single in the third inning broke a 2-2 tie and St. Louis clinched the victory over Chicago with a run in the fourth on a single by Joe Hague, a walk to Julian Javier and a single by Ted Sizemore.

Cincinnati, helped by three Pittsburgh errors, poured seven runs across in the first two innings to beat the Pirates as Ross Grimsley nailed down his first major league victory.

Joe Foy Tough On Former Mates

Joe Foy lashed out four hits Tuesday night and singled home the winning run in the 11th inning to give Washington Senators a 6-5 triumph over Boston Red Sox, his former team.

It was Washington's second victory in a row over the Red Sox, with Foy collecting seven hits in nine at-bats and raising his average from .204 to .246. He's batting .371 against the Red Sox this season.

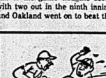
In other American League action, Oakland Athletics beat California Angels 7-5 in 13 innings, Detroit Tigers whipped New York Yankees 7-4, Minnesota Twins downed Milwaukee Brewers 8-5 and Kansas City Royals trounced Chicago White Sox 8-3. Cleveland was rained out at Baltimore with Orioles leading 3-1 in the second inning.

Foy's error in the eighth had set up Boston's tying run but he made amends with his game-winning hit which followed walks to Toby Harrah, Tim Cullen and Del Unser.

Earlier, the Senators took a 3-0 lead in the first inning, with Frank Howard drilling a bases-loaded single. Reggie Smith hit a solo homer for Boston in the third as the Red Sox battled back.

Dave Duncan's second home run of the game tied the score with two out in the ninth inning and Oakland went on to beat the Angels on Reggie Jackson's two-run blast in the 13th.

Dick Green hit a three-run homer for the Athletics while Ken McMullen and Roger Repoz connected for the Angels.



The red-hot Tigers blew a 3-0 lead but ripped into relievers Lindy McDaniel and Jack Aker for four runs in the seventh and whipped the stumbling Yankees, who have dropped nine of their last 11 games. The Tigers have won seven straight.

Singles by Al Kaline, Jim Northrup and Norm Cash tied the score, the go-ahead run scored on a fielder's choice and Aurelio Rodriguez and Ed Brinkman added run-scoring singles.

Harmon Killebrew drove in four runs with a homer and double to pace the Twins over the Brewers. Killebrew's two-run double and a three-run homer by George Mitterwald accounted for five runs in the sixth inning as the Twins snapped a 3-3 tie.

Mike Hegan, Johnny Briggs and Tommy Harper homered for Milwaukee.

Home runs by Gail Hopkins and Paul Schaal helped the Royals trim the White Sox. Schaal also drove in a run with a double, Ed Kirkpatrick had two run-scoring singles and Cookie Rojas cracked a two-run double. Jay Johnstone walloped a pinch homer for the Sox.

Rangers Deal Nevin to Stars

MINNEAPOLIS (CP) — Right winger Bob Nevin of New York Rangers has been traded to Minnesota North Stars, who entered by the National Hockey League's midnight trading deadline Tuesday night with their third deal in four days.

BOB NEVIN

In return for the 33-year-old Ranger captain, the North Stars will deliver a Minnesota player to be named at the conclusion of the NHL draft early next month at Montreal.

The six-foot, 190-pound Nevin scored 21 goals and had 25 assists for the Rangers last season. He has a total of 221 goals and 395 assists in 12 NHL seasons with Toronto Maple Leafs and New York and added five goals and three assists in the playoffs against Toronto and Chicago Black Hawks.

"We know Bob's a good goal scorer," said North Stars coach Jack Gordon, "but his biggest asset is his willingness to play both ways.

"Whenever New York wanted special defensive attention paid to an opposing player—like Bobby Hull in the playoffs—Nevin got the job.

Habs Trade Away Sheehan, Rochefort, Boddy, Murdoch

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, was a busy man Tuesday as his National Hockey League club completed five player deals—two with Minnesota North Stars.

In an early deal, the Canadiens sent defenceman Bob Pardine and left winger Gary Gambucci to the North Stars to complete a year-old trade. Later, they exchanged defencemen with their Stanley Cup semi-final opponents, sending Bob Murdoch to Minnesota in exchange for Marshall Johnston.

The Canadiens also sent defenceman Greg Boddy to Vancouver Canucks for cash and the Canucks' third-round draft choice in the NHL's annual draft of amateur players.

Then they sold centre Bobby Sheehan to California Golden Seals and traded veteran winger Leon Rochefort to Detroit Red Wings for defenceman Kerry Ketler.

Rozelle Wants Answers To Tampering Questions

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle, trying to avoid an open conflict between his national Football League and the Canadian Football League, plans to take the Greg Barton case to the CFL for discussion.

"We have compiled the information on the case and we plan to talk to the CFL," he said Tuesday after a meeting of NFL owners. "I don't know what the chances are of getting Barton back until I talk to them."

Rozelle is trying to put out a spark that has raised talk of war between the leagues. The spark is Barton, an obscure quarterback with Detroit Lions who suddenly became a cause celebre when he was traded to Philadelphia Eagles, apparently agreed to sign with the Eagles and then was spirited away by Toronto Argonauts of the CFL.

"If we do have any evidence that Toronto tampered by talking to Barton before he played out his option we would prefer to give it to them (the CFL) first," Rozelle said. "We have no contractual agreement with the CFL, only an oral agreement against tampering, but both sides would prefer to avoid a bad situation.

"If we have evidence, I would hope that they (the CFL) would abide by it."

Jake Gaudaur, CFL commissioner, said Tuesday he has not yet received any formal complaint from Rozelle.

Meanwhile, coach Jerry Williams of the Eagles, hard-pressed for a quarterback after trading Norm Snead the same week he thought he had acquired Barton, talked about a possible war between the leagues.

"I can foresee a war as far as tampering is concerned," Williams said. "I don't think it would concern players jumping contracts, but I can see us going up there and talking players into playing out their options."

Two years ago Williams jumped a four-year contract with Calgary of the CFL's Western Conference to accept his present job with the Eagles after the Stampeders refused the Eagles permission to negotiate with him.

Barton, who threw only one pass in his three years with Detroit as a third-string quarterback, played out his option last season and became a free agent May 1. The Eagles thought they had reached an agreement with him before that date, only to turn around and find him gone to Toronto the first week in May.

He was not the first player lured away from the NFL by the Argonauts. Not only did they pay Barton in excess of the $100,000 to $150,000 reported to have been offered him by the Eagles, they also signed all-American Joe Theismann and Jim Stillwagon, draft picks of Miami Dolphins and Green Bay Packers, respectively, and highly-regarded running back Leon McQuay of Tampa, who had another year of college eligibility remaining.

Barton's loss to the Eagles leaves them with three quarterbacks—Pete Liske, Rick Arrington and Wayne Liddick.

Liske, who previously played with Calgary under Williams, was acquired during the off-season from Denver Broncos, where he couldn't win the No. 1 job. Arrington is starting his second season and Liddick, a free agent, played in the Atlantic Coast Football League the last two years after failing with Miami.

Joe Theismann, quarterback candidate with the Toronto Argonauts, sizes up his new sweater. Theismann, who wore number 7 throughout his high school days and at Notre Dame, asked for his favorite number when he signed with the Argos and equipment manager Tom Bowen granted his request. (CP Wirephoto)

CAHA Favors Easing Ban

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will be asked today to re-enter international competition below the national level.

A Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association proposal that the CAHA review its policy on non-participation in international competition is expected to go before the association's plenary session today, the third day of the week-long annual meeting.

The proposal says the national team is sponsored by, and is a responsibility of, Hockey Canada and the decision whether Canadian national teams re-enter international competition should be made by Hockey Canada.

Canada withdrew from all international competition in January, 1970, when the International Ice Hockey Federation reversed its decision to allow the Canadian team to use nine professionals.

At that time CAHA president Earl Dawson denounced the reversal and criticized the leadership of Bunny Ahearne, president of the IIHF. The CAHA stand was that there would be no international exchange of teams between Canada and Europe until Canada was allowed to use professionals in world championships.

Dawson confirmed Tuesday that Canada will not have a hockey entry in the 1972 Olympics in Sapporo, Japan. He said Canada would re-enter international competition at the national level only when open tournaments involving both amateurs and professionals are allowed.

Half of Norilsk's Population Out to Cheer All Canadians

MURMANSK (CP) — Enthusiastic crowds turned out Tuesday night to welcome Prime Minister Trudeau and his wife Margaret to this arctic port city where they will remain until tonight.

The prime minister and his party will then leave for Leningrad for the last stop of their 11-day tour before returning to Ottawa Friday.

Although the welcome here was warm, it fell short of the tumultuous turnout Monday night at the mining centre of Norilsk; excitement that continued as the Trudeaus toured the city of 130,000 Monday night and Tuesday.

Apparently the news of the agreement signed by Trudeau and Russian Premier Alexei Kosygin in Moscow last week had preceded his arrival. The agreement promised consultation and co-operation between the two nations, providing among other things for joint approaches to arctic development.

Norilsk residents were so friendly that even Canadian officials and reporters were applauded. A crowd numbering in the thousands jammed the area in front of the hotel as the travellers arrived to check in.

Several times during the stay in the mining centre, Trudeau and his wife were surrounded by milling crowds wanting to shake hands. Leaving Norilsk's Palace of Rest and Culture Monday night, Trudeau waded into a crowd of onlookers, enjoying the personal communication with the crowd.

Russian-style Trudeaumania ended soon after, however, as a flying wedge of security forces led him to his waiting car.

During the brief but busy stop at Norilsk, the prime minister visited a vast open-pit mine, two industrial plants, and various school and hospital projects.

Coroner Says Farm Hand Fed Ensilage

OTTAWA (CP) — An angry city coroner says a mentally retarded man worked long hours on an area farm on a diet of "enormous amounts of macaroni and ketchup supplemented by such nutrients as calf starter and ensilage."

Dr. Roger Hughes was giving further information Tuesday on an investigation he launched into the case of the 25-year-old man who crippled himself after shovelling snow on the farm at nearby Richmond in below-zero weather. The man now is suffering gangrene in both hands.

Crown Attorney John Cassels said he has received reports from Dr. Hughes and from the police and the matter will be further investigated before any charges are considered.

Dr. Hughes said his investigation revealed:

—The retarded man ran away because of maltreatment by the farmer and was later reported to be suffering from malnutrition and diarrhea.

—He worked 12 to 15 hours a day on a diet that consisted mainly of macaroni and ketchup supplemented by such nutrients as calf starter and ensilage.

—He had to wash in an unheated garage and was not allowed in the farmhouse except when he was locked in his room at night.

—His ears, nose and fingers were frozen as the result of being locked outside at 2 a.m. in winter to shovel the driveway. He was wearing only light clothing.

—When treated for his injuries the man's clothing had to be burned and there was "a tremendous body oder."

The administrator of the Rideau Regional Hospital in Smiths Falls, said the man had been there for six years before being discharged in 1968. Dr. Hughes says the man was being supervised by a social worker from the hospital at the time, although he technically may not have been a patient.

The coroner said the retarded man was placed on the farm by the same Rideau hospital team which had placed Frederick Sanderson, an 18-year-old retarded Indian boy who was found hanged March 5 on another Richmond farm.

Pete Beach Testimonial On June 19

One time athletic director and house master at Albert College, N. A. "Pete" Beach executive secretary for the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Association is retiring.

In recognition to his service to school athletics, Mr. Beach will be guest of honor at a testimonial dinner being held on the evening of June 19 at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto and friends in the Quinte area are invited to attend.

"Pete" came to Albert College in 1935 where he remained until the spring of 1941 when he joined the YMCA Overseas services. After the war he returned to Albert and until 1957 was active in the community in high school sports and in "Y" camp and physical fitness programs.

Local persons wishing to attend the dinner or donate toward a gift are invited to contact either Jack Hayman at Quinte Secondary School or George Mills, 17 Symington Drive, Belleville.

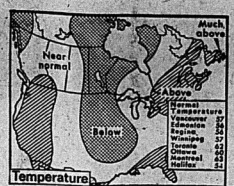
New Action Corps Formed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, of Representative voted its approval Tuesday of President Nixon's proposal to merge the Peace Corps, VISTA and other volunteer agencies into a new Action Corps.

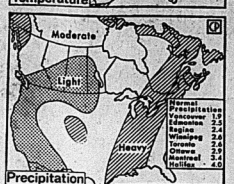
The vote was 224 to 131 against a resolution to reject the Nixon administration plan.

If the Senate does not reject the proposal, the reorganization plan becomes effective June 7.

Late Tuesday, the Senate operations committee voted 10 to three against rejecting the plan.



The House vote came after three hours of debate during which plan opponents argued that the new agency would provide for more efficient and effective management of federal volunteer programs.



The administration has given assurances that it has no plans to de-emphasize the domestic and poverty volunteer program.

Plan Rejected

TORONTO (CP) — A proposal to build 1,649 apartment units in tall buildings half a mile from Toronto International Airport was rejected dy the council of suburban Etobicoke. In a brief from the Canadian Airline Pilots Association council was told the apartment structures would create a "psychological hazard" for pilots using already restricted glide-path guidelines.

B. C. Attorney-General Balks at Bilingualism

OTTAWA (CP) — Attorney-general Leslie Peterson of British Columbia took a stand Tuesday against mandatory bilingual packaging and labelling of products sold in the province.

Such labelling would become compulsory by 1975 under proposals discussed at a closed meeting of provincial and federal ministers on consumer affairs.

Mr. Peterson issued a statement saying that imposition of such requirements on western producers selling goods locally was the height of folly and would unnecessarily increase production costs in an area serving comparatively few French-speaking Canadians.

He also objected to federal legislation in areas of consumer protection already under British Columbia law. These included prohibitions of tampering with automobile odometers and referral selling.

But Basford, federal minister of consumer affairs, upheld the federal position but said he hopes any differences can be worked out.

Frankford District News

FRANKFORD — Mr. Doug Smith of Glenll, Manitoba, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Harry MacDonald and Garland.

Joe Rabel has returned home for the summer from Edmonton Alta., where he has been attending the University of Alberta.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wood for the weekend were their daughters Mrs. R. Maher, Orono and Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Bowles and family of Deep River.

Driver Not Mad at Man Who Took Car Out from Under Him

INDIANAPOLIS (A P) — John Mahler, the most publicized rookie driver in Indianapolis, wants it known he is not mad at the man who took him out of Saturday's $1,000,000 auto race.

"I didn't have a ride when I came up here and I don't have one now," said Mahler, 34, of Bettendorf, Iowa. "Yet, it has been the best thing that has happened to me."

Mahler qualified a car owned by Salt Lake City businessman-driver Dick Simon at 170.164 miles an hour—the fastest four-lap speed ever turned by a first-year man at Indianapolis Motor Speedway. He would have started 27th in the field.

But Simon—who had been bumped from the field in his own car, announced Monday he was taking over Mahler's car for the race and, under the rules, would start it in 33rd, or last position.

Simon, who finished 14th last year in his only Indianapolis 500 start, said contractual obligations with his sponsor forced him to remove Mahler.

The episode quickly made Simon the villain and Mahler the hero in a swirling controversy among racing personnel and fans alike. Mahler admitted Tuesday "it made me a somebody after coming here as a nobody."

Simon, an insurance executive in private life, said his sponsors provided him with a backup car—the one Mahler qualified—and that terms of his contract called for him to drive the car if it raced.

"Dick can only be looked on in the role of villain if the people see me as the persecuted," Mahler said.

"I don't want it that way. Actually, I'm indebted to Dick. He gave me a chance to pass my rookie test in the car, and it was only after he qualified his own car that I got the chance to qualify the second car. It is unfortunate that he was bumped from the lineup by a faster car."

Woodland Taken To Cleaners

Bill Forbes helped take Woodland Dry Cleaners "to the cleaners" as the 1971 Belleville Minor Softball Association season got under way Tuesday night with a trio of peewee bouts.

The Richard Ellis Printing slugger belted three home runs including a grand slam, to lead his teammates to a 28-8 victory over Woodland.

Western Tire got home run help from Scott Sisson and Derek McDonald to stop Conley's Grocery 18-10 despite the circuit blasts of Pat McWilliams and Wayne Ecres for the losers.

In the only other game played, Brad Rose cracked a grand slam homer to help the RAF Vets squash Lions Belch and Sons 16-15. Louis Fulton homered in a losing cause.

Rossmore Man Shoots Wife, Then Himself

Norman Eldon Salisbury, a 55 - year - old Rossmore man, last night shot Patricia Salisbury, 53, his estranged wife of only 45 days, and then turned the 12 - gauge shotgun on himself.

"There is no question . . . it was a murder - suicide," said Deputy Police Chief Harold Reid this morning. "It was a clear-cut case."

According to witnesses, Mrs. Salisbury had been living at her 6 St. Paul Street home after her marriage April 11.

Salisbury apparently arrived at the trim yellow cottage late last night and had heated words with his wife in the living room, a witness reported to police.

After the argument, the Rossmore man left the house and returned with the shotgun. Further words were exchanged and Salisbury fired twice, killing his wife immediately. He then turned the gun on himself.

The elderly lady, who had been staying with Mrs. Salisbury, fled the house in panic, stopped at a nearby home, but received no answer to her cries for help.

A male witness observed her at the rear of the Canadian Hotel and responded to her pleas. Police were called at 12:01.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Salisbury are survived by children from previous marriages. Mrs. Salisbury was widowed late last year; the dead man's former wife Jane Marie, aged 52, was burned to death last fall.

This is Belleville's first murder in 10 years.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P. — Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Over the last six months I have developed this terrible problem. I have excessive gas in my stomach which I emit now and then. This causes great embarrassment.

Being only recently married I am in the company of my husband all the time. When I feel this discomfort coming on I have to find an excuse to leave the room. At times this makes him feel I'm trying to avoid him.

The same thing happens in the office where I work. Either I leave the company of others or they leave me. I know this isn't a serious disease, but I am terribly worried. Do you advise medical attention? I hate to bother a doctor with trivial problems. — Mrs. L.

* * *

COMMENT: On the one hand you say yours is a terrible problem, on the other you call it trivial. People do not have to be on their last legs before consulting a physician. Often, as in your case, it is the so-called trivial things that make life miserable.

By all means see a doctor. Yours is a common problem, yet I can't even hope to be sure what causes your trouble.

Are you tense? Sometimes this affects the stomach or intestines or both. Tense people may belch a lot, or pass wind. An abnormal gallbladder contributes to excess gas. So does a diet of gas-producing foods. To name one: baked beans. I have known some patients like yourself who improved after cutting out milk. Sometimes a simple remedy like medicated charcoal relieves excessive gas.

You see, as I said, I can only guess. Don't consider your terrible problem too "trivial" to keep you away from your doctor.

For Mrs. D.: Often we do not know the reason for baldness occurring in circular spots. It is not always due to "nervousness." I've seen it in placid youngsters, too. Within a year or so, hair usually grows back and the bald spots disappear.

However, it makes sense to see a skin specialist. Sometimes such areas of baldness are due to ringworm of the scalp — a fungus infection.

* * *

For Mr. G.: Even when syphilis has been cured, some tests still come up positive. Under such conditions there are special tests which will give the true answer. Rather than continue to live in anxiety — have your family doctor refer you to a hematologist (blood specialist).

For Mrs. G.: You have a problem. A father who refuses to spend time and play with his two youngsters, aged 6 and 3 certainly leaves a void in happy family life. If he has no love for them, I don't see how you will be able to instill it. You might try talking it over with your minister, doctor, or a professional family counselor. For normal growth, your two boys need the of a father.

Excessive Gas Is Embarrassing

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For May 27

Your birthday today: Discovery is your key word for this coming year. On purely personal terms, you find insights into your own latent talents, gentle responses in loved ones. In worldly terms, you find a more resolute capacity for persuading people to see life as you see it. Today's natives never seem quite able to accept the system into which they are born.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Like it or not you are so an example for others and a pattern or precedent for yourself. Be careful of what and how you do it. A moment's impatience can spoil potential output.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Bring prolonged, formal considerations to more definite conclusions. Force an issue if you must. Later hours bring a sense of relief.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your world brightens as you go thru the day. Gather friends about you for an evening of informative but amusing discussion.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Get something started even if it's only a preliminary version of what you'd like in the future. Put in a thorough, consistent effort plus a little overtime.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Expect interruptions in what ever you do. Your patience and tact help ease visitors, out. Some of what they say may be helpful news.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): A knack for being in the right place at the proper moment defies possibility today. Merely accept it as part of the design.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Future potentials come to your attention. There is much planning to do, many details to research, people to enlist in your activity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Provoke somebody today and you'll get it back. Tempers of various people run extremely short, for no discernible reason. The sensitive time is past by evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Routine approaches are accumulated and you must improvise beyond a temporary snag, perhaps excitement. Endless talk fills the later hours.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Incidents, recent changes leave you no alternative but to strike out for a fresh venture or reorganize what you've had in progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): By putting recent lessons together, you probably have a successful new earning formula. Get to work, prove it in action. Pleasant distractions cut your day short.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Seek a better financial deal, higher reward for some what more advanced work. Take home a nice surprise for your loved ones.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Poverty May Help Colleges

We all know that sometimes what we consider to be a setback or a misfortune can be a blessing in disguise. This may turn out to be the case with the current poverty-status of the American college and university.

What we loosely refer to as "higher education" in America is going through a period of belt-tightening. Costs are rising, and income is dwindling. The colleges now have to decide what is essential to their operations, and what is not.

This situation provides a marvelous opportunity to reassess, and possibly get rid of, most of the fat that has accumulated on the academic body. This fat has little to do with education, or the learning process; indeed, it retards education, being a dead weight without muscle.

College in Europe is a serious and mature vocation. In the U.S., it has almost always been a combined baby-sitting service, recreational park, custodial institution, and sports palace. The university has tried to be so many different things to so many people that it has become nothing much to any of them.

As the contributions flowed in, more buildings were put up, and more stadia were erected, more schools and departments were added, more extracurricular functions were taken on, in a mere mania for size.

But this growth, in most cases, just made the colleges more musclebound. Administrative and bureaucratic needs came to be placed first, and the ancient idea of a college as a "community of scholars" got lost in the shuffle of real estate, corporate processes, computerized personnel, security services, and gigantic fund-raising campaigns.

Now, feeling their first financial pinch in 30 years, the colleges can do one of two things: trim off a little fat here and there, but keep the same basic contour; or go on a salubrious crash-diet that will permanently get rid of all the ugly non-academic blubber and leave more time, money and energy for the basic purpose of education.

The latter is really what the students are hollering about — they want a more meaningful, human, personalized education, in institutions that are geared for their needs as individuals. They don't want to be sent through a processing-plant like so many cattle, and stamped on the butt as "Certified Graduates" after four years, leaving no wiser (and considerably poorer) than when they entered.

Poverty permits us to make changes we are too indolent or self-satisfied to undertake when we are affluent; this is perhaps its most salutary effect. In the sacred name of "economy," the college could make a brave new start toward rediscovering education as its prime and noblest function.

They Want to Be Queen

Parley Failure Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday the federal - provincial constitutional conference next month in Victoria is "shaping up as a disaster."

He said western Canadian premiers have threatened to walk out if Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa does not agree to a formula to amend the constitution. And Ontario Premier William Davis has threatened "to stall progress on constitutional negotiations unless Ontario gets a bigger piece of the financial pie."

Speaking to the Carleton Liberal Association, Mr. Nixon said:

"The thinking people in Ontario today expect the government of Ontario not to engage in petty confrontation politics but to play a larger, more creative role in Victoria. Ontario must take the initiative to find a way out of this impasse."

Rather than carp on the net outflow of funds in the public sector, Ontario ought to reflect that it has enjoyed a trade surplus with the rest of Canada of about $2,600 million in recent years.

"We have done well by Confederation," he said.

"Of course I love you! It's just that I've been busy!"

Sadat Says U.S. Brings War Nearer

CAIRO (Reuter) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat blamed American support of Israel for spoiling Middle East peace efforts and Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny accused the U.S. of having a direct interest in the continuation of Israeli aggression in speeches Wednesday night.

The two leaders were speaking at a dinner given in Podgorny's honor which lasted into the early hours of this morning. They continue their private talks today.

Sadat said the U.S. backing for Israel was pushing the Middle East toward an explosion of inestimable consequences.

He said, however, Egypt had not rejected recent U.S. peace efforts.

"But we want everybody to know," he said, "that we shall not compromise, either as regards our territories or our rights in exchange for an empty mirage."

Canada, U.S. Near Accord

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada and the United States are understood to be nearing agreement on a drastic new program to save the Great Lakes from being choked by human and industrial pollution.

One source close to the negotiations has said the ultimate agreement could prove to be unique in the history of relations between nations, because of the extent of co-operation involved.

Although details of the proposals under study are being carefully withheld for now, informed sources indicate the final agreement between the two countries is likely to include:

—A significant expansion of the role of the International Joint Commission, giving it greater responsibility for detecting sources of pollution in the Great Lakes and the international section of the St. Lawrence River, as well as increased staff and equipment to cope with its expanded role.

—Improved means for either the IJC or individual governments to bring pressure to bear on other federal, state and municipal authorities so that the Great Lakes are cleaned up and kept clean.
